round wage increase. The owners objected to consideration of the new terms during the war and asked the miners to accept the existing agreements plus a war bonus. After conferences, union officials agreed to recommend a compromise, which was arranged through the board of trade. The miners, however, voted yesterday against this, and the government had to take action.

The miners assert that their demands would mean no more than six pence (12 cents) a ton and argue that as the owners are receiving much more for their coal than previously they could well pay it. As a matter of fact, Mr. Runciman today also introduced a bill in the house to regulate the price of coal.

In the house of lords the Marquis of Lansdowne, a member of the cabinet without portfolio, stated that 22 or 23 British divisions were in France and Belgium and expressed the opinion that although recruits were flowing in, the country would not much longer tolerate the anomalies and injustices of the voluntary system, which was taking unusual proportions of married men. A national register, he said, would be useful should it be found necessary to introduce compulsory military service. He intimated also that the munitions question was being handled satisfactorily.
