BAND MUSIC IS FURNISHED AT DINNER

Some 60 Kiwanians and 25 guests dined impatiently last evening for prepared address, lecture or speech at George Bailey, who was in charge of the program, was to deliver, but they never heard it. Instead they heard B. L. Lunsford of Marion center some old time selections on a banjo that brought back memories to the older persons of the hall and made the younger members of the company envious of technique. It was an enjoyable session all round.

Secretary Norwood Bass distributed copies of the Carolina Kiwanian, new publication issued from Henderson, and Edmond Yoder, a senior college senior, drew the attention of the President. Bailey presided over the fact and graduating class of the college, who were guests of the club, and they were received with genuine enthusiasm. Dr. John Perry, president, said there were 150 names this year enrolled and 150 names in the immediate section. The seniors point to a larger attendance next fall. He referred to the need of more dormitory buildings. He expressed his appreciation of the interest taken by Hickory men in the college. He then presented the seniors and faculty, who were cheered.

The Kiwanians sang lustily for their guests, the zip-zip-zip song repeated, and then George Bailey took up the duties of leader. Mr. Bailey paused gradually and gradually while the audience had an ovation, announced that matches at each plate were silent and given by Donald Applegate, who would be glad to provide cigars for all persons who could call at his home. Mr. Bailey knew four weeks that he was due for a lecture or address and he stood prepared.

City council held a short and business session last night, during which City Manager Ballew was authorized to build a 60-foot culvert in Carolina park, install four lights at places where they were needed, and ascertain if the plans drawn up by a landscape gardener several years ago are in anywhere around these parts. If they can be found, they might be used; if not, another architect will be employed to make plans for laying out permanent driveways and the like. Council is determined to do the job right.

Rotarians, Kiwanians and others are ready to co-operate with the American legion in making the park a playground for the children of the community and considerable money will be spent on the park by citizens.

Council adopted an ordinance on first reading forbidding the placing within 400 feet of a house, church or business place of one of those asphalt machines or stone grinders which send up columns of smoke and scot and fine rock and distribute them equally over furniture and dishes. Residents in the vicinity of the Atlantic Bitulithic Company's plant sponsored the ordinance, which will take effect as soon as the company completes its work here, on July 1.
