CHRISTIAN WORK REVIEWED IN CHINA

Shanghai, May 27.—At what was held to be the greatest religious gathering ever held in China, the National Christian Conference, which assembled in Shanghai in the first week of May with twelve hundred delegates attending, a review of the whole vast field of Protestant Christian mission work in China was undertaken and changes of procedure of the highest importance to general mission endeavor in China were authorized.

The main body of delegates that came from all parts of China numbering a thousand was about evenly divided, half Chinese and half foreign. In addition to these some two hundred visiting delegates from foreign countries attended the conference including 24 from America, 19 from Great Britain and 5 from countries of continental Europe. Among the prominent figures attending the big meeting from other lands were Dr. John R. Mott of the World's Student Christian Federation, F. S. Bookman of the Y. M. C. A., K. S. Latroue, formerly of the Yale Mission and now holding the chair of mission at Yale University, Marshall Broomhall of the home staff of the China Inland Mission, Dr. H. T. Hodgkin of the Friends' Foreign Missionary Association, J. H. Oldham, secretary of the International Mission Council, D. Carl Heim of the Bazaar Mission, Count J. Moltke of the Danish Mission Council and Bishop Nicholas of Serbia.

An outstanding feature of the conference was the voicing of a desire and purpose by a purely Chinese conference commission that a united Christian church indigenous to China shall come into being. The single big achievement of the conference, however, was the authorization of a decided modification in the method of coordinating Protestant Christian Mission work in China.

In offering the report it made, the Chinese commissions, composed of men and women, expressed regret that Christian Chinese are divided by denominationalism of the West. Dr. T. T. Lew, spokesman of the commission, pointed out that this denominationalism is based upon differences, the historical significance of which, however real and vital to the missionaries of the west, is not understood by the Chinese. For this reason, he said, denominationalism instead of being a source of inspiration, has been and is a source of bewilderment and inefficiency. The speaker expressed the belief that it is only the united church that can save China.

The change made by the conference in the method of co-ordinating mission work brings to a termination the activities of the China Continuation Committee, a body that grew out of the Missionary Conference of 1913 in Shanghai and a number of preceding conferences at Canton, Shanghai, Tsingtau, Peking, Hankow and Mukden. Since it was formed this committee has served as a means of communication between the protestant Christian forces of China and mission organizations of Western countries. Its aim has been to promote cooperation and co-ordination among Christian forces in China and generally to serve as a clearing house in connection with all aspects of missionary work in China.

Through the chance effected at the conference this work is being taken over and its scope enlarged by a National Christian Council having 100 members, representing Protestant Christian denominational interests and acting in an advisory capacity without, however, having any powers in connection with doctrinal or ecclesiastical questions.

BOYS WILL ASSIST IN GLASS CAMPAIGN

How many boys and girls in Hickory stop to pick up broken glass from the streets and sidewalks? Probably more than one would suppose.

Boys know that they might come running along some time and strike the broken glass with their bare feet, and so many of them, it is believed, moved the danger.

But some boys break bottles and jars and throw them into the street or allow them to remain on the sidewalk, a menace to themselves, other boys and automobiles.

The street committee of the Community club, of which Mrs. C. L. Mosteller is chairman, is waging a campaign to have the boys more thoughtful and the cooperation of parents is sought.

Hickory can be made as safe for bare feet and automobiles as it is for persons wearing shoes. Boys, how about a little help?
