Too Little Value Placed on Human Life.

Wilmington Messenger.

What authority to allow bail has the coroner, in a case where a jury summoned by him to investigate a homicide finds that a certain person did the killing but does not declare that there were any extenuating or mitigating circumstances connected with the accusation of the accused? Where the killing is shown to have occurred under circumstances which indicate it to be a case of murder in the first or in second degree he has no power to do any thing more than issue a commitment for the accused. Does the law give him the right to grant the accused the privilege of bail in such cases? Is not such proceeding solely within the jurisdiction of the judges of the superior and of the supreme courts, who can determine by a hearing on a writ of habeas corpus whether it is a bailable case or not?

The Revisal of 1905 section 1051 declares that "as many persons as are found culpable" by inquisition of the coroner's jury "shall be taken and delivered to the shariff and committed to jail," and the same section provides for the coroner making a report of his proceedings "to the next term of the superior court." Can the coroner do anything but send to jail or discharge?

Admitting, however, that there is a law for the coroner fixing the amount of bail for a person found by his jury to be culpably responsible for the death of another he should have regard to the nature of the homicide and fix the bond in a sum in keeping with the character of the offense. That being so, does it not strike our readers that twenty-five hundred dollars is a very small bond to require in a case where the victim was shot down without provocation; in fact, the exposition grounds on a specialwhile acting in the capacity of a peace maker? We feel sure that most persons who heard the evidence before the coroner's jury in this city last Friday or who read it in the papers vesterday, were surprised to learn that bail had been fixed for the person charged with that crime at the transforming the current for the arc hundred dollars.

attractions as the great army and navy rendezvous, the international submarine races and the air ships contests at the Jamestown Exposition will be the magnificent electrical illumination and display. Electricity will be the most important factor throughout the exposition. The grounds will be dazzling under the brilliant light of thousands of electric lights. The illumination of the greatest harbor in the world will surpass anything of its kind ever attempted. Thousands of small craft, hundreds of large ships and steamers and the huge men-of-war will be gay with many-colored lights, and powerful electrical searchlights will streak the heavens over Hampton Roads. It is expected that the electrical illumination of this exposition will even surpass the wonderful effects obtained at the Pan-American. In no other industrial field in the world have there been such strides in the past few years as in electricity. Visitors will be shown the very latest inventions and discoveries in wireless telegaphy, wireless telephony, electrical heating and power. Their hunger will be satisfied with food cooked in electrical utensils; they will be shown hundreds of new moter-driven labor-saving devices and large numbers of novel applications of the electrical current. For the first time a national exposition will be entirely operated by electricity furnished by modern steam turbines. These new rotating steam turbines have many advantages over the old reciprocating engines, and this is especially true in the development of electrical current. The Norfolk Railway & Light Co. has contracted to furnish all the electricity required for illumination and power purposes. The addition to the "load" has made necessary a very large increase in the equipment and a number of large Curtis turbine genertor units have been purchased. The electricity will be transmitted from Norfolk to ly-constructed line, and will be transferred and distributed through a large substation in Machinery Hall. This substation will be a model of its kind, representing the engineering practice in such work. Here will be located large air cooled tranformers for FOR DYSPEPSIA astounding low figure of twenty-five lamps used for police lighting. Proposition that Bachelors be Taxed to Support Old Maids Scouted With Scorn.

The debating contests that are held from time to time between the higher grade students of the Graded School are quite animated and interesting. The subject of the debate Friday, April 12th, was: "Resolved, That Bachelors Should be Taxed to Support Spinsters." Master Alvin Barnes, son of Mr. Alex T. Barnes, spoke on the negative side as follows: MR. PRESIDENT: In discussing the ques-tion whether or not bachelors should be taxed to support spinsters, it is useless for anyone to cry to prove that they

In the first place what is tax? And what is tax levied upon? Tax is an enforced proportional contribution levied on persons, property or income either by the authority of the State, for the support of the government, or by local authority for general municipal purposes. Taxes in the strict-er sense are direct when demanded from the very person who it is supposed as a general thing will bear their burden, as for example poll taxes, land or property taxes, taxes for keeping carriages, ve-hicles, horses, etc. And owning other property bearing a cash valuation. Nowhere in the record of our country has it been shown where an old maid has been taxed for being an old maid. Why is it?

Every free holder or voter in the United States will agree in saying that there is not a taxable value to be placed upon these non-matrimonial female subjects. To prove that they are not valuable: After the intelligent gentlemen of our country have considered the entire female race carefully, and pick+d them over this large element which is the leavings commonly known as old maids is the rem-nant left, for charitable organizations and such like as the Daughters of the Confederacy, King'sDaughters, Daughters of the Revolution, Temperance band agitators and Colonial Dames.

Why tax the esteemed gentlemen commonly known as bachelors to support any such strong religious supporters as these sacred beings called old maids? It has always been a custom, but not compulsory, that this noted high esteemed unmarried gentleman has repeatedly displayed his liberality in contributing to this large host of artificiaries and aucients for their encouragement and zeal, such valuables as small boquets, June apples, zuzus and other valuable conectionaries. Such attentions as these are to show to them their appreciation and hearty sympathy for the work they are doing in these many noble bands. Along another line on this same subject, where is the reason, or what right claimed that any gentleman should be called upon to support or furnish supplies to any being which possesses such misfortunes as high temper, unruly tongue and quick in action to use the broom stick, the fire poker and other dangerous weapons which destroy the pleasure and mar the progress of any refined gentleman? My opponents may be quick to say hat there would be no old maids if the bachelors would only propose matrimony. I appeal to all; use your common reason; think, who would wilfully place himself in so grave an attitude as this, which would jeopardize his life Not only would an action of this kind drive all pleasure and comfort from him but likely might disqualify him to the extent of never being a fit subject to stand the examination for life insurance which would be of vast importance to him should he be captured through matrimony with one of these creatures. My candid opinion is that the best thing to do with these old maids would be to petition to the United States Congress to pass an act to appropriate sufficient funds to purchase for each of these onesome and disconsolate females of un certain age a set of false teeth, a wig and such other artificiaries as might be deemed necessary to pass them as American women and recommend each of these subjects before some strong (financially) religious body to be sent out all over the country as book agents, agents for perfumes, extracts, Sloan's Liniment and St. Jacob's Oil. Now a number of them would not be physically able to engage in this active work just mentioned. It would be well if Congress in this same act would provide for this number who are not capable for filling this employment: "Each State in the United States of America to provide a large gallery or tent, employ the best photographers in each State and photograph each of these old maids separately and make their pictures exactly as they look and send them out to all portions of the earth and sell them in large quantities to be used as the best comic valentines, one-half the proceeds to be remitted to these ladies of peculiarity for support, and to buy artificial limbs and other requisites adapted to their requirements. I am sure that all thinking people can readily see that there is no excuse or reason for requesting old bachelors to pay a penny of tax to sup-port this part of humanity known as old maids or spinsters. My doctrine is the same as was held by the patriots of old who stated that it is written that every tub must stand on ts own bottom. How to Aoid Appendicitis.
