

Do You Have Headache?

If you do, very likely it comes from your eyes and can be relieved with properly fitted glasses. Eye strains, headache and nervous troubles, the result of optical defects can be relieved. My examinations are made by the most modern methods and greatest care exercised in the selection of the proper formula for the lenses in every instance.

Holy Trinity Evangelical Lutheran W. E. Murray, pastor. Sunday school, service at 9:45 o'clock. Everybody is most cordially invited to attend.

Morning service at 11 o'clock. The pastor will preach on the subject: "What Made Jesus So Popular?"

Evening service at 8 o'clock. Sermon also by the pastor. The subject then will be: "The Body of Christ." Good music. Come and worship with us.

Presbyterian

Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. Preaching services at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Christian Endeavor meets at 7 p. m. The pastor, Rev. J. G. Garth, will preach at both services. In the morning the subject of the sermon will be "Love Casting Out Fear." The evening subject will be a message to young people. All invited to these services. A special invitation to soldiers who are strangers in town and any others, visitors, travelling men, or new citizens.

First Methodist

Rev. A. L. Stanford, pastor. Sunday school at 9:45 a. m. Last Sunday nearly 400 were present. Can't we beat that tomorrow? Let every member be present. Preaching at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. by the pastor. At night the subject will be "The Second Coming of Christ and the Significance of the World War." This subject so often mentioned in the bible and so little understood today will be discussed, "Is this the last war? Are we living in the last days? Is the return of Christ imminent? What will be the nature of His coming?" These are vital questions. Good music. A cordial invitation. The military boys are especially invited to these services.

THE FLOOD IN LEASH

Baltimore American.

After Kerensky, the deluge! Unless the strong man, physically weak, shall be able to lift his country to the plane of stable and orderly government, the deluge will be let loose and Russia will witness scenes that will parallel anything that marked the course of the French revolution. Russia is trembling upon the brink of destiny. It is standing upon the narrow strip of land, represented by the Kerensky government, with sound constitutionalism upon one hand and the morass of revolution upon the other. A single wrong step and the nation, instead of reaching the high ground of security will plunge into the endless mire of civil war. No more significant announcement has been made in the history of Russia for 300 years than that which is contained in the brief dispatch that Kerensky has returned from Petrograd and withdrawn his resignation, and that he attended a ministerial meeting and conferred with various political leaders.

At that ministerial meeting the one man who is looked to for the success of the nation consented to resume his office as premier, with the selection of his own government and with powers of virtually unlimited dictatorship. The only element that failed to vote to support him was that of the ultra socialistic radicals—the Maximilists. These forerunners of the disorders of Russia are the element with which Kerensky will have to cope. Having the Soldiers and Peasants' council solidly behind him and the solid support of the Duma and the ecclesiastical authorities, Kerensky stands upon the pinnacle of power. Will he be able to carry the banner Excelsior to the lofty heights of settled popular government? Upon the outcome of this new situation for Russia depends the internal prospects and the nature of the outward relations of the great, though disorderly, democracy.

The all night debate that led to the recognition of the Russian government, with supreme powers lodged in the hands of the man who has become the idol for the greater part of the nation, will rank, in the estimation of the Russians themselves, as the most momentous assembly in the history of the nation since the year 1613, when the first Romanoff was elected. Hailed as the savior of Russia, Kerensky is hedged about by a mass of theoretical propositions of liberty and equality that are heard amid the sizzle of political groups. And he is facing an inveterate opposition upon the part of a small but fierce group of reactionaries. Behind the latter are to be found the hidden, but insidious, workers of the will of Germany. And over all the prospect is to be seen the clouds of the separate peace movement that has not yet been dissipated from Russia's skies.

Should Kerensky fail in his herculean undertaking, Russia will be a subject for strong, although sympathetic and guiding, police control by the nations of the ally group. And the one efficient policeman to be installed along the east front will be Japan. That is if the government and aspirations out of harmony with the aims and endeavors of the western allies for Russia. Japan will be needed not only as a policeman—indeed, there may be no need for it in this capacity in any event. Russia may turn to the United States for political guidance that this country could well afford to supply, supported by the necessary military force to enable the representatives of the true democracy of the nation to gain the establishment of Russia upon a firm footing. However, the United States has no ambitions to serve on the East front. But Japan will be needed to repel the Teutons, to relieve the Galician drive and to free Russia from the shackles of Austria and march on to Vienna. Some force extraneous to Russia must be employed if Russia falls. The Russian people know this full well. They are, therefore, determined to give to their ideal leader the support needed for success. ## THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

An Ambition and a Record

THE needs of the South are identical with the needs of the Southern Railway: the growth and success of one means the upbuilding of the other.

The Southern Railway asks no favors—no special privilege not accorded to others.

The ambition of the Southern Railway Company is to see that unity of interest that is born of co-operation between the public and the railroads; to see perfected that fair and frank policy in the management of railroads which invites the confidence of governmental agencies to realize that liberality of treatment which will enable it to obtain the additional capital needed for the acquisition of better and enlarged facilities incident to the demand for increased and better service; and, finally—

To take its niche in the body politic of the South alongside of other great industries, with no more, but with equal liberties, equal rights and equal opportunities.

"The Southern Serves the South."
