MR. WEBB'S WORK

The Shelby Star prints a story on the work of Representative Webb in the last session of congress and it makes a good showing. It must be admitted that after the United States entered the war, Mr. Webb did his full share in supporting the government.

The objection to Mr. Webb is that his heart was wrong in the first place.
He did not realize that the war in Europe was a struggle between democratic countries and autocratic empires. One in Mr. Webb's position should have condemned the outrageous conduct of the Prussian military machine, but he apologized for it indirectly at least by placing England on the same plane with the Prussian junkers. Our representative was reported to be franking obnoxious pro-German doctrine in his constituents even after the declaration of war, but this report probably was exaggerated. It was before the declaration of war.

We are willing to give Mr. Webb credit, however, for the good work he has done. That he has been of material assistance to the administration there is no doubt. Wrong from the start, he was man enough to turn to the right. That much should be conceded him by fairminded men.

BOOSTING THE CAUSE

President Wilson has disappointed temporarily at least thousands of his supporters by urging them to approve equal suffrage at the polls in the several states where the cause has a small following, there will be disgruntled. Well, the anti should not worry. Equal suffrage is one of the surest things in the world. It may not be realized in North Carolina for 25 years, but the chances are that it will be here in 10. The president's words in Washington Thursday caused some 10,000 political leaders in all sections of the country to studying how they could hedge. Some of them will find the answer in a few days, weeks or months; some of them will require more time. But they will be in line in the end. Woman suffrage is a safe proposition.

Governor Bickett has shown a sincere interest in the welfare of the farmers of the state and his letter to Alexander will appeal to their good sense. Dr. Alexander does not represent the farmers of North Carolina and cannot represent them until he learns to think. There is not a class of men in the state who are better able to use their heads than the farmers, of which the Herr Doktor surely is not.

Mr. Marion Butler rambles "some" in an article he contributes to the Greensboro News. Incidentally his last effort should appeal to a good many people, because many folks will not know exactly what he is firing at though a good many more will understand why he has been called the "Sampson Fox."

Statesville and Concord are classing with Winston-Salem and Durhan, and a few other cities that pull off a few stunts occasionally, but there is nothing the matter with Hickory, Lenoir, Conover and some other places.
They have come to the scratch.

Of the English, Napoleon is reputed once to have said that he could whip the world if his armies were made up of 'em and his generals of Frenchmen. And Napoleon commanded fairly good arms--yes.

We had a hunch that the Austro-German drive would be serious for the allies, but all the good news will be welcomed heartily just the same.

Barring some of Mr. Roosevelt's expressions in regard to others of our friends, we usually agree with him.

Now watch North Carolina fall over itself and not adopt Mr. Wilson's equal suffrage suggestion.

The French army may not be a perfect machine, but it surely does do a good piece of work when it takes a turn.

We see that Charlie Reynolds and Marion Butler, warm bosom friends, hold similar political views regarding the war.

PORTRAITS OF PRESIDENTS
How They Have Fared in the Hands of Painters

Boston Transcript.
John Singer Sargent having actually begun work on his portrait of President Wilson, for the national gallery of Ireland—a commission for which the Dublin institution will be indebted to the late Sir Hugh Lane's generosity—it is of interest to recall some of the existing portraits of former presidents of the United States, in the white house and elsewhere.
Not all of the occupants of the presidential chair have been fortunate enough to have for their portrait painters men of the most eminent renown and unquestionable skill, and in certain instances the choice of the artist would appear to have been determined by anything but the merit system. Nevertheless, on the whole, our usual good lucks has been with us.

Our first president was especially favored by fortune since his counterfeit presentation was confided to the most competent painters and sculptors of his day, Gilbert Stuart, the Peales and Houdons, all artists who were entirely worthy of the exalted honor. Stuart not only painted Washington's portrait repeatedly, but he was also the painter of Washington's four immediate successors in office—John Adams, Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and James Munroe. This was assuredly a piece of good fortune for them, for Stuart and for the country. John Quincy Adams was painted by William Page, an artist of very remarkable qualities, and by G. P. A. Healey, a competent portraitist; while Andrew Jackson's rugged personality was perpetuated on canvass by no less a man than Thomas Sully, one of our most brilliant early painters; also by R. P. W. Earl and others not so well known to fame.

After Jackson's administration there was a rather desolate interregnum in both a political and esthetic sense, with such men as Van Buren, Harrison, Tyler, Polk, Taylor, Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan at the head of the government, and a still more ordinary list of limners to hand down their somewhat uninspiring lineam-ents to posterity. Just before the war of the '60's there were many lean years in American art; our Stuarts, Peales and Sullys were gone and our Sargents had not yet arrived.

As to Lincoln, he has been painted and modeled by many artists of all degrees of ability, some of these artists had the opportunity of making his likeness from life, but most of them, including some of the ablest of the group, were obliged to depend upon photographs and paints.
F. B. Carpenter, Joseph Daniel Huntington and Albion H. Bicknell are among the painters of Lincoln; Augustus Saint-Gaudens and George Gray Barnard among the sculptors.
Gen. Grant, also has been portrayed by many artists, though he was not always happily guided in his choice of the man to do the work; probably by no one was he so well depicted as by William Page.
Of later presidents, we may mention only the vigorous and sympathetic interpretation of the character of Theodore Roosevelt painted by Sargent, in the white house; the sterling likeness of Roosevelt painted by Joseph DeCamp, in the Harvard union; the admirable portrait of Grover Cleveland by the late Wilton Lockwood. In the white house collection of portraits there are all the varying degrees of merit to be found in similar official groups of paintings, but in a general way it may be said of the presidential portrait gallery at large that its earliest and latest periods are its brightest pages, those which reveal the most satisfactory example of art; whereas the middle stretch of the 19th century presents the most depressing waste of mediocrity.

TESTAMENTS FOR THE SOLDIERS
To the Editor of the Record:

In your paper yesterday you published a letter appealing for testaments for the members of old Co. A.
While this unit of the army has been merged into others, yet the boys are still there and we all have here a special fondness for them. It will be long before we forget them as they drilled on our streets as a company, but as so many of them are our own boys their place in our hearts is one no other company can fill.

At the service held for them at the Presbyterian church a promise was made that the world would give testaments. Efforts have been made to find out just how many would be needed. Other churches beside the Lutheran had given their own boys bibles and testaments, but a large number have not been so fortunate.
Capt. Huffman says, 150. Some funds have been contributed for this purpose but not enough to buy 150 at 40 cents each. This is a united affair and all may have an opportunity to give the soldiers what they will prize more than anything else.
Why may not those who wish to contribute to this cause not wait till arrival is made personally to them, but go and make a gift of their own accord. All money for this cause may be handed to Mr. Edgar Yoder, at Umstead and Yoder's store. The men's bible classes of the Sunday schools will also receive donations from their own members for the same purpose. Let us be quick and get the testaments and send them to the boys at Camp Sevier. J. G. GARTER.

RHEUMATISM

Physician Believes a Genuine Remedy for the Disease Has Been Found

Rheuma the wonderful rheumatism remedy sold by Hickory Drug Co., and all druggists gives quicker and more lasting relief than other remedies costing many times as much.
Rheuma passes the deadly poisonous secretions into the bowels and kidneys, from which they are quickly thrown off in a natural, healthy way.
Read what a reputable physician says about Rheuma: "I have made a most careful investigation of the formula employed in the manufacture of Rheuma, and I heartily recommend it as a remedy for all forms of rheumatism. I find Rheuma far in advance of the methods generally employed in the treatment of rheumatism, and altogether different in composition from the remedies usually prescribed."—Dr. Lyons.
This should give any sufferer from rheumatism confidence to try Rheu-

THE SOUTHERN RAILWAY SYSTEM

An Ambition and a Reality THE needs of the South are identical with the needs of the Southern Railway; the growth and success of the upbuilding of the other.
The Southern Railway asks no favors--no special privileges-- accorded to others.
The ambition of the Southern Railway Company is to give unity of interest that is born of co-operation between the railroads; to see perfected that fair and frank policy in the management of railroads which invites the confidence of government agencies; to realize that liberality of treatment which will enable to obtain the additional capital needed for the acquisition of better enlarged facilities incident to the demand for increased and better service; and, finally-- To take its niche in the busy politics of the South alongside of other great industries, with no more, but with equal liberty, rights and equal opportunities.
