distinct. They were married with a Miss Olive Allen was organist assisted by Miss Lula Bobbitt. The music was a feature of the occasion. There was a large attendance the number of persons present from near and remote points attesting the popularity and esteem in which the contracting parties and immediate families are held.

Leaving the church the order of entrance was reversed. Miss Nettie Allen took the arm of Mr. J. M. Young and Miss Mary Macon that of Prof. Gill, each of the other young ladies going out with the gentlemen whose names theirs appear with as above. From the church the bridal party drove to town. At Mistletoe Villa, the palatial residence of Mrs. Annie E. Young, mother of the groom, a reception was held that night. The hours were from 8 until 12 and during that time a perfect stream of humanity came and went. No reception of the kind that we recall has been more largely attended. It was a brilliant scene that was presented. Although the night was extremely cold and disagreeable there was a glowing warmth within and such cordiality and hospitable entertainment that one soon forgot the privations endured. Upon entering the house the guests were ushered up stairs into warm apartments where wraps and top coats were removed.
