Dr. Cheatham tells us a rare story about a marriage that occurred recently near Brookston, to publish the particulars of which would be to spoil the beauty of it. In order to appreciate and enjoy it fully you must have him tell it to you. R. B. Hayes, manager of the Henderson Sheet Metal Works, is engaged on a big order for tobacco flues to be sent to a gentleman at Harrellsville, N. C. One always feels uncertain, when coming to a new place, whether or not he will win the favor of the public, which he is courting and trying to earn. In most kinds of business the rule is to be are right "up to date." Don't fail to enterprising and not wait until the stream comes to you. But what can an artist-who is not a peddler-do, but As capricious as she is charming, as advertise, hang out his samples and ask and suggest and find faults?

Where the interest for photographs has partially died out, as it will some times do in places, where you are accustomed to see the same work from year to year, done by the same artist, in the same gallery, it takes some time to arouse the public and bring about the feeling that you must have some pictures. But as long as the world does move they will be made. Mothers must have the children's and children must have the parents'. Good portraits are always admired, ornaments in any drawing room, and photography is a natural necessity of all commercial and scientific life. In the rush for the almighty dollar the artist, too often, cares not whether pleases his customers or not. We, who have travelled thousands of miles-sometimes on a rough up-hill road with but few roses by the wayside—who have made tens of thousands of photos, who have loved the sunny smiles of the European Eve, and studied and admired the magnificent grace of American daugters, from Newfoundland to Florida; from the Atlantic to the Pacific, we know, that the best way to fortune and fame-which always comes through trials and hardships-is to please your customer and give him the best of the bargain. In our gallery, over Dorsey's drug store, we are ready to give you the benefit of lessons learned during a busy life. But we have not come to stay always. Oh no! As the wheel of time rolls onward, we go too, and like the tide we waiteth for no man. Call on us. Our work will please you. ENGLE & LUND.

She Did Not Suffer. Three months before our first child my wife suffered so from cramps and pains she could not get in or out of the house without help, and was often in bed for two ar three days at a time. I obtained a bot-tle of "Mother's Friend," and after the first application the pain ceased. She continued to use the remedy and suffered no serious inconvenience until the hour of confinement-at which time she suffered but little pain—her recovery was rapid and complete—in fact, she suffered no pain after birth. One of the Sights Seen at a Great

Port of Entry. BALTIMORE, MD., April 30th, 1895. EDITOR GOLD LEAF.-It may be of interest to some of your readers to know of a peculiar instance that attracted my attention the other day. Casually strolling along the docks of a large seaport town, gazing at the fleet-footed worders of the sea, I noticed a large four-masted schooner lying at her dock. In general appearance she resembled all others of her class, with the exception that her mainmast was not surmounted by a topmast. husband and wife and no little interest myself dark rising clouds, heaving billows, and dashing spray. Suddenly the squall had struck her, before the man at the wheel could bring her head into the wind a sharp splintering crack, and to my imagination I could see her main topsail and topmast gone by the board and could hear the ringing orders from Being of an inquisitive turn of mind I thought I would go aboard, and see if the effect of a good Havana would not loosen the tongue of the bronzed old skipper to the extent of giving me a description of the storm, which he had evidently encountered. Immediately after having reached this conclusion I turned to take another look at her majesty arm of her brother Mr. W. H. Ward, of when, much to my surprise, a thin wreath Tarboro. The marrirge service was of smoke was seen curling upward, di rectly from the head of the mast. Hastly climbing aboard, I introduced myself to the skipper and after a hearty greet ing for which these old sea-going cartains are noted, I experessed my surprise at what I had seen and with a wave of amazement, a thick column of dense black smoke was seen issuing from the made from timber taken from the forests of our sister State, but the captain soon came to my relief and informed me that the main-mast was hollow, and contained an iron lining, which formed the smoke stack of her engines, which were used for loading and unloading her cargoes, and that the spread of her canvas was so extraordinarily large that the combined efforts of many men, could not handle them with the rapidity that was necessary on some occasions. On going below to her engine rooms also noticed that she was perfectly equipped with a small propeller, which I was told was used as an auxiliary power to her sails, so that in case of a calm she would lose none of her headway.
