Heading Off Blindness.

State Board of Health Seeking to Prevent Infection at Birth—Large Percentage of the Blindness in Children Due to Ignorance or Neglect—Some Facts Presented by John E. Ray, Principal of the State School for the Blind and Deaf, at Raleigh, Which are Worthy of Thoughtful Consideration by Physicians and Parents

"A special committee of the New York Association for the Blind which was appointed to investigate the causes of preventable blindness and to cooperate with physicians in seeking measures of prevention, has reported that the State Board of Health has taken steps to insure the widespread causes of blindness through infection at birth.

The committee has found that about one-half of all blindness due to preventable causes, and that about one-third of the cases of blindness in children is caused by ophthalmia neonatorum, a preventable infectious disease occurring at birth. A drop of a one per cent. solution of silver nitrate dropped into the eyes of a child at birth is a sufficient preventive of this infection. The use of this antiseptic has been recommended by the American Medical Association, and the committee of the New York Association for the Blind has united with the State Commissioner of Health in enforcing the general use of this precaution. The State Commissioner of Health will endeavor to provide this solution through local health officers, or a physician and midwife applying for it.

"Birth certificates issued by the State Department bear the query: 'What preventive for ophthalmia neonatorum did you use?' If none, the authorities of at least one State have enacted that these notifications of birth be returned in thirty-six hours instead of ten days, as heretofore. It is believed that if the physicians are failed to use such a precaution the certificates of the Registrar will in most instances prove effective."

The above is a clipping taken from a recent issue of the New York Sun. It tells its own story. It shows that the authorities of at least one State are alive to the appalling condition which confronts the commonwealth. Nor is New York the only State in which active effort is being put forth to "head off" one of the most distressing calamities that can befall a human being. And to realize that much of this distress can be prevented is a loud call to every good citizen in the nation.

There are enrolled the present session of the North Carolina State School for the Blind and Deaf 268 blind children (besides 100 deaf children). At least one-fourth of these need never have been blind, and would not have been, if proper preventive remedies had been employed within twenty-four hours after the birth of the child. Gentle reader, do you realize that there are from sixty-five to ninety children in this school doomed to darkness and handicap in the race for life and winning all their days—some of them to lead the lives of helpless dependents, if not abject paupers? And there are at least 128 more blind children in the State who have not been enrolled in our school at all. This will make the figures the more appalling—one hundred and thirty-five blind children in North Carolina whose sight might have been preserved with a little care exercised, and almost without expense.

Is it not high time that the legal and medical authorities in our State were taking steps to prevent this condition of affairs? In the meantime will not the parents of all infants see to it that immediately after birth the eyes shall be thoroughly washed and then have one drop of the solution of no greater strength than one per cent. of silver nitrate put in each eye not later than twenty-four hours after birth? This is a precaution to properly teach a blind child, if properly applied, is harmless and may prevent your child from becoming blind.

And let every physician and midwife in North Carolina supply himself with this solution, and attend to its proper administration in every case. Care should be taken that the solution shall not be stronger than ONE PER CENT.

There is yet one other phase of this situation. It costs at least $200 annually to properly teach a blind child and not less than $20 to clothe him. For ninety blind children this aggregates $19,800 annually; and for 130 children $28,600 annually. What a saving to the State this would amount to the saving to the State of $386,000. Is this worth considering?

There is yet another phase of preventable blindness about which I will not write fully now. It is in connection with hereditary blindness. I had not laid very much stress upon this until I read a very learned treatise recently written by Clarence Leob, A. M., D., of St. Louis, Mo. He examined thoroughly and minutely into the history of 1,204 families in all parts of the United States in which one or both parents are blind from one of twelve diseases of the eye. The percentage of blindness in the 4,155 children born in these families varies from 54.8 to 66.4. And to my surprise the percentage of blindness in the collateral hereditary is greatest, viz.: 66.4! Dr. Leob concludes from the result of his investigations that persons born blind (congenital) ought never to marry. He

Food Crops the Chief Thing.

Our North Carolina newspaper friends have the idea of raising food crops, good and strong. The Durham Herald says that "all farmers in North Carolina cannot raise 200 or 300 bushels of corn to the acre, but if one can do this the average farmer should be able to raise more than 12 or 15 bushels to the acre." And, along the same line, The Greenville Herald says: "If every farmer in Pitt county will endeavor to make two bushels of corn this year where he made one last year there will be plenty of fall bins when next harvest time comes." The Charlotte Observer adds to the fund of advice by saying "if that man is a benefactor to humanity who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew, how much greater benefactor is he who makes two ears of corn grow where only one was produced before. To do this should be the aim of every farmer in the South, and until such does become his aim this section will be dependent on the farmers of other States."

Increased Enrollment at A. & M. College.

The North Carolina College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts has now reached 530, 80 new students having been registered since the new year. This record-breaking registration has been made possible by the completion of the dormitory. Another gratifying feature of the enrollment for this year is that there is a gain of 54 per cent. in the number of agricultural students.

There are 43 young farmers at the college for the six-weeks' short winter course in agriculture, this having been in progress for two weeks. In addition to agriculture these students have taken lectures for two weeks on road building.

German Mashed Potatoes.

A woman who has lived some time in Germany offers the following recipe as a German way to prepare mashed potatoes: Boil the potatoes in salted water. When they are almost cooked, peel, core and quarter one-third as many apples as there are potatoes. Add them and cook the whole till tender. Then mash thoroughly mixing in meanwhile a pinch of salt and a generous piece of butter. This dish is served at dinner instead of ordinary mashed potatoes. It looks exactly like the latter, but has a slightly tart flavor.—New York Tribune.

Polar Etiquette.
We did not hesitate to take advantage of the cache made by Abruzzi on Cape Flora, knowing that the duke was safe in warmer climes, for it is polar etiquette that the first hungry party that finds a cache is at liberty to take the supplies. Such action has always been regarded as perfectly lawful and proper, because the food is taken to sustain life, and as in our own case, they are ready to make good if they ever get our alive. In addition to the canned meats left by the Abruzzi expedition, there were some which an English party had cached.—Canadian Editor's Story of the Ziegler Polar Expedition in National Magazine.

The Canova Statue.

Charlotte Observer.
The offer of the Italian government to present to North Carolina a replica of the discovered plaster cast of the Canova statue of Washington in order that a duplicate of the latter may be made if the State so desires has brought about much discussion both in an out of the State. Among the papers which have discussed the subject is the Newport News Times-Herald, which says, in part:
It is perhaps not known to all our readers that North Carolina once had a noble statue of George Washington in the Capitol grounds at Raleigh and that it was purchased at the suggestion of Thomas Jefferson of Virginia in 1816. It was made by the Italian sculptor Canova and transported in a man-of-war to Wilmington. For years it adorned the public square in Raleigh, but was ruined when the Capitol building was burned in 1831. This will be an another thread in the tie of friendship that binds the Old North State and the Old Dominion. By this act, North Carolina confesses that Virginia had at least one something that was "first and farthest."

When the Times-Herald undertakes to write about North Carolina affairs it should more carefully inform itself on the subject to be discussed. When it says, speaking of the Canova statue: "It is perhaps not known to all our readers that North Carolina once had a noble statue of George Washington in the Capitol grounds at Raleigh" it shows ignorance of the facts. North Carolina has had for years and still has a statue of Washington in the Capitol grounds at Raleigh. It is a bronze statue, standing to the South of the Capitol building and at the head of the principal street of the city—the most conspicuous position of the four statues in the Capitol grounds. That statue standing there today is a rebuke to the Virginia paper for its jibe regarding the proposed "restoration of the Canova statue" that by this act North Carolina confesses that Virginia had at least one something that was "first and farthest."

The Canova statue referred to by the Times-Herald stood in the rotunda of the old Capitol and was destroyed in 1831 when that building was burned. When put in place the men in charge of the work urged that it might be quickly removed in case of emergency. This would have cost $1,000. The Legislature failed to make the appropriation and the consequence was its destruction by the fire. Had the suggestion been followed it could have been saved. As it was heroic efforts were made by some citizens to remove it from the burning building. The head was not destroyed. It was taken away by an Englishman who said he could restore the entire figure, but neither was ever heard of again. There is a picture of this statue made in 1825 which represents General Lafayette and a lady standing by looking at it. The lady was Miss Betsy John Haywood, a noted North Carolina belle and beauty of that day who accompanied Lafayette to see the statue in 1825. She was a sister of the late Dr. Fabius and Burke Haywood of Raleigh. The original statue cost $18,000. It can now be reproduced at a cost of only $6,000. It was a magnificent work of art by a noted artist and the fact that it was of Grecian style of dress rather than of the American of the eighteenth century should not be urged as a reason why the State should not accept the offer of the Italian government.

Nine Tellers Mark a Man.
In olden times when a person died it was customary to toll the church bell a certain number of times to indicate whether it was a man, woman or child. For a woman it was tolled three times and for a man three or four times. The stroke of a bell was called a "teller," and hence it was nine tellers for a man, or as folks said in those days, "Nine tellers mark a man." This saying, which was continued long after the tolling custom was abolished, finally became converted into the present saying, "Nine tellers mark a man," which is devoid of sense and reason.

Won His Bet.
"Daddy, said his boy to his father, 'I've got a pencil which will write green, purple, crimson or any color you like.'
"No it won't—not the same pencil, my son."
"You daren't bet me a dime it won't, daddy."
"I'll give you a dime if it will," said the old man.
The youngster dived into his pocket, produced the stump of a common lead pencil and wrote on a piece of paper the words "magenta, green, crimson, purple," etc.
"There, daddy, say like you won't write any color you like now. Fork over that dime."

Hundreds of orphans have been helped by the President of the Industrial and Orphans Home at Macon, Ga., who writes: "We have used Electric Bitters in this institution for nine years. It has proved a most excellent medicine for Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles. We regard it as one of the best family medicines on earth. It invigorates all vital organs, purifies the blood, aids digestion, creates appetite. To strengthen and build up pale, thin, weak children or run-down people it has no equal. Best for female complaints. Only 50c. at Melville Dorr's."

Love for the Home.

The Importance of Home Life in all That Makes for True Manhood and True Womanhood, A Lesson That Americans Need to Learn More Than Any Others, Declares Washington City Minister—Some Things That Have Left Our National Character Devoid of Many of Those Virtues Which Only Thrive at Home.

Love for the Home was the theme of a strong sermon recently preached by Rev. Dr. Russell, pastor of one of the churches in Washington City, from which the Washington Herald quotes liberally. The following extracts make timely reading:
"Hotels and sky-scraping apartment houses are taking the place of the private dwelling and furnish a garish setting for pretensions semi-public and semi-private."
"So-called social obligations and the various charities run on scientific principles came in for criticism, and the perils that ensue to younger members of a family whose mother is continually in a mad and breathless rush from engagement to engagement were described."
"If there is a lesson that we Americans need to learn more than any other, it is the importance of home life in all that makes for true manhood and true womanhood. The thirst for exciting pleasures, the lust of travel and the greed for gain have robbed the home of its attractions, and in consequence have left our national character devoid of many of those virtues which only thrive at home."
"Vulgar ostentation, display, and conspicuousness are no longer thought incompatible with the title 'gentleman'—a title in these days of the most diverse origin from all those characteristics that once upon a time stood for as a symbol."
"Hotels and sky-scraping apartment houses are taking the place of the private home and furnish a garish setting for pretensions semi-public and semi-private. The daily papers are invited eagerly to throw their limelight into every corner and upon the smallest circumstances of the individual's existence."
"Parents are that through courtesy, or for the want of a more appropriate title, we shall call the 'home life' of a majority of our families. The different members hardly ever meet during the ordinary day."
"The men are absorbed in their business affairs, the children at school and the mother passing in a mad and breathless rush from engagement to engagement has less interest in her home, less love for her children, less ambition to fulfill her divinely appointed vocation of motherhood than she has to become the president of one of the innumerable clubs of which she is a member. She lives and moves and has her being in her club life—clubs of all sorts and conditions, with every reason for their being that can be well imagined."
"The men and boys disperse to their clubs, saloons, or favorite street corners. The daughters seek to gild existence in euchre parties, dances and miscellaneous balls, or meet their friends in the soft moonlight of the parks, if they do not choose to monopolize for the purpose the only comfortable and attractive room at home, from which the rest of the family is rigorously excluded."
"Is it a great wonder, then, that the men, driven from what is probably the one attractive spot and banished to rooms bleak and barren, cold and comfortless, perhaps, seek outside for a vitiated form of those pleasures and entertainments which are denied them under their own roof—draged, only to be bestowed on those who have no right or title to them—strange men—their sister's friends?"
"If nothing in the house is too good for the daughters, the very best should not be too good for the sons."
"This, then, is the American home! In former days, when the young man or woman came of age, friends of the family deemed suitable were invited to the home, which was laced out in holiday attire for the occasion."
"It is to the American mother that the nation must look for its uplifting, its up-building—for the saving of its very soul—from wandering through 'dry places' to the garden-closets of domesticity—the old pure high ideals of womanhood, of widowhood, and of motherhood. Then it shall relearn the old-time lessons of calm self-posse, and self-control, and make to live again the long dead sentiments of simplicity and content, self-forgetfulness and honor in its finest phases, delicacy, duty, family affection—with all the old exquisite meaning of peaceful happiness, whose symbol is the home."

Most people know the feeling, and the miserable state of ill health it indicates. All people should know Dr. Foley's Honey and Tar, and it has never failed to prevent and cure these troubles. It is the only medicine I can get the children to take without a row." The above from W. C. Oranstein, Green Bay, Wis., duplicates the experience of thousands of other users of Foley's Honey and Tar.
