WOLVES KILL RAMS

"Golden eagles and wolves are taking heavy toll from the sheep herds of the upper White River in Alaska and the Yukon," says the current issue of the Hunter-Trapper-Trapper, published in Columbus, Ohio. "The eagles prey chiefly on the lambs, and wolves this fall were killing five rams. John C. Augsburg of Klauane, saw in one day on the St. Clair River, where wolves had killed five rams. They saw wolves in the act of cutting out single rams from a bunch and Augsburg succeeded in killing one of the wolves engaged in such a foray. The ewes and lambs kept to a higher ground of rocks and were not molested."

CAMPAIGN IS ON FOR SCHOOLS OF SYNOD

(BY MAMIE BAYS)

Emphasizing the nation-wide need of education, and of Christian education, Robert E. Speer said recently: "The war has revealed to us the magnitude and gravity of our whole problem of education. A democracy is not safe with such a mass of illiterates as the war has uncovered. But the problem is not solved simply by increasing the percentage of literates to the total population. We need not simply education, but Christian education—training that issues in religious convictions and Christian personalities. * * * Our strength lies in the intelligent religious convictions of our people. In the more comprehensive sense of the term, the whole problem of the church is now more clearly seen to be one of education. We have to bring every available resource to bear to make the pulpit, the Sunday school, the day school, the university, the theological seminary, all our educational factors, efficient in carrying out the real task of the church of training men and women in Christian character."

It is probable that never before in North Carolina has the cause of Christian education, and the need for the same, received such united and such forceful and effective emphasis as it is receiving now, during the progress of the million dollar campaign for Presbyterian schools and controlled by the synod of North Carolina. This campaign will close on March 1, and its success will mean increased equipment and endowment for the ten schools of the synod located in its territory and also for Union Theological Seminary, located at Richmond, Va., and owned and controlled, jointly, by the synods of North Carolina and Virginia.

Sunday, January 11, this campaign will receive special emphasis in Winston-Salem and following the presentation of the cause of Christian education from the Presbyterian pulpits on Sunday morning a canvass of the Presbyterians of the Twin City will be conducted by the general assembly's team of Christian education and the Presbyterians of that city will be requested to pledge $50,000 to endow a chair at Davidson college, and it is expected that this quota will be pledged with a creditable margin.

From the offices of the Million Dollar Campaign Committee, located at Greensboro, it is announced that the pledges to the million dollar fund have reached almost $700,000 leaving more than $300,000 to be secured between now and the closing day of the campaign.

CHARLES RAY AT PASTIME TODAY

Wonderful study in courage is afforded in "The Sheriff's Son," the new Paramount picture starring Charles Ray, which will be shown at the Pastime today. The hero is a young man who has inherited a great fear from his mother, who witnessed an attack upon his father before the boy's birth. He grows up with the sense of fear hanging over him, but the story is constructive throughout and shows how he battles splendidly to overcome his weakness and how he succeeds, winning the girl he loves in the bargain. Mr. Ray is splendidly supported in this picture, his leading woman being beautiful Seena Owen.
