BRITISH CONTROL FOOD IS EXPLAINED

By the Associated Press. London, Oct. 6 .- The best summary of Great Britain's food control plan is given by Lord Rhondda, the controller, in the first issue of the new fortnightly magazine he has begun to publish under the title of the National Food Journal. Lord Rhondda states:

"My policy, broadly stated, is to fix the price of those articles of prime necessity over the supply of which I can obtain effective control at all stages from the producer down to the retailer. Such prices will, as far as possible, be fixed on the principle of allowing a reasonable prewar profit to those engaged in the production and distribution of the particular commodity. Indeed the policy will be one in effect of determining profits at every stage, though it will take the form of fixing

"Every effort will be made to prevent speculation, and unnecessary middlemen will be eliminated. Existing agencies-I make a strong point on this-will be utilized for the purposes of distribution under license and control, and under the supervision of local food controllers to be appointed by the local author-

"I am anxious that producer, seller and consumer should realize that prices are not being interfered with in a haphazard way or without pur-While I am primarily concerned with the protection of the consumers, I have to see that the legitimate interests of 'food producers and other traders are safeguarded, and above all to avoid as far as practicable action which may tend to curtail the necessary supplies.

"It is, of course, impossible that in this crisis supplies can be prosuch regularity as in times of peace, and the consumer should also understand that he must of necessity pay high prices. My object is to see that supplies are forthcoming as far as they are available, and that the prices are not exclusive.

"I am glad to be able to say that the general position of our essential food supplies is satisfactory, but 1 Schools will open shortly, but now stroyed by fire can easily be lowered the absolute need for economy in the use of all foodstuffs."

New Series "Four-Ninety" Touring

Chevrolet "Forty-Nine" Touring is "light-footed," but not too light. A motor car should not be too heavy nor too light.

If it is too heavy, the weight is liable to affect its efficiency, and expense. If it is too light, it is likely to be dangerous and not keep to the road.

The Chevrolet is medium in weight, but heavy enough so that the car will remain on the road at all times, and light enough so that the machine will not be hard on tires and will be economical in the matter of gasoline consumption.

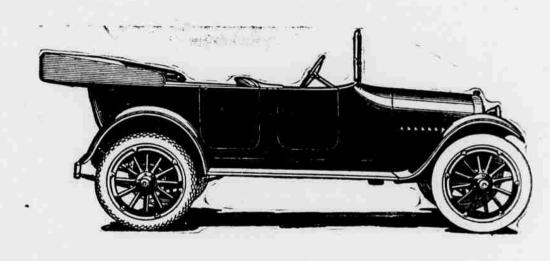

The important things depend on the weight of the car.

The car that is too heavy is not only a burden on the road, but its own weight affects the mechanical efficiency, for the heavy car is likely to rattle itself into the scrap heap.

Model "Four-Ninety" Touring is a favorite for the reason that it is an economical car to own. Now equipped with demountable rims, tilted windshield and other new refinements. Price $635.90 f. o. b. Flint.
