EDITORIAL COMMENTS.

Will someone please tell us how it is that the smallest states can have the largest scandals?

The "rich" are divided into two classes—the really rich, and those who try to ape the rich.

The Georgia man who attempted to commit suicide last week had three wives. In many cases one has been considered sufficient cause.

If you do not believe in the old saying—"there is room at the top"—then just examine the heads of some of those dudes you see every day in the clothes, with their hair parted in the middle, and be not faithless, but believing.

"There are hotter places than Washington," pipes a well known newspaper correspondent of that city. There must be something in his declaration, as we have frequently heard other reputable people intimate as much.

"Teach your children to love music and flowers," is the rather poetic advice given by one of our exchanges, which is all very good. And it might have added: "Teach them also to love and respect honest and honorable toil, if you would make them of them what God would have them be."

Some people are so keen to ape royalty that they will do almost anything they ever heard of a king or a queen doing. An Alabama woman, thoroughly enamoured with such a desire, was found wandering in the fields the other day, eating grass and herbs in imitation of old King Nebuchadnezzar.

Scientists tell us that the climate of the planet Mars is very similar to that of our earth. There is a strong probability, however, that it is far more comfortable to live there in hot weather than it is here, since it is believed by many that the people of Mars are still living in that innocent state in which our own Adam and Eve were created, and have therefore not yet discovered any necessity for wearing clothes.

Mentioning the fact that lightning struck a church somewhere quite recently, one of our bright exchanges observes that "Whom the Lord loveth He chasteneth," and then asks, "Did you ever hear of lightning striking a barroom?" Well, not exactly that, but the next thing to it happened to many barrooms in North Carolina not so long ago when the people of this good State rose up in their indignation against the barrooms and voted prohibition from the mountains to the seashore.

Most assuredly everybody has come to understand fully by this time that all social functions are "elaborate" and "swell" affairs, and that refreshments served on all such occasions are "delicious." Either the social functions and the refreshment served need some slight variations from their dull monotony, or else the society reporters need to acquire a new stock of descriptive adjectives. Even an old shell-worm look of synonyms might be found helpful to those whose business it is to wrestle with these ponderous affairs.

Cardinal Gibbons, in an address at St. Joseph's College and Academy the other day, paid his respects to that dissipated element of America's population that would like very much to exchange the graceful feminine skirt for a pair of breeches, and vote and perform many other masculine functions, when he gave special emphasis to his candid opinion that the proper place for every true woman is in the home, and that no such woman even wants to vote. Cardinal Gibbons has thus, in a very brief sentence, voiced the unbiased opinion of practically every level-headed man and a great majority of the good women in America today. That man who would like to see his wife cavorting around the ballot box is a mighty common piece of clay.

The Durham county officials are getting in after the big tax-dodgers over that way and seem to be determined to bring them to head-taw and make them quit fudging in the annual game of listing property for taxation. For this timely action the Durham county officials deserve and will receive the hearty commendation of all truthful and honest citizens. If the poor man fails to make proper returns of his scanty earthly possessions, he is mighty apt to find himself in the hands of the grand jury in short order, and there should be no discrimination between the rich and the poor in such matters. But now and then you will find a man of more or less wealth who seems to think he has a special license to falsify his returns and thereby escape his just and equitable share of the burden of taxation. All such fellows need to be taught a lesson that would undoubtedly make better and more useful citizens out of them.

THE FARMER'S WIFE.

Richmond Woman Makes a Strong Plea For the Amelioration of Her Condition in Life.

Said a Richmond woman a week or two ago, in answering questions of interest in regard to farm life: "You may talk as much as you like about the farmer of the future, his business-like basis and his utilization of every possible labor-saving machine, but I go beyond the farmer. I should like to know what is being done, and what is going to be done, for the farmer's wife.

"There is no class of women," she says, "whose service to humanity is so little recognized, or whose comfort and advantage is so little considered as this class. The farmer, it is true, attends to the plowing and the reaping, the sowing of the seed and the ingathering of the crops, but he is more and more applying the principles of science to the improvement of such crops, to saving them from injury through adverse weather conditions, to bringing them to full perfection and maturity. This tending to crops takes the farmer out into the open, and it has at least the advantage of variety.

But within doors lies the province of the farmer's wife. She must rise early to have breakfast ready for men whose work calls them early afield, whose morning duties include feeding and watering of the teams, ahead of breakfast. This is preformed on the woman's part by milking time and by the straining and putting away of the milk.

"Then, after breakfast, there are dishes to be washed, rooms to be put in order, clothing to be looked after, dinner to be planned and cooked, the table to be set again. In the afternoon, when other women are resting, the farmer's wife is setting her dining room and kitchen to rights. Then she has to get up early and substantial supper against the time when her men-folk, tired and hungry, come home from the fields to enjoy the closing meal of the day.

"Even if the farmer's wife faced the strenuous problem of the daily round with a kitchen equipment that transformed what had been difficult into comparatively comfortable achievement; even if her domestic help was trained and efficient, as it is scarcely likely to be, she would have to be a woman of twenty or thirty, with the ability in herself to render her department of farm life anything but drudgery, and monotonous drudgery.

"But when it is remembered how long women in rural districts have been making bricks without straw, how long they have been wasting youth and health and energy in kitchens, destitute of all but the most primitive methods for baking and brewing, they are the human beings for whom my interest is most strongly aroused," concluded the woman advocate of the farmer's wife class, pausing to take breath and looking around on her little audience with an expression that seemed to challenge contradiction.

"And while the American nation," she resumed, "is preaching backward to the soil doctrine, and getting out improved farming implements and writing a handy pocket series on scientific agriculture, I should wish someone to get up pictures of model farms, and dairies and chicken houses. I should like for farmers to be encouraged in having water put into their houses and in building substantial outhouses, especially houses where stock can be kept in winter. I should like public sympathy and attention called to the long suffering farmer's helpmeet. She should have her chance. If she is sure of help in the devices she needs to lighten her daily labor; if electricity and machinery are associated to come to the time she needs for light training and can preserve her pretty looks, and wear her pretty frocks, transforming her farmer husband into her perpetual sweetheart."

Foley's Kidney Remedy.
Is particularly recommended for chronic cases of kidney and bladder trouble. It tends to regulate and control the kidneys, and has a cleansing and healing, strengthening and bracing. For sale by all druggists.

Senator Tillman Feeble.
Senator B. R. Tillman attended commencement at Winthrop College, Rock Hill, S. C., last week, but was unable to deliver the diplomas to the graduating class. While the senator is "down and out," he is nevertheless far from being the original spirit that he formerly was. He uses a walking cane in going around and appears to be very much handicapped by one side not working well, giving him the appearance of being partially paralyzed on one side. He was asked to deliver the diplomas to the graduates, but on account of his condition had to decline.

Republican Economy.
You can get no new rural free delivery routes because the Postmaster-General says he is practicing economy. He paid for furnishing his own dinner, $37 for a waste-waiver, $298 for a desk, $320 for a table, $265 for a wardrobe, $148.75 for one rug and $600 for draperies in one room. Such Jeffersonian "simplicity" takes so much money that there is none left for needed services.—News and Observer.

To Rush Reciprocity Bill.
A dispatch from Washington says that the Senate Finance Committee determined to rush through the Canadian reciprocity bill with all possible speed, since it has been ascertained by the Senate leaders that there is a clear majority in favor of the bill without amendment.

Shall we install moving pictures into our schools to teach geography and like subjects. State Superintendent Eggleston, of Virginia, advises the adoption of such a course and so do many other educators.—News and Observer.

Laugh is on the Men Now.

The newspapers have from time to time criticized the women for their uncomfortable fashions in dress, but heat-ridden victims now declare that men, too, are victims of foolish conventionalities and the women may have the laugh on them in the summer time. The Charlotte Observer quotes a citizen, grinning under his high temperature, as follows:

"It is high time that men, mere or otherwise, should rise in his might and overthrow the fashion of coat-wearing to which he has for years truckled, a martyred victim," declared a member of the sex yesterday, while he mopped his perspiring brow and looked at the thermometer again to see if it registered 92 or 102.

"We have much to say," he continued heatedly, tempering his remarks to match the weather, "about the slavery of womankind, the sacrifice of comfort to look on the part of the female portion of the human race. It's really a case of put up or shut up. Some years ago for a fleeting season shirtwaists were in vogue, but somebody ruled against them and they went. The average coat of a man is scarcely, if any, lighter than that which protects a woman against freezing winter's chilliest blasts. A woman who should come up town today in a full coat-suit would be considered a fit candidate for examination by a lunacy commission. Even petticoats are obsolete. The man who appears without a coat, however, is looked upon as beyond the pale of polite society. And it's all his own fault.

This is man's world and what he puts in order, clothing in law, or in masculine fashion, goes. I would not, of course, presume to extend his influence into the realm of feminine fashions, but within his own sphere he can force the world to accept whatever he wishes.

"Believe me, gentlemen, the laugh is on us."

F. S. Rexford, 615 New York Life Bldg., Kansas City, Mo., says: "I had a severe attack of a cold which settled in my neck and kidneys and I was in great pain from my trouble. A friend recommended Foley's Kidney Pills and I used two bottles of them and I have done a world of good." For sale by all druggists.

Vance County Roads.

Mr. Leonard Taft, president of the Capital Highway Association, recently made a trip from Pinehurst, N. C., to Richmond, Va., a distance of 273 miles. In a letter to the Times-Dispatch he describes the condition of the various roads over which he traveled, and says the following about the roads in Vance county:

"Starting from the Tar River you go into Vance county, and whereas the roads are not bad, they are far from good, but are slowly being improved. The roads pass through Kittrell and on to Henderson, about twelve miles. Mr. Cooper, of Henderson, tells me the county roads will be much improved before this winter. From Henderson, through Warren for the next twenty-four miles, the roads are not good, and unless they receive attention pretty soon they will be bad. We traveled this road in a rain storm, and we got little pleasure out of it, but perhaps the roads are better than I have given them credit for."

Poison Flies With Formalin.

Thousands of house flies are being killed in Raleigh every day by what is known as the formalin treatment. The druggists of that city are selling formalin by the gallons. Many of the Raleigh housekeepers are using the poison on the front and back porches in order to get the flies that are waiting to enter the house whenever the doors are opened. This poison acts very successfully in un-screened kitchens and dining rooms. Wherever flies are numerous the formalin gets them by the thousands.

Directions for the use of this remedy are as follows: One tablespoonful of formalin in one-half pint of equal parts milk and water. Expose this poison mixture in shallow plates, wherever flies are numerous. Place a piece of bread in the center of the plate to furnish a place for the flies to feed. The result in dead flies is said to be wonderful.

He Had Done Enough.

Mayor Longstreth, of Merchantville, New Jersey, recently ran for the office of mayor in the little Jersey village, and one night before election he made a speech in the town hall.

"Fellow citizens," said the candidate, "I have fought against the Inland, I have not often had no bed but the battlefield and no canopy but the sky. I have walked over frozen ground until every step was marked with blood."

His story was going fine until a little dried-up looking voter rose from his seat in the rear of the hall and called out: "Well, I'll be darned if you haven't done enough for your country. You go home and rest, I'll vote for the other fellow."—Philadelphia Times.

Against High Shoes.

A nation-wide movement against wearing high heel shoes was the plan inaugurated by Justice Howard, of the New York Supreme Court, in addressing an audience of women. Justice Howard said: "Wearing high heel shoes is as barbarous and torturing, destructive to health as the Chinese wooden shoes. It is as heathenish as wearing rings in the nose or tattooing the face. It breeds an ungainly, deformed race. Have courage to speak out against this silly fashion—fashion as destructive as rum and as deadly as opium."

Wouldn't Let Sheep Bite Him.

The attempt in Russia to convict Jews of a "ritualistic murder" as an excuse for a massacre is just about as convincing as the plea of the dark caught sheep stealing that "I don't low no white man's sheep to bite me."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Where Love Failed.

"Maybe she won't like me any more, but I can't help it."
"What's happened?"
"Her pet bopende was under the mistletoe and I failed to take the chance."—Pittsburg Post.

AMERICAN TOBACCO COMPANY

Submits Plan of Reorganization to Attorney General Wickersham.

It is understood that the American Tobacco Company, through its attorneys, has submitted to Attorney General Wickersham a tentative plan under which it proposes to reorganize in conformity with the recent decision of the Supreme Court. It will be remembered that the company was ordered by the Supreme Court to change its present form of organization so as to conform to a certain standard that had not herebefore been clearly defined.

It will be remembered that the company was ordered by the Supreme Court to change its present form of organization so as to conform to a certain standard that had not herebefore been clearly defined. The plan of organization was to be submitted to the Circuit Court of Appeals and to Attorney General Wickersham for approval.

Immediately after the recent decision was handed down it was said that the attorneys for the company had at once gone to work to form a plan of reorganization that would conform to the requirements of the Sherman anti-trust law as defined by the Supreme Court. This plan, it is now stated, has been completed and submitted to Attorney General Wickersham for his approval.

But the plan will not be approved by the board of directors of the company, it is said, until the Attorney General passes upon it. If he approves the plan, it will then be submitted to the board of directors and then to the Circuit Court.

Not details of the plan will be given out until it has been approved by all parties concerned. Much interest centers in the final plan of organization to be adopted. This plan will serve as a model for the organization of all the other large corporations throughout the country which are engaged in interstate commerce.

Invite Them In.

Two farmers were not long since discussing their local newspaper, says an exchange. One thought it had too many advertisements in it. The other replied: "In my opinion the advertisements are far from being the least valuable part of it. Look them over carefully and save at least five times the cost of the paper each week through the business advantages I get from them."

Said the other: "I believe you are right—I know that they pay me well and rather than think it is my duty to find fault with the advertisements after all. Those men have the right idea of the matter. It pays any man with a family to take a good local paper for the sake of the advertisements it contains. If it is a good paper, men fail to give farmers a chance to read advertisements in the local paper, they are blind to their own interests, to say the least of it. 'You never trade with me,' said a business man to a prosperous farmer. 'You have never invited me to your place of business and I never go where I am not invited; I might not be welcomed.' was the reply."

Catching Husbands.

How to get married seems to be a question with many girls and ladies. It is a timely question. They ought to think more seriously of it. Having no experience they make mistakes. These mistakes last for life, or often they shorten life. It is all right to dress neat and stylish around. That, alone, though won't do. Fine dressing and "sassiness" are good bait to catch suckers—cigarette suckers—dudes and fellows dependent upon their "daddies" for clothes, notions and bedding. But for sensible folks, they hardly fool them. Smiles and flowers for the sick and poor on the streets attract more real love than having a gay time on the streets and ringing chewing gum. Then helping mother and being respectful to father catches men sensible people than fine dress or even a college education.—Lincolnton Times.

Middle Aged and Elderly People.

Use Foley's Kidney Pills for quick and permanent results in all cases of kidney and bladder trouble, and for painful and annoying irregularities. For sale by all druggists.

Influence of Advertising.

It was a newspaper advertisement in sixty-one papers of the West that changed congressional sentiment over night and resulted in a definite choice by the national legislators of San Francisco over New Orleans as the place for the Panama Exposition in 1915.

"It is doubtful if there is on record a more trenchant and power-compelling advertisement than this," writes S. C. Lambert, in Printers' Ink, "which, although sent by telegraph at a late stage in the fight, awoke the united fighting spirit of the West, and created a tidal wave of over 100,000 letters and telegrams that surged in upon Washington, swamped its telegraphic facilities and reversed the action of the committee on industrial arts and exposition, which had reported favorably to New Orleans, nine to six."

Woman Cook For President Taft.

President Taft is probably the only ruler who employs a woman cook. The white house cook at the present time has not been in the employ of the president over a year, her predecessor having married one of the white house policemen several months ago. The new cook is an Irish woman and cooked for the Taft family when she resided in Cincinnati. She is especially skilled in cooking meals to suit President Taft, who is rigidly in favor of all good, solid food of the kind that our forefathers ate. The salary of the president's cook is not nearly as large as those of foreign rulers, but she does not have as much work to attend to. Mrs. Taft arranges all the menus, as she takes charge of the remainder of the household's duties.

How to Poison Flies.

The Raleigh News and Observer says that the people of West Raleigh held a meeting last week to organize a Fight-the-Flies Club. They have studied the danger to health in these pests, and in the privilege of hearing an address by Dr. R. I. Smith, Entomologist of the North Carolina State Experiment Station, who has given study and practical tests to the subject of breeding of flies and also the best way to poison flies. His address has borne fruit. In one fly in West Raleigh, by the use of formaldehyde as suggested by Dr. Smith, one and a half quarts of dead flies were picked up in a place where the flies were particularly bad. He says that there are several successful fly poisons that can be bought in any community and we have learned quite recently that formaldehyde is one of the best and cheapest poisons that can be used. This costs about fifty cents a pint and one tablespoonful in a cup full, one-half milk and one-half water is all that is necessary, and should be exposed in shallow plates. It is well to put a piece of bread in the plate. This poison is most successful if used in places where flies are very numerous, such as milk rooms, back porches where refuse is often placed, or around the kitchens.

When attempting to poison flies, it is best to use the poison outside of the building as well as inside. Flies can often be poisoned by the hundreds on porches where they are waiting to enter whenever the door is opened.

We will never succeed in greatly lessening the house-fly nuisance by simply poisoning or trapping the flies, but whenever people become interested enough to prevent flies from breeding they will find that a little additional work towards killing off the flies by the use of poisons, sticky fly traps, etc., will be worth the trouble.

State Normal and Industrial College.

Attention is directed to the advertisement of the State Normal and Industrial College, which appears in this issue. Every year shows a steady growth in this institution devoted to the higher education of the women of North Carolina.

The College last year had a total enrollment of 909 students. Eighty-seven of the ninety-eight counties of the State had representatives in the student body. Nine-tenths of all the graduates of this institution have taught or are now teaching in the schools of North Carolina. The dormitories are furnished by the State and board is furnished at actual cost. Two hundred appointments were free tuition, apportioned among the several counties according to school population. The next term applicants who wish to attend this institution next year should make application as early as possible, as the capacity of the dormitories is limited.

Kind of Man That Counts.

There is one man essential to the welfare of this or any other town. The average every day citizen who lives within his means, cares little for social functions or society shinning, who pays his debts, is the man after all who is helping most to build up the town or town. He is not only the kind of man who is making this town but he is the man who will keep it going. This fellow about whom we are talking is the salt of the earth. Sometimes he is a laborer, a shop hand or day laborer, but he is a professional man. No matter what his station in life; he is always on the job and can be depended on.—Asheboro Courier.

Found a Centipede.

Mr. Hallman Fink captured a centipede on the floor of his kitchen yesterday and brought it to this office where it has created no little curiosity. It is a small one, about two and a half inches in length and resembles the thousand leg worm but is larger and has a different shaped head. It has twenty-one pairs of legs, four pairs of eyes and seven antennae. Its bite is very painful and dangerous to larger animals and to man. They feed largely on insects and pursue them into their lurking places and for this reason they are regarded in some places as more useful than injurious. So far as is known this is the first centipede ever discovered here.—Concord Times.

Panama Canal to Open in 1915.

The date when the Panama canal will be opened is officially for January 1, 1915, but the work of excavation possibly will be completed much earlier. Of course, it slides in Culabra cut continue, it may take the full time to finish the excavation that is, if there are no greater than now anticipated, the work will be well advanced towards the finishing touches in three more years. The contracts for the installation of the operating machinery call for its completion time that the canal can be tried out by the end of December, 1913, and unless unforeseen delays occur in the manufacture of the equipment the canal will be ready for emergencies before the fixed opening date.
