I am glad to have the chance of greeting the National Educational Association; for in all this democratic land there is furnishes a weak no more genuinely democratic association than this. It is truly democratic mich the blood and increase the because here each member meets every rouscles, Dr. Pierce years ago other member as his peer without regard to whether he is the president of one of the great universities or the newest recruit to that high and honorable profession which has in its charge the upbring ing and training of those boys and girls who in a few short years will themselves be settling the destinies of this nation. You teachers make the whole world your debter. If you did not do your work well this republic would not endure be- fury without argument. yond the span of the generation. Moreover, as an incident to your avowed workgenous body the children alike of those who are born fore and of those who com-acre from so many different lands abroad You furnish a common training and common ideals for the children of all the mixed peoples who are here being fused into one nationality. It is in no small degree due to you and your efforts that we are one people instead of a group of jar-prominence is given to the mere possess sion of wealth, the country is under heavy obligations to such a body as this, which substitutes for the ideal of accumulating money the infinitely loftler, non-material istic ideal of devotion to work worth doing simply for that work's sake. In do not in the least underestimate the need of having material prosperity as the basis of our civilization, but I most earnestly insist that if our civilization does not build a lofty superstructure on this basis we can never rank among the really great peoples. To furnish in your lives such a realized high ideal is to do a great service to the country. The chief harm done by the men of swollen fortune to the community is not the harm that the demagogue is apt to depict as springing from their actions, but the fact that their success sets up a ample for the rest of us. If we did not ourselves attach an exaggerated importance to the rich man who is distinguished only by his riches, this rich man would have a most insignificant influence over us. It is generally our own fault if he does damage to us, for he damages us chiefly by arousing our envy or by rendering as sour and discontented. In his actual business relations he is much more apt to benefit than to harm the rest of us; and though it is eminently right to take whatever steps are necessary in order to prevent the exceptional members of his class from doing harm, it is wicked foliy to let ourselves be drawn into any attack upon the man of wealth merely

Venomous envy of wealth is simply another form of the spirit, which in one of its manifestations takes the shape of cringing servility toward wealth, and in another shape of brutal arrogance on the part of certain men of wealth. Each one of these states of mind, whether it be mores tirand mountain scenery in Val- hatred, servility, or arrogance, is in realof Virginia, famed for health. European ity closely akin to the other two; for each of them springs from a fantastically twisted and exaggerated idea of the importance of wealth as compared to other things. The clamor of the demagogue against wealth, the snobbery of the social columns of the newspapers which deal with the doings of the wealthy, and the reisconduct of those men of wealth who act with brutal disregard of the rights of cilers, seem superficially to have no fundamental relation; yet in reality they spring from shortcomings which are fundarientally the same; and one of these shortcomings is the failure to have proper ideals This failure must be remedied in large part of the action of you and your felfellow-educators throughout this land. By your lives, no ess than by your teachings, you show that while you regard wealth as a good thing, you regard other things as still better. It is absolutely necessary to earn a certain amount of money; it is a man's first duty to those dependent upon him to earn money enough for their support:

but after a certain point has been a money-making can never stand on to of effort. The roll of American worthic rumbers men like Washington and Lin coin, Grant and Farragut, Hawthorm and Poe, Fulton and Morse, St. Galdens and MacMonnies; but of rich men is numbers only those who have used their riches aright, who have treated wealth not as an end, but as a means, who have shown good conduct in acquiring it and

Thrice fortunate are you to wnom i given to lead lives of resolute enderfor the achievement of lofty ideals, and furthermore, to instill, both by your liv and by your teachings, these ideals i the minds of those who in the next ger eration will, as the men and women that generation, determine the position which this nation will hold in the history of mankind

President Roosevelt then paid an appropriate and eloquent tribute to the life and services of the late secretary of state, John Hay. He followed this tribute with an estimate of After delivering his own address the the personal sacrifice Elihu Root had in either case president stayed in the auditorium to made in becoming Secretary Hay's our blood does not hear the responses by John R. The arrest followed the recovery of the child's body and identification by Anna Wicher, the mother. She said that Wicher left his home after a quarrel, saying: "I'll take care of this kid." According to the mother. Wicher objected to supporting the child and had lately been arrested on her complaint for failure

Suit to Recover Mrs.Chadwick's Jewels Cleveland, O., July 8.-Adrian H. Larkin, of New York, has sued C. F. Leach, collector of customs, in the United States court here to compel him to return certain of Mrs. Chadwick's jewels, which Mr. Larkin says were obtained from him wrongfully. According to Mr. Larkin's statement, he had the jewelry in his charge for J. W. Friend, of Pittsburg, who had a lien on it for certain money which he had loaned Mrs. Chadwick. He says that Mr. Leach took the jewels from him (Mr. Larkin) for the purpose of examination, but later sent them to this city, where a suit for forfeiture has been begun against Dynamite Under B. & O. Ties. New Castle, Pa., July 8. - Eight sticks of dynamite, with fuses attached, and wrapped in carpet, were found under the ties of the Reiber street crossing of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad. Recently the railroad company closed a bridge over the crossing, and as it was the only entrance to the Greer tin mills, the 1500 workmen appealed to councils to have it reopened, but nothing was done. The authorities are trying to locate the guilty parties.

MURDER UNEARTHED

and Buried Body in Cellar. Philadelphia, July 10. - With the back of the head crushed in, mutilated from head to foot, and several bones broken, the body of a woman known only as "Annie" was found buried in the cellar of a house in the northwestern part of the city, formerly the home of Charles Bluhn, a German, who died in a hospital on May 18. The police believe that Bluhm, who was separated from his wife, murdered the woman, who was his housekeeper, and buried the body in the cellar to hide the crime. A hole had been dug in the middle of the cellar, and a quantity of quicklime thrown in. The body was then placed in the hole and covered with earth.

When Bluhm's will was opned it was found that he left the little house to his wife. She and her mother decided to live in it, and they began to prepare it for occupation, as it was in a filthy condition. The two women detected an odor in the house, but did not pay much attention to it until they decided to get rid of it. In the cellar they found a small mound of earth and, believing that the husband had buried a dog or a cat there, they be gan to dig up the earth. Under the top layer was a piece of carpet, and under that they found the corpse. The women notified the police of their discovery. After an investigation the po-

Wilkesbarre, Pa., July 10 .- A murder and suicide occurred in Jackson township, a few miles from Plymouth. The victims were James J. Farrell, a wellknown resident of Plymouth, formerly assistant chief of police, and John Lee, formerly an engineer on the Delaware Lackawanna and Western Railroad. Farrell, accompanied by his two children, went over the mountain to visit a cousin named McNally. Another cousin, named John Lee, who had been an inmate of an insane asylum, but recently discharged as cured, suddenly took a fit of the old malady, and without any warning he rushed at the children with a razor, but they succeeded in getting away. Lee then discovered ( Farrell lying on the grass in the shade some distance away. He made a rush ind around, he took the same razor and cut his own throat. Both men died in-

All the killed and injured were laborers aside from Wiseman, whose body was terribly mangled. What could be found of it was identified by the fact that he dyed his hair. His scalp and a portion of his head was found on a hill, 200 yards from the blast. Wiseman has been with the Kerbaugh Company for five years, and had gone to the scene of the explosion to personally superintend the preparations for what is called a "big shot." A "big shot" consists of a series of blasts, the holes having been drilled in a row, and the charges being set off simultaneously by an electric spark. Five of the holes had been filled with powder, and the men were at work on the sixth when the explosion occurred.
