London Cablegram, to New York Sun.) It has come to pass that Great Britian especially, and to some extent European diplomacy as a whole, no longer regards the Spanish-American crisis, the far Eastern crisis, and the West African crisis as separate distinct issues. These questions are now looked upon as interwoven factors in a political situation which threatens the peace of the world. The decision of the point whether this is a true view rests solely with President McKinley. His power and responsibility in shaping human destinies is greater at the present moment than has fallen to the lot of any man in this generation. There is danger that the attention of the American people may be too much concentrated upon the Cubangards these troubles as of little intrinsic interest as compared with the human race of the Titanic struggle interest: which threatens to involve all the nations of Europe and Asia. The worst outcome of the Spanish-Ameriing to gain except a sense of disagreeable duty faithfully performed. It is probably true that English public pinion is more well disposed than American toward an Anglo-Saxon ombination, but even this country is by no means unanimous in faver of such a consummation. The English view of the subject is not altogether selfish, for it is believed that the United States, with its rapidly expanding foreign trade, will profit fully as much as England by co-operation in keeping open the markets of the world. On the other hand with regard to immediate policy in China, there is probably some danger in retaliatory action by the continental powers in the Spanish-American controversy against the United States in case the latter supports Great Britain in the far East. Any such action, no doubt, would lead Great Britain openly to take the American side, but it is impossible to estimate

Africana,

The Sure Cure. Read the following:

I had been troubled for years bottles of your most excellent medicine, AFRICANA, which has about relieved me entirely, and I feel like a different man. My little daughter, eight years old, was greatly afflicted with sore eyes all her life, and less than one bottle of AFRICANA has affected apparently a per-manent cure. It affords me great pleasure to eccommend your most excellent medicine, the "AFRICANA" as a great relief to suffering humanity.
