The earth has nourished us through unknown ages of human existence. Is it not hat the earth supplies us with everyng that we really require for existence? we you ever thought that it is probable the earth supplies us with the means erp our bodily vigor, our health, if we knew it? The animals know by inthe what is good for them and will search met what is good for them and will search until they find in some plant what they aged for correcting indigestion or constipation, etc. Is it, therefore, not possible that there are roots and herbs supplied by nature which will cure the diseases that afflict human kind? That is why Dr. Pierce, of heffalo, N. V., has such faith in his "Medal Discovery." Years ago, when he was a general and active practice, he found that a combination of certain herbs and nots made into an alterative extract, witht the use of alcohol, would always put the stomach into a healthy condition, nour-ish the tissues, feed the blood and nerves and put healthy tone into the whole

Lee with military heroes of the fightdrop of blood uselessly.

Our esteemed contemporary, the Petersburg Index-Appeal, takes us up on the statement that General Lee could have retreated into the mountains and kept up desultory warfare. 'We were there," says our contemoorary, "and we know that his estimate of the possibilities of either reaching the mountains or prolonging the struggle has no foundation in leading, and we thank our contemporary for its reminder. President was Gen. Grant had initiated on the previous day should be opened by a flag, with propositions for an interview to arrange the terms of been transerred to the front. Lee, now living in this city, that Maurice Smiley in Leslie's Magazine for Aug. if he had disbanded his army and told his men to scatter and reunite. as many of them as should be able, at some designated point in the mountains, thousands of them would have found their way to the place of rendezvous, and once in the mountains they could have carried on a

The main question under discussion in the original article was Gen. Lee's nobility as a man and the triumph of the man's nobility over the soldier's ambition. Gen. Lee was not the man to engage in guerrilla warfare when the cause for which he was fighting was lost, when the time for surrender had come. righteousness to quit fighting when further struggle was useless and could only result in the unnecessary sacrifice of human life. Our Petersburg contemporary concurs entirely in this

THE NOBILITY OF LEE.

Some time ago, in contrasting Gen. to-the-last-ditch variety, we said that he had always seemed to us grander at Appomattox than upon any occasion of his triumphs. That he knew that he could prolong the war; he knew that his men would stand by him until the last one had fallen; he knew that he could by retreating into the mountains keep up desultory fighting for a long time to come and so annoy and distress the enemy indefinitely. But that he saw that further struggle was useless; that the time for honorable surrender had come, and he was unwilling for his own military fame to sacrifice another eason or in fact."

Our statement was undoubtedly oo broad and was in a measure miso disperse them and continue the apitulation. Gordon, whose corps ormed the rear guard from Petersburg, and who had fought daily for he protection of the trains, had now replied: 'My old corps is reduced to a frazzle, and unless I am supported by Longstreet heavily I do not think we can do anything more.' When

Col. Venable returned with this answer to Gen. Lee he said: 'Then there is nothing left me but to go and see Gen. Gordon in his book confirms this report, adding that the "utmost ! that could be hoped for was that we might reach the mountains of Virginia and Tennessee with a remnant of the army and ultimately join Gen. Johnston." Of course it would not stances for Gen. Lee to march his entire army to the mountains of Vir-

They Should be Encouraged and Consulted With and Made to Feel an Interest and Pride in the Work They Do-It is Worth the Father's While to Talk With the Boys and Consult Them About Matters Pertaining to the Farm-How Farm Life May be Made Attractive to Them.

I wish to say a word about the boys on the farm, for from my own experience I think it far-reaching and of much importance. When I was a boy my father did have suggested some improvement. This, I think, is general with boys on the farm, and they feel like they have been ignored when not consulted about the work they are doing. I think it worth the father's while to talk to the boys about the work in which they are engaged. Get the boys' ideas about the work, ask them how they think such work should be done to the best advantage and talk it over with them, and when it is possible, take the suggestions of the boys and show them that you have regard for their opinions. This is one good way to get them interested in the work and make them feel and realize their worth to the place. Always explain to the boys why
