WHITE MAN JAILED FOR ALLEGED FORGERY

Carson Wilson, a white man whose home is at Trade, Tenn., is under arrest here on the charge of forging two checks, one of them for $47 and the other for $5. The name of L. M. Thomas was written on the checks as signer or endorser and the man had no trouble in collecting good cash. The larger check went to Raleigh before it was found that it was no good, and the arrest followed late Wednesday. Wilson's father has been wired for and he is expected in Hickory tonight. Wilson drove a truck for a local fruit dealer for a short while.

GERMAN PHYSICIANS FIND NERVOUSNESS CURE

Amsterdam, Nov. 8.—German newspapers announce that the army physicians have discovered a successful method of curing the nervous affliction so frequent among disabled soldiers, which causes a constant trembling of the whole or part of the body.

Dr. Ernest Bayer, head of the nervous hospital at Rodbirken, has outlined a method of electrical treatment, which, it is claimed, often effects a complete cure in a few days, and is almost invariably effective within a period of three weeks. The newspapers describe his method as follows:

"By the application of a gentle electric current which causes no pain whatever, good results have been obtained in a few minutes or at the longest two and a half hours. A course of treatment is required after this, which does not last more than two or three weeks, and in light cases is finished in a few days. New attacks may occur due to excitement or nerve strain, but are easily cured."

WHALERS AGAIN ARE ACTIVE

Ancient Industry Has Undergone Noteworthy Revival in America in Last Few Years.

News dispatches telling of the recent capture of three sperm whales by Grays Harbor hunters serve as a reminder that the ancient industry of whaling has undergone a noteworthy revival in the last few years. It is an interesting fact that this revival has been due largely to the development of the battleship, one of the most modern creations of man.

Hundreds of whalers from American ports sailed the seas in the times before the Civil war, when whale oil was used for lighting. The discovery of petroleum caused a slump in the industry. Historic New Bedford and Nantucket became the boneyards of a once mighty fleet, and the race of hardy American mariners developed by whaling became almost extinct. The old romances passed into tradition.

But as ships, and particularly battleships, grew in size and number it was found that for use in certain of the bearings in their ponderous engines there was nothing that would quite take the place of "case oil," found in the head of the sperm whale, which is strangely clear and does not disintegrate under great pressure and heat. So whalers began to take the sea again. They are not so primitive as those of the older generation, but their cargoes are more than ever in demand.

PLANTS NEED WINTER COLD

Exposure to Low Temperature is Required to Prepare for Another Period of Growth.

The role of winter cold in plant growth has recently been described by Dr. F. V. Coville. After the period of growth in spring and summer there is a period of dormancy before cold weather sets in, and if plants are maintained artificially at a high temperature this dormant period persists. Exposure to cold is needed to activate the plant for another period of growth. Perhaps the liberation of enzymes acts on the stored starches, converting them into sugars, or the phenomenon may be due to a change in the permeability of the cell membrane.

Though normally the stimulus required for a renewal of growth is supplied by cold, mechanical injury or a period of drying may have the same effect. The process occurs independently in any exposed part of a plant, so that if one or two branches of a plant is kept continually warm while the other is subjected to the usual winter chilling, the former will not develop on the return of summer temperatures, though the latter develops as usual. It would be interesting to learn what stimulus takes the place of cold in the equatorial regions.

FREEDOM CAUSE OF INSANITY

Mental Disease Prevalent in Russia After the Revolution is Termed "Mass Psychosis."

The Russian revolution has produced a mental disease which is characterized by Prof. P. J. Rosenbach, president of the Association of Psychiatrists, as "mass psychosis." In other words, the birth of political freedom has been driving many persons insane. It is a mistake to assume that war makes sane men mad, according to Professor Rosenbach, who says that during the war he has treated between 6,000 and 7,000 insane soldiers, but that in no case did he discover that the victim's mental affliction had been caused by war horrors or privations.

During the first month of the revolution the rate of morbidity from mental disease rose to an astonishing extent. Professor Rosenbach inquired into the victims' antecedents and found, he says, that these men and women had been entirely normal and that they did not come from tainted families. He ascribes their sudden insanity to the sudden and drastic changes in Russian political, social and intellectual life. One of the symptoms of "mass psychosis," he says, is "infatuation with committees, delegations and demonstrations." Similar phenomena were observed during the French revolution after the war of 1870-71. Professor Rosenbach observes.

Population Congestion.

According to the most reliable estimates the population of our globe in 1913 was 1,631,517,000. Two-thirds of this total (Europe, 448,000,000; India, 302,000,000; China proper, 823,000,000; Japan, without dependencies, 62,000,000) are concentrated upon less than one-seventh of the earth's surface.

The eight largest cities of Japan (1913) are: Tokyo, 2,100,000 inhabitants; Osaka, 1,226,000; Kioto, 442,000; Yokohama, 394,000; Nagoya, 378,000; Kobe, 378,000; Nagasaki, 176,000; and Hiroshima, 145,000.

Korea, whose population was not exactly known before its annexation to Japan, had, in 1913, a population of 15,458,000.

FIVE TEUTON ARMIES ARE OPERATING AGAINST ITALY

London, Nov. 8.—It is announced at the Austrian-Hungarian army headquarters, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company, that the Teuton armies operating against Italy number five. They are under Generals von Kroatin, von Krass, von Below, von Henriquez and Wurm, with the leadership vested in von Below, who commands the center army. There is a possibility, the dispatch adds, of the Austro-Hungarian fleet cooperating with General Wurm's army along the Adriatic coast.

PEARL WHITE AT PASTIME FRIDAY

Pearl White, your favorite screen star, will be at the Pastime again Friday, November 9th in the 14th chapter of "The Fatal Ring" read the story and come to see her.

Tom Carlton and the Spider rescue Pearl from her dangerous situation on the paddlewheel of the ferryboat. Pearl pluckily continues the chase of Carlslake, the villain in the police boat which speeded to her rescue. Pearl, Tom and the Spider, with the police, overtake the outgoing tramp steamer and the Captain, to save himself, attempts to capture Carlslake. The wily villain outwits him and dives overboard. They find no trace of him in the water, for he has safely concealed himself under the police boat. Reaching shore Carlslake manages to get dry clothes and then takes the Violet Diamond to a notorious fence, who puts it in his vault for safe-keeping. Pearl gets on the trail of Carlslake, and with the Spider, traces him to the fence, and rescues to get the Diamond. She and the Spider in the dead of night break into the pawnshop where the Diamond has been put for safe-keeping and manage to break into the vault. They recover the Violet Diamond, but as they escape "policemen" capture them. One of the "finest" is Carlslake, who in mock politeness, raises his hat, smiles at Pearl and says, "I am afraid, Miss Standish, I will have no trouble you for the Violet Diamond."
