THE WHITE HOUSE WEDDING

Nuptials of Miss Alice Roosevelt and Representative Nicholas Longworth of Ohio in the East Room of the Executive Mansion on Feb. 17--The Groom and His Ancestors--Miss Roosevelt's Interesting Career--The Most Conspicuous Young Woman in the World--Preferred a Man Rather Than a Title--Her Piquant, Independent and Vivacious Personality position for her work. Her brother was Nicholas Longworth, father of our Nicholas. Many stories are told of this elder Nick. He was a judge of the Ohio supreme court and was noted for his exceeding gravity. So marked, indeed, was his solemnity that a woman of his acquaintance named her pet owl "Judge Longworth." When the real Judge Longworth was once visiting in her home the entire company was started, not to say embarrassed, by having a maid burst into the room in great excitement with the shrill announcement, "Madame! Madame!" Judge Longworth laid an egg.

blue home Miss Alice has always been popular. The older people cherish her for the sake of her mother, Alice Lee, for whom she was named, and the younger people for her own sake. Wherever she has been--at New York, Boston or Washington--she has ever drawn to her a large number of girl friends, and after she became the cynosure of the world's eyes she yet clung to these companions of her youth. To them she shows her most vivacious and winning side, does acrobatic stunts and skirt dances for their amusement, sings songs and makes herself generally so lively that there are no dull moments in her vicinity.

Let it be said to the honor of Miss Roosevelt that she decided to marry a man rather than a title. That the man is an American is all the better. After the presence of so many of our heiresses to princes, dukes, counts and other workings with noble nicknames this is a grateful variation. This is an age of men, not of titles; of deeds, not of rewards. In America this is especially true, for ours is a land of men and of deeds, and it is well that the daughter of a president who is himself so democratic should thus honor the genius of her country.

Yet high society in Washington long predicted that the daughter of the White House would wed a title. Rumor in that city of rumors has it that there is not an unmarried titled member of any foreign legation at the national capital that has not his dedication on her. Heedless of the castles of Europe are full of more of the sort. Then there is Asia. She might have been sultana of Sulu. True, she denied that story about the sultan of many wives offering her his hand and the upper left-hand corner of his heart, but officers of the Taft party insist that the proposal actually took place. It is too good a tale to be snuffed out by a mere denial. Why spoil so exciting a romance by the prosy statement that it is not a fact?

Washington rumor also says--but what does it not say?--that Congressman Longworth had to propose seven times before he was finally accepted. There is a man after our own heart. He deserves her. All the world loves a lover, and especially a lover who knows what he wants and will not take no for an answer. Lucky seven! The myth number that has been sung by oriental poets and is held in reverence by people even farther west. Never did it turn the trick in a better cause. That nation, dependent on a man, such a "spoiling of the question" by a persistent lover, shall be a happy one. One other thing is there that should not be overlooked. Mr. Longworth--the Hon. Nicholas Longworth--to whom be all honor for his good taste, lucid and persevering habits from Ohio. Does that not solve the riddle? The state that gave to the world a Grant, a Sherman and a Sheridan; where were born a Stanton, a Howells and an Edison; that was the home of one Harrison and the birthplace of another; that has two homes at home and birthplace of three other presidents; the state of Corwin, Giddings, Chase, Thurman and Taft--to say nothing of Hanna, John Sherman and Rockefeller! There are people who have gone so far as to say that the only girl worth marrying is one who can at least afford a Buckeye son-in-law. He can have the state related to him by matrimony if not by maternity.

As for Nick Longworth, as he is familiarly called by everybody about town, he is a thoroughbred. More-over, he has wealth, birth, position, education, social distinction and all those things prized by certain classes of people, but withal he possesses the more fundamental qualities of manliness, independence, intellectual stamina and uprightiness that are esteemed by every one. His family has been a leading one about Cincinnati since the beginning of the nineteenth century. He has two homes at Cincinnati and Washington, he is a thoroughbred. More-over, he has wealth, birth, position, education, social distinction and all those things prized by certain classes of people, but withal he possesses the more fundamental qualities of manliness, independence, intellectual stamina and uprightiness that are esteemed by every one.

Mr. Longworth also has a great-grandfather, but perhaps he would not point to this forbear with so much pride, that worthy having been a Tory at the time of the American Revolution. As a result of his sympathies with George III., his lands near New Ark, N. J., were confiscated. This fact caused the great-grandfather, another Nicholas Longworth, by the way, to emigrate to Cincinnati in 1833, when he was twenty-one years of age. He became a lawyer and took the defense of a horse thief for his first case. As a fee he received two copper whisky stills, which he traded for thirty-three acres of land, then in the woods, but now in the very heart of the city. Before he died the land was valued at $2,000,000. He also went in debt to the tune of $2,000 to buy an old pasture lot and was sharply reproved by one of his friends for his extravagance. He lived to see that land worth nearly as much as the other. He took up his abode and made it his home. He was a painter and a collector of art. He was a painter and a collector of art. He was a painter and a collector of art.

There is another story to the effect that on a wager Nick Longworth drove a golf ball through the streets of Cincinnati, though he had to pay for some broken windows as a result of the escapade. Relative to his love for music, it is stated that George Ward Nichols, an uncle, founded the Cincinnati conservatory and also started the famous musical festivals. Judge Nicholas Longworth also gave freely to promote these enterprises, and the donations have been continued by the son. A friend has said of the popular congressman that "Nick is one of the best amateur violinists in Cincinnati." It is not generally known that he spent several years abroad studying music, but such is the fact. He was a pupil of the celebrated Ysaye, from whom he has many letters and one of whose violins he owned. Later he traded this instrument and another almost equally expensive for a $10,000 Stradivarius, paying $3,000 to boot. He attends all the best musical concerts and is an enthusiast on the divine art. In appearance the prospective son-in-law of the president is rather above medium height, of an athletic build and an easy, quick and graceful carriage. His face seems rather long, which effect is lightened by an abnormally high forehead, partially due to baldness. This gives an intellectual cast to a countenance whose features, while regular and handsome, are not especially distinctive. In manner he is not offensive, but cheery and cordial. He is a good story teller and a hail fellow with everybody. He is cautious about going into new enterprises, but once in he brings the whole energy of his character to whatever he has to do.

Mr. Longworth's Cincinnati home is a square, old-fashioned mansion, half hidden in vines and called Lookwood. It is situated on the Grandin road and is surrounded by ample grounds beautified by the highest art of a landscape gardener. The house itself of which Alice Roosevelt is to be the future mistress contains rare paintings and art collections, the music room being especially notable.

was not at Prince Henry or the assembled thousands, but at the familiar face beside her, and the answering look of Theodore Roosevelt showed that he understood. At another time Miss Roosevelt left the senate gallery in high indignation because Senator Carmack of Tennessee had spoken in criticism of the president. It was an impulsive act that would not have been done by one more trained in the ways of the world, but it revealed what was in the girl's heart.

Alice Roosevelt's trip to the far east was the climax of her girlhood. Prior to that time she had visited Cuba and Porto Rico, where she received popular avocations. New Orleans, where she was shown a woman in that proud city, and the St. Louis exposition, where she became at once the chief attraction of the show. As a member of Secretary Taft's party he had digital dunes dwarfed even that of the gigantic Taft himself, while the senators, representatives and other high dignitaries were scarcely one-two-three in the popular estimation. In Hawaii and the Philippines she was shown almost royal honors, while in Japan she was received by the mikado and in China by the empress dowager. Her honeymoon trip to Europe, which will be taken next summer after the congressional session, is practically over, will complete her trip around most of the world. Until that time the newly married couple will remain for the most part in Washington. The wedding itself will easily eclipse any social event that has ever occurred in the White House. The nuptials will be celebrated in the historic east room, and light Rev. Henry V. Satterlee of Washington will officiate.

There have been many similar ceremonies witnessed in the executive mansion, the last one being that of the marriage of President Grover Cleveland to Miss Frances Folsom, twenty years ago. The one most nearly approaching the present affair, however, was the wedding of Nellie Grant to Abraham Kortoris. It is the only other marriage ever celebrated in the east room. The home life of Grant was much like that of the present occupant of the White House, and the heart of the silent man was wrapped up in his daughter. One of the unexpected parts of that brilliant event was the presence of some uninvited guests in the persons of little Jesse Grant's baseball nine, the ragged urchins creating both amusement and consternation by dodging about among the swell guests. Prior to the civil war there were a number of White House weddings. The first one was that of a relative of Mrs. Dolly Madison, who was quite a social leader in her day and made the event a gala occasion. During President Monroe's regime his daughter, Maria, was married in the blue room to her cousin, Samuel I. Gouverneur of New York. Only a few invited guests were present. Six years afterward John Adams, son of President John Quincy Adams, was wedded to his cousin, Miss Helen Jackson, the ceremony occurring in the White House. Two weddings occurred during Jackson's incumbency of the office, one of a niece of the president and the other of the daughter of an old friend, Presley Van Buren's son, was married while his father was in office, but the event did not occur in the executive mansion.

The most brilliant of the early White House weddings was that of the daughter of President John Tyler to the late Virginia executive, and Virginia hospitality was the order of the day. President Tyler himself was married a second time while in office, but not in Washington. Now one more event, the most remarkable of the list, is to gladden the home of America's chief of state. Both on his account and for the sake of his sensible daughter the American people enter into the joy of the occasion.

More than half mankind over fifty years of age suffer from kidney and bladder troubles, usually enlargement of prostate gland. This is both painful and dangerous, and Foley's Kidney Cure should be taken at the first sign of danger, as it corrects irregularities and cures many old men of this disease. Mr. Rodney Barnett, Rock Port, Mo., writes: "I suffered with enlarged prostate gland and kidney trouble for years and after taking two bottles of Foley's Kidney Cure I feel better than I have for 20 years although I am now 91 years old." The Seaboard Air Line has leased thirty miles of railroad iron to the Fosberg Lumber Company, to run a standard gauge road from Vaughan in Warren county, to some point near the line between this and Halifax counties. The lease was recorded in the register's office this week, and covers five pages (type written) of the record. It provides that when the lumber company gets through with the iron the same shall revert to the Seaboard Air Line--Louisburg Times.

Two bottles of Electric Bitters have made me so strong I have just walked three miles in 50 minutes and feel like walking three more. It has made a new man of me."
