In case the French should decide to hold Verdun at any cost, the British may strike in the Ypres sector, but only in that event.

The strategy of the allies evidently is to let the Germans hammer away on the western front, where very little can be gained and to inflict the maximum punishment on them with the minimum of losses for themselves, meanwhile handing over to Russia the task of smothering the Austrians in a field where entrenched lines are almost impossible. The chances for operations in the field in Galicia and Volhynia are unlimited.

not irreparable. Our chief regret at seeing the judge turn soldier is the fact that he had een making his court, so far as he was able, less an instrument of venscance than a corrective influence in he community. We are not offering him the palpably insincere praise of alleging that he made no mistakes; but we do assert with pride that he abored earnestly to save what remants of manhood could be salvaged from every malefactor brought before him. That type of judge is not to be ound in every aw office and that is why we consider the Iossof Brown a

Needless to say, both he and his omrade in arms will render the state and the nation good service; and if we regret partir with the men, Greensboro is correspondingly proud of furnishing such soldiers.
