NO MAN IS STRONGER THAN HIS STOMACH.
 Let the greatest athlete have dyspepsia and his muscles would soon fail. If a man has insufficient food he loses strength. If he has too much food he loses strength. If he has no food he loses strength. Food is converted into nutrition through the stomach and bowels. It depends on the strength of the stomach to what extent food is digested and assimilated. People can be starved to death by an abundant food to eat, when the stomach and its associate organs of digestion and nutrition do not perform their duty. Thus the stomach is really the vital organ of the body. If the stomach is "weak" it will be weak in all its several members and organs. So the weakness of the stomach is a consequence of "weak" stomach. It will be distributed among the organs which compose the body. If the stomach is weak because of ill-nourishment, giving rise to indigestion, it will have weak nerves, feeble or irregular action of heart, palpitation, dizziness, headache, backache and kindred disturbances and weaknesses.

Mr. Louis Pate, of Quebec, writes: "For years after my health began to fail, my head grew dizzy, eyes pained me, and my stomach was sore. All the time I was eating, I would eat and would not be heavy like lead on my stomach. One day I was told that it was sympathetic trouble due to dyspepsia, and proceeded to take a medicine which I took regularly but I felt no better. My wife advised me to take a bottle of Dr. F. J. Perry's medicine, and after taking the doctor's medicine I bought me a bottle and took it. I took on flesh, my stomach became normal, the digestive organs worked perfectly and I soon began to look like a different man. I am now a healthy man and I am grateful for what your medicine has done for me and I certainly give it highest praise. Don't be wheedled by a penny-grabbing dealer into taking inferior substitutes for Dr. F. J. Perry's medicine, recommended to be just as good."

Makes Good Showing.
North Carolina's Progress as Shown by the Nineteenth Annual Report of the Commissioner of Labor and Printing.
 Richmond Times-Dispatch.
 We have received from Hon. H. B. Varner, commissioner, the nineteenth annual report of the Bureau of Labor and Printing of the State of North Carolina. The first chapter is devoted to the progress of agriculture, and the commissioner says that it is refreshing to note the marked improvement along agricultural lines in North Carolina during recent years.

"Farming," says he, "has, indeed, come to a great and gratifying industry; a science and not a mere process. Improved methods are being rapidly introduced, and the drudgery of ancient times is now only a memory in the mind of the Tar Heel agriculturist. The increased demand for the product of the farm has rendered the introduction of modern methods an absolute necessity, and given a new impetus to the farming industry in the State. The campaign of education begun a few years ago is growing in interest and magnitude. The realization that a more extended knowledge of agriculture itself was needed led to a spirit of investigation, which is lifting this important industry out of the old ruts and placing it upon a modern basis. Farmers are becoming educated, and an increasing interest in the preparation of their sons for the fields of broad acres that now lie out before them."

Agriculture lies at the basis of all industry and prosperity, and as agriculture in North Carolina is prospering, it follows as a corollary that other branches of industry are prospering also. The report shows that in the year 1905 there were 212 cotton mills, with a capital of $57,413,418, employing 36,356 hands, besides 903 officials, clerks, etc., with an output valued at $47,254,054. This exhibit is all the more impressive when compared with that of 1900. In that year there were 177 mills, with a capital of $14,000,000, employing 200,000 persons, and with a total output of $142,520,776. The percentage in increase over 1900 in capital is 106 and in output, 67.

The report also shows that North Carolina is making great progress in education. Dr. Varner, who is an editor, devotes one chapter to North Carolina newspapers. The report shows there are ten morning dailies, twenty evening dailies and one hundred and seventy-four weeklies. North Carolina has some of the best daily newspapers in the South, and there is no State, we think, which can show a larger number of able and progressive weekly papers. The joint meeting last year of the North Carolina and Virginia editors was so agreeable that another such meeting will be held this year, and the two associations will have a summer outing together. A most cordial relationship has thus been established between the press in the two States, which we believe is agreeable to the North Carolina brethren.

But we digress. Mr. Varner devotes one chapter to "The Resort Industry of North Carolina," in which he enumerates the various summer and winter resorts of the State, and also shows what they are worth in dollars and cents to his State. He has done wisely to advertise this feature, and we renew our suggestion that Virginia possesses unsurpassed attractions as a summer and winter resort, and if they were properly advertised, it would be a most profitable business in all seasons could be materially increased to their pleasure and to our profit.

We congratulate North Carolina upon the splendid exhibit which the commissioner has made, and we congratulate our Brother Varner on his splendid work.

The tar that is contained in Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar is harmless. It is not coal tar, but is obtained from the pine trees of our own native forests. Bee's Laxative Honey and Tar is the best remedy for colds because it acts on the bowels—thus expelling all colds from the system. Bee's is the original Laxative Honey and Tar, and is best for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough, lung and bronchial affections. Sold by the Kerner-McNair Drug Company.

Little Boy Blue.
 Baltimore News.
 To Editor of Woman's Inquiry Column:
 Among the poets of America, none equaled along certain lines, Eugene Field, and no one of his efforts ever came as near to the hearts of those who loved the beautiful and sublime as his "Little Boy Blue." When he died Mrs. Sarah B. Kennedy of Memphis, Tenn., wrote the enclosed "With Little Boy Blue," and thinking many of the News' readers would be glad to get the two poems, I write to ask that you reproduce "Little Boy Blue" and "With Little Boy Blue," that we may have them together.

W. B. LITTLE BOY BLUE.
 BY EUGENE FIELD.
 The little boy dog is covered with dust,
 But sturdy and staunch it stands.
 The little toy soldier is red with rust,
 And the musket molds in his hands.
 Time was when the little toy dog was new
 And the soldier was passing fair,
 And that was the time our Little Boy Blue
 Kissed them and put them there.

"Now, don't you go until I come," he said,
 But sturdy and staunch it stands.
 So he toddled off to his trundle bed
 To dream of the pretty toys.
 And now he is dreaming an angel song
 Awakened our Little Boy Blue.
 Oh! the years are many, the years are long,
 But the little toy friends are true.

Each faithful to Little Boy Blue they stand,
 Each in the same old place.
 Awaiting the touch of a little hand,
 A smile of a little face.
 And they wonder as waiting the long years
 Through.

In the dust of that old chair,
 What has become of our Little Boy Blue?
 Since he kissed them and put them there.

WITH LITTLE BOY BLUE.
 BY MRS. SARAH B. KENNEDY.
 Silent he watched them, the soldier and dog,
 The toy on the little arm chair,
 Keeping their trust through the slow-going
 Years.

For the hand that stationed them there,
 And he said that perchance the dust and the rust
 Hid the griefs that the toy friends knew,
 And his heart watched with them all the dark years.

Yearning ever for Little Boy Blue,
 Three mourners they were for Little Boy Blue—
 Three the cold winds had begun;
 Now two are left watching—the soldier and dog,
 And the grief that the vigil is done.
 For him, too, the Angel has chanted a song,
 A song that is lulling and true—
 He has gone to the white gates of the Mansions
 Of Rest.

Through with his Little Boy Blue,
 God send that the Angel of Death for his soul—
 Not the Reaper that cometh for all,
 But out of the shadows that curtain the day
 He heard his lost little one call.
 Heard his voice that he loved, and following fast
 Passed on to the far-away Strand—
 And he walks the streets of the City of Peace
 With Little Boy Blue by the hand.

The Sentiment of Patriotism.
 Sanford Express.
 New York is a big city and it is said that at the rate it is now growing and expanding it will in a few years be larger than the great city of London. However, this was not what we started out to talk about. We note from the New York Sun that the Tennessee Society of New York, recently gave a dinner, and had as one of its speakers Mr. Ralph H. Holland, president of the North Carolina Society. The people from many of the States—probably all the States—will make New York their home have their society. They meet together to learn more of each other and to discuss their earlier days, all of which stimulates their patriotism and love of their native land. There may be some people in New York and other large cities from the South who are not proud that they are from North Carolina, or some other Southern State, but let us hope they are few in number. In his speech Mr. Holland says, among other things, "I have no objection to a man rarely loses his interest in the things and the people that were his in his earlier days. I know two or three men who wish to disclaim connection with any community outside New York, and apparently are not interested in the affairs of the soil that produced them. I do not believe that even in these cases the impulse has disappeared, but they belong to the army of climbers, and they think they can climb faster by concealing the best asset they possess. I believe they make a mistake, for there is no sentiment of the heart that commands such universal respect and love as that of patriotism and loyalty to one's native land. A man who loses this, loses the best part of his nature. Some men overdo it. The profession of patriotism is tedious, but the sentiment itself is splendid."

Splendidly said. A few weeks ago when Governor Glenn spoke at Southern Pines he declared that while he loved every foot of soil embraced in the Union, yet there was one spot in one State that was a little dearer to him than any other place, and that spot was his old home in Rockingham County, North Carolina. All around the Governor were grouped men and women of Northern birth, and it is needless to say that they applauded to the echo, the expression of this sentiment. At that moment they were not thinking of the flag and the Union, whose glory and strength they but each was thinking about the old home in Massachusetts, or Pennsylvania, or some other Northern State and each was a better North Carolinian because of his or her love of the old home. If a man is a man, he will always have a kind of reverence for the old home. This is the reason many a man who goes away and climbs treacherous and buys it back after it has passed out of the hands of his people.

A dose of Pine-oles at bed time will usually relieve headache, before morning. These beautiful little globules are soft gelatine coated and when moistened and placed in the mouth you can't keep from swallowing them. Pine-oles contain neither sugar nor alcohol—just gums and resins obtained from our own native pine forests, combined with other well known bladder, kidney and backache remedies. Sold by the Kerner-McNair Drug Company.

An Eastern shore farmer informs us that he finds the free-seed packages and the bundles of public documents sent him by his congressman equally valuable. Both go into the waste pile.—Norfolk Virginian-Pilot.

Our experience with the free seeds is that they are about as profitable put in the waste pile as they are put in the ground. Few of them ever come up. Fact is the free seed business is a rank fraud upon the Government and the people—who get them.

Bishops Elected.
 Dr. James Atkins of the Western North Carolina Conference One of the Three New Methodist Bishops Elected at Birmingham.
 Birmingham, Ala., May 17.—Dr. John J. Tigert, secretary of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was today elected a bishop on the first ballot taken by the Conference. No other bishop was elected on the first ballot. The count of ballots showed the vote on the first ballot to be: J. J. Tigert, 160; J. C. Kilgo, 100; Seth Ward, 85; Collins Denny, 84; W. E. McMurray, 74; James Atkins, 70; E. F. Tillett, 58; W. B. Murray, 54; E. W. Anderson, 24.

These were the leaders, with scattering votes for 48 others. Dr. Tigert at once resigned as Secretary of the Conference, and Assistant Secretary A. E. Watkins was elected secretary. There was no election of a bishop on the second ballot.

At the afternoon session of the Conference, ballots, numbered four, five and six, were taken for the third bishop to be elected by the present Conference, but no result following. A recess was taken until evening, when the contest was renewed. One hundred and thirty-seven votes being necessary to a choice, no one was chosen during the afternoon. The strength of 116 votes for Dr. J. C. Kilgo on the fifth ballot was the nearest approach to a decision that was reached.

Dr. James Atkins, Sunday school editor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was elected bishop to night on the twelfth ballot.

Dr. James Atkins, one of the three bishops elected last night by the General Conference of the M. E. Church, South, is a member of the Western North Carolina Conference and has been Sunday school editor of the Church since 1896. He was born at Knoxville, Tenn., April 18, 1850, being a son of Rev. James Atkins, for many years a member of the Holston Conference. He was educated at Emory, Va., of which institution he was president for four years, 1889-93. He entered the Methodist ministry in 1872 as a member of the Holston Conference, holding pastorates from 1872 to 1879, when he became president of Emory and Hendrix Colleges in 1889 and remained there until 1896 when he was elected Sunday school editor. His home is at Waynesville, N. C.

Rev. Dr. John James Tigert, last night elected a bishop of the M. E. Church, South, by the General Conference in session at Birmingham, Ala., is book editor of the Southern Methodist Church and editor of the Quarterly Review, having been elected to these positions in 1894. He was born in Louisville, Ky., November 25, 1856. He was educated at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tenn., graduating in 1877. From 1881 to 1889 he was professor of moral philosophy in Vanderbilt University. From 1890 to 1894 Dr. Tigert held an important pastorate in Kansas City, Mo. Dr. Tigert is the author of quite a number of books, the number of his being "Handbook of Logic," "Theology," "A Voice from the South," Constitutional History of American Episcopal Methodism" and others. He resides at Nashville, Tenn.

CARDINAL INVITATION
 ADDRESSED TO WORKING GIRLS
 Miss Barrows Tells How Mrs. Pinkham's Advice Helps Working Girls.
 Girls who work a re particularly susceptible to female disorders, especially those who are obliged to stand on their feet from morning until night in stores or factories.

Day in and day out I have to stand on my feet, and she is often the bread-winner of the family. Whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, she must go to work and perform her duties, and she is often the bread-winner of the family. Whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, she must go to work and perform her duties, and she is often the bread-winner of the family. Whether she is sick or well, whether it rains or shines, she must go to work and perform her duties, and she is often the bread-winner of the family.

Among this class the symptoms of female diseases are early manifest by weak and aching backs, pain in the lower limbs and lower part of the stomach. In consequence of frequent sitting or standing for long periods, the female organism which can be easily and promptly cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Miss Abby F. Barrows, Nelsonville, Athens Co., Ohio, tells what this great medicine did for her. She writes: "Dear Mrs. Pinkham—It is my duty to tell you the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I was very nervous, had headaches, pains in back, and periods were irregular. I had seen several doctors, and they did me no good. Your medicine has made me well and strong. I can do much more work without complaint, and my periods are all right. I am, I believe, better than I ever was, and I know it is all due to your remedies. I recommend your advice and medicine to all who suffer."

It is to such girls that Mrs. Pinkham holds out a helping hand and extends a cordial invitation to correspond with her. She writes, often in plain language, the letters of advice of untold value to every ailing working girl. Address, Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass.

Insurance Companies on Trial.
 Raleigh Times.
 Even if it means that some of them will be forced to suspend it is hardly a time for fire insurance companies to quibble about the payment of losses in San Francisco. There are conflicting reports as to the extent of the damage just as there are different statements as to the ability of all concerns to stand the shock. In disaster of this character it generally is preferable that the number of fire policies increase enormously and the public, which is always discriminating is apt to seek protection with companies which show the most liberal and the most generous spirit in dealing with their patrons.

The New York Sun, which is an authority on most subjects, says that it is practically agreed in business circles that at least fifteen of the smaller concerns will have to retire altogether after paying their San Francisco losses, and that two or three of the American companies will fail altogether and go into the hands of receivers without paying any of the outstanding claims in the stricken city. "If any company is unable to continue business because of this conflagration," says an insurance officer to the Sun, "it will be futile for it to try to stave off the inevitable by fighting the claims on earthquake technicalities. Any company doing that in the face of the present suffering on the Pacific coast will be as completely ruined by public contempt as if every dollar of its assets had gone out." That, of course, is the correct view, and its effect will be a determination on the part of every company to meet the issue squarely if it expects to write fire policies hereafter.

Fire insurance is absolutely essential in any business. The amounts paid to the losers in San Francisco will give them a start and it will help to rebuild the city. It is a protection which all of us must have. There are ignorant teachers and leaders who contend that the accumulation of millions of dollars as a surplus fund by the fire underwriters is dangerous when common sense ought to convince them that the only safety of vice which all of us must have. There are ignorant teachers and leaders who contend that the accumulation of millions of dollars as a surplus fund by the fire underwriters is dangerous when common sense ought to convince them that the only safety of vice which all of us must have.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING.
 Raleigh Merchants' Journal.
 After studying the science and art of advertising you will conclude that the newspaper is the only desirable advertising medium. The relationship that a reliable, up-to-date newspaper sustains to merchants and the people generally is one of mutual benefit. The newspaper acts as an introducer for the business interests of the country to the people. It places the advertiser, with whatever he wishes to say about his business, in the homes of the best people. It carries with it a recommendation that is most valuable. The people who read the newspapers have confidence in the advertisers. Perhaps you object to newspaper advertising because you have heard of it thought, or some of them are under the impression that it is too expensive. Right here you are wrong. Advertising in the newspapers is the least expensive of all forms of advertising.
