Inland Water Routes. NECESSITY FOR CHEAPER TRANSPOR-TATION FACILITIES PROBLEM

OF THE TIMES.

Every Section, and Community, is Aroused to this Fact-Wonderful Development of Face-Construction of Inland Water Ways Hope of Eastern North Carolina

Correspondence Norfolk Landmark.

By the wonderful development of the country and the rapid increasing demand for the products of the farm, forest, factory and fishery, we are forced to realize the urgent necessity for cheaper transportation facilities. Every section, and community, is aroused to this fact. In many sections the most promising enterprises cannot be undertaken until their people secure more certain and direct ways of transportation. The transportation question has become the most serious problem of the day and the wise man fully understands that we cannot make quicker progress unless it is solved.

For these reasons Eastern North Carolina is looking, with strong and peculiar hope, to the meeting, soon to be held in Norfolk, in the interest

Very naturally our greatest interest is centered on the route from Norduty verified on or before the thirtieth folk to Albemarle Sound and, conseof September, 1910, or this notice will be quently, any movement, in that dihended in har of their recovery. All persons rection should arouse us to enthusiastic effort, but alas! for more than fifty years this question has been before us and we have been promised this free water route by every man we have sent to Congress since 1858. But our hopes are not entirely crushfolk meeting and show our appreciation of this new movement by doing all we can to promote every sincere move made in its behalf.

We are not concernd about which route may be selected or purchased, and opened as a free canal, but we are greatly concerned in the quick free inland water way from Massaknown that a conflict of interests has esulted in delaying the necessary appropriations required to give us this free route, but we insist that these obstacles can, and should be, quickly removed that this movement may be carried through. Every consideration calculated to inspire and enthuse a patriot, is presented in the claims favoring this sented in the claims lavoring that to the undersigned at his office, on or greatly needed improvement and the greatly needed improvement and the public man who permits selfish, or sordid, reasons to influence him in retarding its consummation, should be consigned to political oblivion.

We have been told that the Government has no right to construct a new marle Sound unless it first purchases the two existing canals. This claim, though groundless and absurd, has been, and could be, used again to further delay this work and we hope those who hold these views will be "smoked out into the open," that the people may learn who are the real enemies of this project.

To repeat, we do not want any more delays to interfere with the nie Mack in the leading roles, will opening of this route and we suggest it would be both wise and proper for these inimitable fun makers estabthe representatives of Eastern North | lished themselves as prime favorites Carolina and Virginia to hold a spe- with Henderson amusement lovers cial meeting, when they get to Norfolk in November, and decide for them- November 29th, "Polly of the Cirselves what they deem would be best | cus. for their sections and, having decided, operation of the "Atlanctic Deeper Waterways Association" in asking Stop and Think make this suggestion because we are present; other firmly convinced that if our route is nounced later. to be delayed until the entire contemplated inland waterway from Buzzard Bay to the Gulf of Mexico or Florida, is provided for, our present genera-

Only insanity could prevent a man from seeing and realizing the wisdom of this statement. The great advantages which the opening of the Carolina and Virginia free waterway would specially secure to Norfolk induces us to hope that her citizens will rise to the occa-sion and do their full duty towards promoting this transportation necessity for nothing they can do would be too much.

Along this line we would modestly suggest that to every stranger, who comes to Norfolk with promises of aid in behalf of the immediate openthe Country and Rapidly Increasing Demand for Products of the Farm, Forest, Factory, and Fishery, Make

This course would make the stay of the stranger peculiarly happy if he should happen to belong to that representative class that men of high character and sincere purpose rejoice to meet and delight to enter-

> For more than forty years the writer has labored, when opporttunity offered, to secure a free canal from Norfolk to Albemarle Sound, because he knew the benefit it would prove to his section. In these long years of labor, watching and waiting, he has never despaired of seeing the dream of his young manhood fulfilled and he is most happy in the thought that the work he performed, in this most commendable and worthy cause, was inspired and guided only love of State and homefold and that no hope encouraged his efforts save the ennobling desire to succeed and thereby merit and retain the appreciation and regard of his fellow citizens of Eastern North Car-

And now in his declining years, when he sees only the setting sun, he is still buoyed up with the hope that he may yet, and soon, be permitted to again face the rising sun and behold the glint of its glorious rays making beautiful the united waters of Carolina and Virginia as they flow through a free canal to bless his neighbors, and especially the home ed and we intend to come to the Nor- people he loves with an intensity and devotion a patriot only can feel and comprehend.

A Confederate on the Bench.

Governor Comer, of Alabama, continues to clash with Federal Judge Jones in the attempt to put into execution the stringent railroad and prohibition laws passed by the State Legislature. The scene is laid at too President of the United States great a distance and the points of controversy are too little germain to North Carolina for space to be given to explicit statement of the matter at issue. Suffice it to say that Governor Comer is still fighting against hope against the construction of the law laid down by the Supreme Court of the United States, and that Judge Jones is proceeding with calmness and determination to enforce such construction. There is, of course, the usual cry of usurpation by the Federal judiciary of powers belonging to the States, and if the militant governor has his way, there will be resultant friction and bad feeling among a large class of the State's population. Our reason for touching on this controversy, however, is not to enter upon a discussion of its merits, but to produce with approval the thought ful words of the New York World, representing Judge Jones:

"If we look into the careers of the two men we may find an explanation of their present attitude. The Governor, named for a Confederate general, was a boy during the civil war The Judge, a soldier in that unhappy time wounded more than once and an officer on Gen. Gordon's staff was the man who bore the Southern flag of truce at Appomattox. He has been a Federal Judge since 1901. It takes a large soul to accept a inevitable. It takes a true fighter to of shaping it into victory. What pomattox. He is conceding the results of the fourteenth and fifteenth amendments. Why should he not concede them? Why should he not, like a brave man, recognize facts that them? There would have been no "New South" had there been any sulking in the tents by those who, buttling for a cause for which they died in profusion and suffered even more than death, found themselves at the end defeated and impoverished. There is a higher cause than political prin-ciple; when that cause came to be subserved the Southfaced it more determinedly and with greater success than it faced the political crisis that made it into a live and continuing issue. The fifteenth amendment has been all but nullified, because it touched the homes and the womanhood and the civilization of a people. Passed in rancor, it could never be obeyed in fact. Yet the same Federal their adherence to the fourteenth, are responsible by their policy of liberal construction of State's rights for the abrogation of the fifteenth amendment. They have observed the distinction and, practically, if not in terms, allowed it. The long expected meeting between the President of the Republic of Mexico and the President of the the United States took place here today. Amid a salute of artillery and the playing of martial bands, with the clanking of accouterments and a brilliant flash of gold lace, President William H. Both Presidents dwelt upon the cordiality of the relations existing he cannot help and make the most of between the United States and Mexico. President Taft declared that today's meeting was not necessary to make stronger the bonds of friendship; it merely typified the strength of the bonds as they already exist. No words of international note were uttered by either. There were smiles of contentment on their faces and the hand clasps were hearty. President Diaz on his visit to President Taft was attired in full dress uniform. He was accompanied by members of his cabinet and military staff.
