The Corn Crop.

It has been said that "there is more corn made of a dry year, than of a wet year." The truthfulness of it, depends upon "how dry, or how wet." Then it used to be more true than now. That was before farmers had began to improve their lands, using fertilizers, etc. They did not expect big crops on upland. Only bottom lands produced paying crops. But in recent years, farmers, to a certain extent, have moved cause, in a number of years, they could produce more corn on up land than on bottom lands. This year certainly has been an exceptional one, and hard on up land farmers.
