Killing at Newton.

News reaching here Sunday doubt, his heart-to-heart talk, morning told of a homicide near as he called it, will bear rich Newton late Saturday night, A fruit in the lives and work of the remark made by a girl is alleged to have been the cause of the death of Robert Leonhardt, aged 23 years, who was shot and killed by Lester Hughey shortly before midnight on the farm of Zeb Hunt, about three-quarters of a mile west of the town. Hughey was jailed on the charge of murder some time after the shooting, by the sheriff, who found him at the Hughey home.

Leonhardt was in company with the girl Saturday night, when, it is said, Hughey met of the Administration's tasks is them, drew a pistol and declared his intention of shooting the girl.

"Don't shoot her, Lester; shoot me," Leonhardt is said to was opening his coat when Hughey is allegdd to have fired. Leonhardt lived but a few minutes, his last words being a prayer for mercy from his maker. From the scene of the shooting Hughey went home.

Funeral services for Leonhardt, were held Sunday and the body was taken to Lincolnton for burial.
