

You Need Your Eyes

The only way you can have them is to take care of them. It is too late after they are ruined.

If you have trouble come in and have them examined. If glasses are needed, I will prescribe some that will preserve your eyes and make your work easy and pleasant.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Black, a son.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Elliott and Miss Kate spent yesterday in Charlotte.

Mr. G. M. Goforth of Lenoir was a Hickory visitor yesterday.

Former Sheriff Deaton and Mr. Earle Moser, two prominent automobile dealers of Statesville, were Hickory visitors yesterday.

Col. Jas. A. Robinson of Durham was in Hickory today en route to Lenoir, where next week he will report the Caldwell County Fair.

Mrs. Rowell Holt and son, after spending the summer with Mrs. Holt's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Martin, have returned to their home at Montgomery, Ala.

Messrs. J. D. Elliott and K. C. Menzies, two of the six Hickory men named as delegates to the Southern Commercial Congress, which meets in New York the middle of next month, expect to attend. It was not learned who the other delegates are.

Master Carl Wilbur Childers, small son of Mrs. Gordon Childers, is some better after the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Laura Ransauer to-day, and little Miss Brent Childers, who also was ill, is much better. With their mother, the children came here from Ohio the first of the week and it is thought the long trip caused their illness.

Automobile tire thieves were reported as numerous at the fair this week and Mr. Perry E. Deitz today is advertising for an axle tire, rim and inner tube which were removed from the rear of his machine yesterday. It is said that several persons recovered their tires. Mr. Deitz' loss is about $40.

PEARL WHITE AT PASTIME TODAY

The special attraction at the Pastime this afternoon and tonight will be Pearl White in the "Fatal Ring" chapter eight. Also Hearst-Pathe News and a two reel "Lonesome Luke Comedy" that will make you laugh until your sides hurt. The following is a synopsis of the story of the eighth chapter of the Fatal Ring:

A thrilling fight and a climax that ends the picture with great suspense are features of this chapter. Pearl is temporarily blinded and is captured by Carl and his men. They realize suddenly that she is really not blinded, but is spying upon them. Leaving the diamond in a safe they connect the switch which will blow any one to atoms who attempts to open it. As the picture fades from view Pearl is turning the combination.

NOTICE OF RIGHT TO DEMAND THE SUBMISSION OF WATER BOND ORDINANCE TO A VOTE OF THE QUALIFIED VOTERS OF THE CITY OF HICKORY.

Whereas on the 14th day of August, 1917, the City Council of Hickory passed an ordinance authorizing the issuance of the City of Hickory's Bonds in an amount not in excess of fifteen thousand dollars for the purpose of extending the water works system.

And whereas said ordinance contained a paragraph in literal compliance with Section 17 of (1) of "The Municipal Finance Act of 1917," providing that said ordinance should not be submitted to the voters of the city, unless within thirty days after its first publication a petition for its submission was filed under said Municipal Finance Act.

And whereas said portion of said section is inconsistent with other parts of "The Municipal Finance Act of 1917," other parts containing provisions for submission to the voters upon filing a petition within thirty days after the last publication of said ordinance:

And whereas the City Council desires to comply with the spirit as well as with the letter of the law: Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that the said Water Bond Ordinance will be submitted to the voters for their approval or disapproval, if a petition is filed within thirty days after the last publication of said ordinance; and that the city will not issue or attempt to issue any Water Bonds until thirty days after the last publication of said ordinance has passed without a petition having been filed or if one is so filed will not issue or attempt to issue such bonds, unless the ordinance shall be approved by the voters of the city. The voters have until the 10th day of October, 1917, to file a petition for referendum.

KERENSKY-KORNILOFF

IMBRIGLIO

Springfield Republican.

It is not possible as yet to arrive at the full truth in regard to the extraordinary controversy which followed the collapse of the Korniloff rebellion. Was that a rebellion or was it a more or less accidental clash in the carrying out of plans in which both Korniloff and Kerensky had a part? The exploitation of the incident in the Russian press appears to be mainly hostile to Kerensky and the version of it which has reached this country may be open to suspicion, yet Kerensky has, nevertheless, means of publicity and the genuineness of the published documents, the text of which has not yet been transmitted, has not been denied. Yet while they might incriminate the Russian premier in the eyes of the bolshevik, and thus give a weapon to his opponents on the conservative side, the facts thus far alleged do not appear to be very damning. Just as it was necessary during the rebellion to avoid a snap judgment of a man like Korniloff, who had shown full devotion to the revolutionary cause, so it is needful now to avoid a hasty opinion of Kerensky, a man whose honesty of purpose has been freely conceded by opponents in close contact with him.

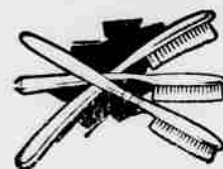

Briefly, the charge now brought against Kerensky by the bolsheviks is that he entered into a conspiracy against the revolution, by planning to break up the Petrograd revolution-ary organizations on the pretext of crushing an imaginary bolshevik plot. Much the same thing is alleged on the other side in defense of Gen. Korniloff. The version given by the Rech is that Korniloff drew up a plan to save the country by the establishment of revolutionary military courts the military control of railways and munitions factories, and the restoration of officers' disciplinary powers. This plan, it is said, was rejected by Kerensky. But the latter sent Gen. Savinkoff to headquarters to ask Korniloff to dispatch a cavalry corps and the "savage" division to Petrograd to aid in establishing martial law there. To this message Gen. Savinkoff is said to have replied: "Now comes the mysterious part of the affair, the arrival at army headquarters of Vladimir Lvoff, bearing, it is said, three alternative proposals from Kerensky: (1) Kerensky's resignation; (2) a director; (3) a dictatorship for Korniloff.

Thus put, the story appears improbable in the extreme, and all the more so because the plan for a dictatorship provided a place in it for Korniloff. If any mention was made of a dictatorship for him it would hardly be by putting it on a level with the other two alternatives, and since the messenger Lvoff (who is not to be confounded with the very able and upright man who was temporarily president) is represented as the hero of the imbriglio, it is probable that he falsified his message as well as the answer. For it is asserted by the Rech and Novoe Vremya that returning to Kerensky Lvoff reported that Korniloff had demanded a dictatorship. That was the version given to the press at the time of the rebellion, and it hardly seemed in keeping with what was known of his character. That Kerensky had offered it would be equally improbable and seems to be disproved by his firm and rapid action against Korniloff. The case is quite tangled enough without the further complication added by the Novoe Vremya, which says that Kerensky, to make a clever appeal to Gen. Korniloff, "Do you insist?" Whereupon Korniloff, supposing that the directory plan was referred to, answers as concisely, "Yes, I insist." A dramatist would hardly dare to make his play hinge on so improbable a detail, but extreme improbability does not always guarantee the truth of a historical incident. The however, is the way in which the inside history of the Korniloff rebellion is being told to Russia, and whether it is literally true or not its romantic and sensational character will give it a wide hearing and probably a ready credence, and what is believed to be true may sometimes be as important as the actual truth.

The chief question, just now leaving these historical details to be sifted by time, is how the controversy is likely to affect the position of the provisional government, and more particularly of Kerensky himself, who has given the government thus far such limited cohesive power as it has had. If the charges brought against him are well founded he may perhaps justly be accused by his radical associates of duplicity or at all events of secretly planning measures for the restoration of order to which they would have given their sanction. That he was in any way false to the revolution of which as much as any man he is entitled to be proud, is a moment he cannot. For the declaration of martial law at Petrograd there were ample reasons in the existing military and political situation following the collapse of the Russian armies, and Kerensky's rejection of the Korniloff plan for military control of railways and munitions factories shows how limited was his yielding to the demand for national discipline. That he may have entertained the notion of a director even earlier than when that expedient was bruited during the crisis is not improbable, for the directory has excellent revolutionary standing from the resort to it by France. In such a "war cabinet" Korniloff would naturally have had a place as commander of the armies of the revolution, and if the general Russian estimate of his stiff but honest character is correct he would have served his country well but for the treachery of the go-between Lvoff. Whatever the precise facts may be, it is one of the most extraordinary episodes of the war or of modern history.

GOOD RAINFALL IN HICKORY LAST NIGHT

It didn't rain so much yesterday and last night as you imagined, as you woke up from time to time and heard the wind rustling the leaves and the water pattering on the roof. It was a downright good shower, amounting to .97 of an inch, and left most upland in good condition for the plow. The mercury registered 70 degrees at the highest and 50 at the lowest, but wisecracks today said the wind was coming from the north and a cold snap was in prospect.

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY COMPANY

An Ambition and a Record

THE needs of the South are identical with the needs of the Southern Railway the growth and success of one means the upbuilding of the other.

The Southern Railway asks no favors—no special privileges not accorded to others. The ambition of the Southern Railway Company is to see that every interest that is born of co-operation between the public and the railroad; to see perfected that fair and frank policy in the management of railroads which invites the confidence of governmental agencies to realize that liberality of treatment which will enable it to obtain the additional capital needed for the acquisition of better and enlarged facilities incident to the demand for increased and better service and quality.

To take its niche in the busy traffic of the South alongside of other great industries, with no more, but with equal liberties, equal rights and equal opportunities.

"The Southern Serves the South."
