DISGRACE TO CIVILIZATION. Retribution swift and terrible was visited upon a negro murderer and ravisher in Georgia last Sunday. Ten days before near Palmetto a white man named Alfred Cranford was murdered sitting at the supper table with his little family by one Sam Holt (alias Hose), a negro staying about the neighborhood. This done he choked the wife down and added a crime still deeper and a thousand times worse than death itself which had just been inflicted upon the hus-

The negro made his escape and the alarm was given. The people for miles around were stirred to the depths and moved as never before. Bodies of men scoured the country and blood hounds were brought into use. For a time it looked as if the negro had made good his escape when he was finally apprehended some distance away from the scene of his crimes from the minute description published in the Atlanta Constitution-In the mean time rewards aggregating $1,350 had been offered for his

When taken into custody Holt confessed his name but denied any knowledge of the crimes committed. He did not want to accompany his captors back to the scene from which he had fled and seemed terror stricken when told that he had for days been picture is painted of the ravisher in that of "Jessie Clark," the true hunted like a wild beast. On the way back he broke down and admitted having murdered Cranford, at the same time implicating a negro preacher named Lige Strickland, claiming that he had hired him to do the killing.

Holt was taken to Newman and not allowed to be used or displayed delivered to the sheriff of the county. As soon as it became known that the murderer-rapist had been caught a large crowd of outraged citizens soon collected, overpowered the sheriff. took the culprit away and lynched him, the details of which are sickening and revolting-as full of savage ence and respect for the flag-to cruelty and blood-thirsty fiendishness as the most barbarous of uncivilized natures could devise and gloat over.

First the victim was chained to a tree. Then his ears, fingers and toes were cut off-and his body otherwise mutilated. A brush heap was piled around him, and kerosene oil was poured on him from head to foot. A match was then applied and half an hour later Holt was a charred corpse.

Such was the spectacle presented in a civilized community, in the Empire State of the South, in the presence of 2,000 people. A more revolting spectacle has rarely cursed any community. That Sam Holt deserved to die after his guilt was clearly established (and he was fully identified in addition to his own confession) admits of no argument, nor indeed should there be any question as to the righteousness of his swift and summary taking off, but the mere act of putting him to death should have been sufficient. When the mob went beyond that they put themselves beyond the pale of even the quaisie sympathy of those who hold above all else the sacredness of female chastity and the protection of life. They added another chapter to the criminality and degradation of the State almost as black as that of the brutal and fiendish crimes committed by the negro.

Says the Durham Herald "There is no one institution that has given greater returns for the money invested than a graded school, and what is true in this town is true in many others. To a person familiar with the graded school and its benefits in Durham and other towns, it is surprising that people in places where there are no such institutions should show a lack of interest and enterprise in this direction."

The terrible expiation which Sam Holt was forced to pay for his crime will arouse a flood of discussion, carried on by those who know the facts on the one side, and by those who do not care for the facts on the other. The people of the community con-cerned, those who form its grand juries when in session and those who would have been on the petit juries as well, met on a peaceful Sunday afternoon and pronounced the sentence which they proceeded to execute. Not all the power of appeal of Judge Freeman nor the personality of former Governor Atkinson ould swerve the people from their

When the vivacious "Roxey," as did Miss Shaw picture of Mrs. Cranford outraged in Miss O'Neil as "Mrs. Jeremiah Potts," in make-up and acting could not well have been improved upon. Mr. Aronson was a fine comedian and played the part of "Fritz Poppenheimer" to perfection. Mr. Cooper did some good work in the character of "George Baker," and was as generous with his means as he was with his affections. Mr. Robert Powell essayed the role of "John Merrell" in a manner to make the most out of a difficult character, as did Mr. O'Neil colors may be used but not the flag, in that of "Pat McPhin," the policein miniature or otherwise.
