A NERVOUS WRECK

From Three Years' Suffering, Says Cardui Made Her Well.

Texas City, Tex.—In an interesting statement, Mrs. G. H. Schill, of this town, says: "For three years I suffered untold agony with my head. I was unable to do any of my work. I just wanted to sleep all the time, for that was the only ease I could get, when I was asleep. I became a nervous wreck just from the awful suffering with my head. I was so nervous that the least noise would make me jump out of my bed. I had no energy, and was unable to do anything. My son, a young boy, had to do all my household duties. I was not able to do anything until I took Cardui. I took three bottles in all, and it surely cured me of those awful headaches. That has been three years ago, and I know the cure is permanent, for I have never had any headache since taking Cardui. ... Nothing relieved me until I took Cardui. It did wonders for me." Try Cardui for your troubles—made from medicinal ingredients recommended in medical books as being of benefit in female troubles, and 40 years of use has proven that the books are right. NO REASON KNOWN FOR PRIVATE'S DEATH

The Asheville Times Friday contained the following in regard to the death near there of Private Robert Jones of Hickory: "The body of Robert Jones, whose home is in Hickory, a private in company F, Second North Carolina Infantry, here on duty under Lieutenant Byrd guarding the concrete railroad bridge over the French Broad river, was found this morning at 5 o'clock on the west side of the bridge near Murphy junction. All indications point to suicide. "The body was discovered by a freight train crew of the Southern railway. The crew reported the finding of the body to Sergeant H. A. Johnson who was asleep in his tent near the bridge. Sergeant Johnson notified Lieutenant Byrd and the two men went to the scene. They found Jones lying on his left side, with head practically split open. A .30-caliber regular army rifle was found lying at his side and showed that it had been discharged. A stick about 15 inches long still remained in the trigger guard of the rifle. "Mr. Jones has just returned from his home in Hickory yesterday morning, where he had gone Monday, without getting permission from the proper authorities. He seemed to be in the best of spirits yesterday, attended the carnival on Biltmore avenue last night it is stated, and no reason whatever could be given for his act, assuming that it was suicide. "Mr. Jones enlisted in the army at Fort Oglethorpe, Ga., on October 30, 1916, giving his age as 18. He was assigned to Company F at Camp Stewart, El Paso, Texas, in November, 1916, and remained with that organization until his death. Lieutenant Byrd in charge of detail, stated this morning that he was shocked to hear of the death of Jones. He said that he had always known him as a cheerful nature and given the least bit of trouble in the organization and seemed perfectly satisfied with army life."

DO NOT BELIEVE HE COMMITTED SUICIDE

Doubt that Mr. Robert Jones, the Hickory boy whose death occurred at Asheville Friday night, ended his life, is expressed in several quarters today. Mr. C. L. Whitener, who saw the young man here Wednesday, said he was in the best of spirits, and the Asheville Times also declares that he was in fine humor Thursday. It is said that if he had shot himself with the army rifle, as was supposed, his head would have been blown completely off by the charge, or at any rate the wound would have been much larger. He was a fine young man, entered the army at the call of his country and there was no known reason for his doing anything rash. It was also said that he had permission from one of the officers to return home to visit his parents.

THE MENACE TO RUSSIA

Springfield Republican. It would be unwise to ignore, to underrate, or to fail to do everything possible to avert the peril to the allies and to this country involved in the weak and disorganized condition of Russia. The most immediate danger was removed by the remarkably successful coup d'etat, and the new government has shown not only organizing ability but a hold on the greater part of the people. If the country were not exposed to hostile intrigue and to military attack there is good reason to think that the marvelous transformation from absolutism to the most advanced democracy, might be effected without the internal convulsion which great upheavals usually cause. Under the present conditions, however, we can be sure only that Russia is in imminent danger from outside and that the reports from within are gravely disquieting. Only bad conditions, for example, could have led the war minister, Guchkoff, to issue a printed appeal to soldiers, not to leave the front. To leave the front without permission is desertion; in an army where discipline is intact deserters are shot. Is the Russian army crumbling? We do not know. What Guchkoff refers to when he says "All Russia is stricken at the sad news from the front" is not clear from the context; it may be only an appeal to the soldiers to end the disgraceful wholesale desertion, but it is disquieting. From other sources we hear of soldiers who had supposed the war over and were struck with dismay at hearing that they must go back to the front. Nor is there much comfort in the declaration made by the Baltic fleet that it is in complete readiness to fight to the last in defense of Russia, and that the German belief that it is demoralized is unfounded. It may be true, yet when discipline is impaired, naval strength is always the first to suffer. The downfall of France as a sea power dates from the French revolution, when a democratic organization was imposed upon the navy. During the upheavals of a decade ago the Russian navy suffered far worse than the army, and had hardly recovered morale when the present war began. If things have gone wrong there, the peril to Petrograd will be greatly increased, for only the strength of the Russian fleet-in-being has kept the Germans hitherto from using sea transport for a powerful attack in the
