Lieutenant John S. E. Young Visits Golden Gate City and Writes of Ruin Wrought by Earthquake Pen to Describe.

Jefferson Barracks, Mo.,

May 24th, 1906. EDISOR GOLD LEAF: You have, no doubt, heard and seen many reports of the San Francisco disaster, all to the effect that it was awful and a catastrophe that is unsurpassed by any other sudden, violent change of recent years. There is no paper report, nor one rendered from mouth to ear that can fully and graphically describe the horrors of this great calamity. There is only one way of Francisco, and that is by seeing it in all of its nakedness, buildings razed to the ground, in its dependency, and just released from the twisting, writhing grasp of some unknown power that terrorizes human beings to the extent of rendering them absolutely scattering debris everywhere. helpless and freezes the marrow in one's bones.

On the 11th of April last, orders the Presidio of Monterey, California, a number of recruits, aggregating 72, to the 20th Infantry and Troop F., 14th Cavalry, stationed thereat, and recently from the Philippines for a sojourn of a few yeras in their native country, and as they thought, away from all unseen, seismic forces; but hardly had they arrived at this new station ere this dreadful shaking
