

Think More—Spend Less.

Why is it that the average man is worth so much less in money and property than we have a right to expect him to be? It isn't because he doesn't make the money, for the average man is industrious and has earned from $10,000 to $50,000 in the past ten years. It is because he doesn't give much serious thought either to his income or outgo.

Capt. W. R. Horton returned last week from Charleston where he went to see his son, Jim, who is laid up in a hospital there as a result of his injuries received in a collision on the Atlantic Coast Line about three weeks ago, when he was terribly hurt and Engineer Johnson (a native of Halifax county and son of the late Col. Willis Johnson) was killed. Mr. Horton was badly scalded, his shoulder broken and his skull fractured, but was getting on very well at last accounts. The accident was due to an open switch. Engineer Horton who was pulling a freight going in on the main line was run into by a passenger train in charge of Engineer Johnson.

Death of Mr. Phil D. Hawkins. Mr. Phil D. Hawkins, formerly of Henderson, and son of the late Madison Hawkins of this place, died in Greensboro Friday night, aged 39 years. Brain concussion was the cause of death, resulting from a fall which he sustained in his store Thursday night. The Greensboro Industrial News contains the following: The deceased was born in Louisa, Va., January 16, 1877. At the age of twelve he was employed by the Southern Railway Company at Henderson, as messenger, at which place he worked for six years. He was then transferred to Oxford, N. C., at the age of eighteen and was rapidly promoted from time to time until he was made cashier and then agent, at which place he stayed for ten years. He was later transferred to Hillsboro where he was agent for one year, and on account of the delicate condition of his mother's health, he resigned his position with the Railway Company and moved to Greensboro and went into the mercantile business. He was a most noble young man, making friends and with whom he came in contact and all that knew him felt the loss of a true and loyal friend. He leaves a heart-broken wife, mother, four sisters and two brothers.

The Mission of a Dollar.

Of the mission of a dollar an exchange says this: The chief and true use of money is to keep active the currents of trade. The mission, therefore, of every dollar coined or printed is to make a purchase of something to the amount of its own value, or discharge some monetary obligation to the extent of its value. Whoever, therefore, hoards money simply for the sake of doing it for the pleasure of possessing it, diverts it from its true and proper course, and so far clogs the wheels of progress of the people and the community in which he lives. According to the claims of scientists when an apple or an acorn falls from the tree to the ground, the earth rises to meet it from its true and proper relative sizes of the apple and the earth. To be sure, this is a very small movement on the part of the earth, but it counts that much in the realm of science. So one dollar is a small part of the currency of the country, but when it is hoarded and thus turned out of its proper channel it bears its share toward clogging the wheels of progress. Suppose one dollar is hoarded a year, no one perhaps will feel directly the loss of its circulation; but if a million or ten million are hoarded for that time the effect would be apparent. What we have said of a hoarded dollar is equally true of the dollar that is withheld from paying an honest debt. And after all, the paying of debts is the most important consideration is the mission of a dollar. If Mr. A will pay his dollar debt on Monday morning and in turn Mr. B will at once pay his dollar debt with what he collects from Mr. A and this goes on, there is no telling the good that dollar will do in a week. Moral: Pay your just debts and other folks can do the same.

MOTHERS READ THIS DAUGHTER OF C. W. STUMP. Mrs. C. W. Stump of Canton, Ohio, writes: "I wish I could induce every mother who has a weak, sickly child to try that delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol. Our little daughter was pale, thin and sickly. We tried various medicines, but without any benefit whatever, and she could not take cod liver oil or emulsions, as they nauseated her and upset her stomach. Learning that Vinol contains all the medicinal and strengthening properties of cod liver oil, but without the disagreeable oil, we decided to try it, and the results were marvelous, so quickly was she restored to health and strength. We have never sold a medicine equal to Vinol for delicate children. W. W. PARKER, Druggist
