RAISE ART STANDARD FOR FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

Men at Work on Plans to Improve Architecture Buildings and Even Buttons Former Service Men Wear—To Place Simple But Effective Headstones Over Graves

By W. S. Mann.
Washington, April 16.—(Special Star.)
The federal government has increased with such rapidity in the past few years that it has become necessary to raise the standard of its architecture and even the buttons on the uniforms of its men. The federal government is now planning to place simple but effective headstones over the graves of its dead.

1893, where the architecture of the temporary buildings and the landscape and water effects, adopted were far in advance of anything seen in this country up to that time. The men, including Saint-Gaudens, who helped lay out the world's fair grounds were in 1901 named by the senate to draw up a plan for the reconstruction of Washington. Many of their recommendations which since that time have been adopted have come to fruition and in 1919 the commission of the arts was created by act of congress.

The commission members are composed of four persons, and Charles Moore, one of the original commissioners named by President Taft, has served as chairman since 1915. Its personnel today includes four architects of wide reputation, one sculptor and painter, and one engineer officer of the army.

DR. FLOWERS IN FLORIDA

Lakeland, Fla., April 12.—This section is having its earliest frost since the middle of January. After its third attempt to rob a grave it was caught by a steel trap. It is here on exhibition and baffles the old negro, no one being able to name it. I saw it and will give a brief description: A dirty brown color, body covered with short wool, long thin body, legs, standing out the back of a square head, long thin neck, narrow head, small ears, long thin nose, somewhat resembling a deer's face, long oblong tail and has long sharp claws. It will eat nothing but animal meat. It is docile. Shows no fight except to a cat. Will not notice a dog. Has a squeaky but loud.

MARKETS

COTTON.

By the Associated Press.
New York, April 16.—The cotton market was active and excited at the opening today. First prices were steady at an advance of seven to ten cents. Some very active movement followed rapidly after the call on the weather report indicating rain from Arkansas eastward. May and July sold about 40 to 50 points above last night's closing figures.

Weather

For North Carolina: Showers and thunderstorms probably tonight and Saturday. Somewhat warmer in the interior tonight, fresh south winds with squalls.
