HELP THE RED CROSS GENEROUSLY

President Wilson has designated this week as "Red Cross Week," and it is proposed to raise a fund of $100,000 to bind up the world's wounds. Much of this money will be required for surgeons, nurses, hospitals and supplies for our own soldiers and sailors, but other millions will be needed to relieve the impoverished peoples of Europe, to rebuild ruined cities, to give comfort to starving thousands. Every man, woman, and child in America should contribute to this fund. The result of the week's campaign will show whether our national boast of being the greatest humanitarian of the world has a solid foundation. Last week Americans proved that they would make unprecedented contributions for the arts of war. This week Americans can prove that their old passion for the arts of peace, for the alleviation of suffering and distress, has not been numbered. Give a dollar if you can give no more; give a million if less would offend your conscience.

A BRAVE MAN'S PRAYER

Louis Untermeyer in Christian Register.
God, though this life is but a wraith, Although we know not what we use, Although we grope with little faith, Give me the heart to fight—and lose!
Ever insurgent let me be, Make me more daring than devout; From sleek contentment keep me free, And fill me with a buoyant doubt. Open my eyes to vision's gift With beauty, and with wonder lit— But let me always see the dirt, And all that spawn and die in it.
Open my ears to music; let Me thrill with spring's first flutes and drums, But never let me dare forget The bitter ballads of the slums.
From compromise and things half-done, Keep me with stern and stubborn pride; And when at last the fight is done, God, keep me still unsatisfied!

ONE WHO WON'T BE HELD BACK

By Charles J. Rosebault of the Vigilantes.
He was an unusually willing and helpful salesman. Of his own volition he suggested that the shoe, respecting which I was doubtful, was a little short in the vamp and did not properly follow the outlines of the foot. Three times he descended to the basement and twice he climbed up to the gallery around the upper part of the shop. I could see him there opening many boxes and examining their contents with great care before he selected what he thought would be best suited.
He was blond, with an upstanding pompadour of closely curled hair, blue-eyed and keenly alert I could see that he was the type of young man that concentrates upon his work and I was satisfied that he would win promotion in ten years at the most he would have a shop of his own. He was the sort that must be his own boss. With the opportunities for the industrious obliging merchant which New York offers he would have success—plenty of it.
I suggested something of the sort—just to show that I appreciated his attention.
"Maybe," he answered calmly. "Just now I am looking for a different job."
"What?" I asked.
"I was in the navy—spent four years there, three on the Concord and one in the quartermasters department. That's where I learned the shoe business."
"You could be of service now, certainly," I observed.
"That's what I've been thinking," he replied, with a smile. "If it wasn't for my lungs—fact is, I've just got back from a sanitarium."
"That would put you out, of course," I agreed.
"I won't let it," he returned, with a determined look in his eyes. "They wouldn't take me when I tried to enlist the other day—I'm just too old to be drafted—but they said they might, if I got stronger. I will, for I am taking good care of myself."
There was a momentary pause, while he assured himself that he had found the perfect fit.
"A lot of young men haven't learned to look at things right," he remarked seriously. "We've got only one life to live. What is the difference whether you die in bed, in a street accident or on the battlefield? It makes a big difference though whether you're doing what you think you ought to when your time comes."
"I see you're bound to get in," I observed as I paid my bill.
"I'm going back to my pals," he returned with a glint in the blue eyes. "I wouldn't feel comfortable if I didn't."

AIRSHIPS TO WIN WAR IN EUROPE

Washington, June 20.—Domination of the air by the allies is the object sought to be accomplished by the bill which soon will be introduced in congress whereby $600,000,000 will be appropriated to provide the most stupendous fleet of aeroplanes and hydro-planes the world ever has seen.
Such domination is recognized by the experts of all the allies as absolutely essential to the overthrow of Prussian autocracy, and that end will be attained by applying the hitherto latent energy of the United States to the task of increasing the capacity of those factories which are now manufacturing aeroplanes, building new factories for the production of machines of a type that never have been made in this country and mobilizing the vast army of mechanics in the United States for service in what is deemed the most important undertaking of the war.
"The war department is behind the aircraft plans with every ounce of energy and enthusiasm at its command," said Mr. Baker, secretary of war.
The building of aeroplanes and hydro-aeroplanes and the training of aviators, explained Mr. Baker, can be carried on without interfering in any way with the training of the armies and the furnishing of munitions and supplies to the allies. Those matters, however will take time, and the most effective and speedy way in which the United States can make its participation felt in the titanic struggle in which it is now so vitally interested is by devoting at least a part of its energy to the great air project.

DR. ANDREWS WRITES FROM PENNSYLVANIA

Through your columns I wish to say "howdy" to the good people of Hickory and Catawba county. I came into York county on Saturday, June 9 to join in the great movement of the Association of Schools, Colleges and Seminaries to raise a million dollars in this the 400th anniversary of the reformation for the better equipment and larger endowment of our schools. I have preached and spoken at Stovertown, York, New Salem, Litchy's church near Spring Grove, Porter's Siding and Trinity church in Hanover. Everywhere I have been met with the most cordial reception and the pastors say that the response to appeals for funds is beyond their expectation in these war times. Today I visited a canning factory in Spring Grove with a capacity of 60 cans a minute. The manager told me that they have 200 acres of sweet corn and a lot of peas, tomatoes and pumpkins to can. Think what it will mean to the farmers and truckers of Catawba county if we had a canning factory with a capacity of 36,000 cans a day. Why not produce and conserve what we need in our own county?
The wheat and potato crops are simply fine up here and the gardens give evidence of abundant supply. The strawberry crop is now in full season, and the peach and apple trees are well loaded. Tomorrow I expect to go to Philadelphia and on Thursday I want to attend the Deaconess and Old Folks Home Donation Day in Allentown. There I expect to say a word for Catawba College.

MR. SUNDAY'S CAMPAIGN

Very truly yours,
J. D. ANDREW,
Spring Grove, Pa., June 18, 1917.

Mr. William A. Sunday has closed a three months' post office campaign in this city which has resulted in nearly hundreds of thousand of persons. Neither his enemies nor the police have reported that any person has been injured morally by the campaign, and on the positive side, there are undoubtedly many thousands to whom the renewed contact with religious activity has been helpful. The campaign also improved the evangelist in that it eradicated from his vocabulary certain crudities and vulgarities that formerly had led certain of his off-ends to proscription. It has been a grand success in that it has attracted so many persons to the beginning of the great and narrow path. The credit in that goes to him; if they wander away from the path the fault is theirs.
The Baptist congregation at Val-dese Sunday night presented Rev. S. D. McAbee with a nice preacher's Bible. He appreciated the gift and it will enable him better to prepare his sermons.
Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Mangum and two children of Gastonia on their way to visit relatives in Morganton, stopped over here and spent a day with her sister, Mrs. J. E. Gordon. They motored through in a car.
