WRITE YOUR BUSINESS FRIEND ABOUT THE BOYS

Washington, Oct. 17.—Mr. Business Man, do you know a business friend in a city or town near a military training camp, and a boy from your home town in that camp, whom you would like to make happy? If so, make the two acquainted with each other. Send your soldier a note of introduction to the business man; and at the same time write to the latter, giving him the name of the soldier.

This is the suggestion made by the War Camp Committee Recreation Service, whose purpose is to provide for all the men in training wholesome social activities and bring camp life and community together in a happy, healthy way. Every American is being asked to "do his bit" in welcoming the soldier and in making his lot while away from home and his friendship, a little less lonesome.

As an illustration of work along this line, attention was called at the national headquarters of the war camp committee service here today, to little printed slips which are being sent out by business men in some cities with their mail.

ITEMS FROM BOONE

Boone, Oct. 17.—Rev. J. A. Downs of Chicago was at chapel exercises on Tuesday and made a splendid talk to the student body. He referred very complimentary to Mr. Roby C. Robbins, a former student of Prof. B. R. Dougerty, and now dean of Aurora College, Illinois.

Professors B. B. Dougherty, Roy M. Brown, I. G. Greer and W. W. Stedman attended a meeting of the University students at Blowing Rock on Friday evening, the 12th.

Prof. Brown made a brief talk in Chapel on Saturday reporting the Alumni meeting of the University students on the evening before in which he said that a committee was appointed to try to induce some one of the University faculty to write history of North Carolina.

Miss Esther Stanbury on Saturday reported a large number of the music students who had made a perfect record in lessons and practice during the past two months. Miss Stanbury is the capable director of music at the training school.

Prof. Stedman will take the prize on celery this year. He had a stalk on exhibit in the school last week that would measure more than two feet high.

The past Saturday and Sunday were visiting days for the students of the school. Quite a number took advantage of the privilege and visited home folks at the homes of their former student friends.

Two hours of social enjoyment at the girls' dormitory on Monday afternoon was a very pleasant affair for the students.

Work on the new boys' dormitory has been moving on for several weeks. When completed it will be a splendid building, well constructed and admirably located.

A very interesting children's exercise was given at the Baptist church on Sunday evening in the interest of State missions. Quite a liberal free will offering was contributed.

The names of the soldier boys from Watauga county were hung up in the Methodist church by Mrs. W. C. Coffey with the design that their names might be prayed for by the congregation. The boys can feel that their friends back home are remembering them wherever they may go.

THE MOST BEAUTIFUL WOMEN IN HICKORY

know how to protect the dainty charm of a good complexion from those forces that would destroy it. With what care and fine discrimination they choose their toilet requisites. It is with these attractive women that OUR PEROXIDE CREAM enjoys its greatest vogue. Our peroxide cream is a delightfully perfumed, vanishing cream of the non-greasy type.

MOTHERS' CLUB TO HOLD RECEPTION FOR TEACHERS

The Mothers' Club of the South school will hold a reception Friday afternoon at the school in honor of the teachers. The hour is 3 o'clock and the reception will continue an hour. There has been much cooperation between parents and teachers in the South school and the reception Friday is another evidence of the good spirit prevailing.

GOVERNOR URGES FARMERS TO BUY

Raleigh, Oct. 17.—In a thrilling peroration on Liberty Bonds, beautifully woven into an address opening the 57th annual state fair, Governor Bickett insisted upon the liberal purchase of these bonds by the farmers of the state. "Bread, Bacon, Butter and Bonds," was the theme of the address.

"This is the first time such an exhibit has ever been seen at any fair in the United States. It is something entirely new under the sun. This exhibit has in it more of strength than the lordly head of the herd the more warmly than the fleece of the leader of the flocks. It will carry you father and waster than the fleetest descendant of John R. Gentry and Nancy Hanks and sustain you longer than the fattest poker in all the land. There is in it more of solid comfort to the inner man than in possum and potatoes and more of juicy sweetness than in all the apples for which our first ancestors threw Paradise away.

"It is absolutely free from the uncertainty that tracks nerves and from the taxes that make the grasshopper a burden and mourners go about the streets. It will add to the glory of youth and to the grandeur of age. In it you can hear a cannon roar to save a little child and see ten million men leap forward to die that others may truly live. It is preferred stock in the 'Gem of the Ocean,' it is star dust from Old Glory. It is the soul of the Red, White and Blue. It is the happiness of all lands, the safety of all seas, the fadeless glory of all skies. It is a United States Liberty bond. Buy one and live forever in your own esteem and in the love and gratitude of a world you may truly live.

The governor was introduced by President R. O. Everett of the fair association, who said the war conditions have afforded the fair new opportunities to the state for conservation.

BIRDS WILL COME AGAIN

Winter, redoubling his attacks,
The field, the roof lays bare;
The prudent birds will love and song
To distant climes repair.

Yet in their calm retreat to us,
Their constant thoughts shall cling;
The birds, that winter drives away,
Will come again with spring.

Fate into exile drives them forth;
We mourn it more than they;
The palace and the cottage walls
Have echoed with their lay,
Then let them, on some tranquil shore,
To happier people sing.

The birds that winter drives away,
Will come again with spring.

Fast to this spot we, hapless birds
With envy see them fly;
Already dark and muttering clouds
O'erhang the northern sky,
Ah, happy, who for some brief space
Can flee on rapturing wing,
The birds, that winter drives away,
Will come again with spring.

They'll think upon the pain well felt,
And—when the storm is past—
Will seek again the aged oak
That braved so oft the blast,
Signs of glad days—more constant than—
To our rich vale to bring
The birds that winter drives away,
Will come again with spring.
—Pierce Jean de Beranger.

GRANDSON OF JEFFERSON DAVIS A LIEUTENANT

A grandson of Jefferson Davis, president of the Southern Confederacy, is a soldier in Camp Greene, Charlotte. He is Jefferson Hayes Davis, lieutenant in a company from Colorado. An older daughter of Jefferson Davis married Mr. Hayes of Colorado and after her father's death, to perpetuate the family name, it was changed to Davis. Lieutenant Hayes' name didn't advertise the fact, as he might have done with profit when he came to Charlotte, that he was a grandson of Jefferson Davis, and he seems to have been discovered by accident. All of which will indicate that Lieut. Davis is all right. He isn't depending on his grandfather's name to take him anywhere. —Statesville Landmark.

THE RIGA DEVELOPMENTS

Springfield Republican.

By the seizure of Oesel and Dago islands the military situation on the Riga front is considerably altered, though only guesses can as yet be made as the immediate purpose of the Germans. The move causes no surprise, because, it was taken as a matter of course, when the German government divulged the secret of the German mutiny, that plans had been laid for countering whatever loss of prestige in the Baltic might be caused by the mutiny. Some naval writers thought that a new sally into the North sea might be imminent, but a move in the Baltic not only is safer, but has more strategic value. The mutiny, in fact, helps to explain the mystery of the failure of the German naval menace to materialize. Reports from Amsterdam as to the spread of revolt in the Baltic fleet may be somewhat exaggerated if there was no overt mutiny there may well have been such uncertainty as to the temper of the crews as to compel the abandonment of plans for using the navy to reinforce the menace to Petrograd.

Such a stroke now would be appreciably less menacing than if made at the time of the drive on Riga late in August, which was precisely the time when the mutiny occurred. It would still, however, be possible by the co-operation of army and fleet to make the Russians much trouble, specially as winter comes later along the Baltic than inland. Throughout the war naval operations in the Baltic have had great strategic importance, and possibly a military Sherlock Holmes might have detected the German mutiny a month ago simply from the mysterious failure of the fleet to carry out operations for which it was known to have prepared, and for which the opportunity was unique. But perhaps mutiny in the German navy was the last thing of which outsiders, would have thought.
