L. C. JONES, Supt.

Senator Pendleton in his admirable address at Charlotte last Tuesday, laid particular stress upon the great danger to which American institutions at present were exposed from the present enjoyment of wealth and luxury. In the history of all nations the contaminating influences of ease and luxury have too often sapped the people of those sterner virtues necessary for the preservation of civil liberty. Below we give the closing paragraphs of the address:—

Men of Mecklenburg! out of this city went an influence which in the end established independence and created union. Shall there go out from here that ten-fold greater influence necessary to preserve both?

One hundred years have brought their trials and vicissitudes.

That independence of all foreign power, that loving message "the cause of all," have survived foreign war and domestic war the dangers of an unparalleled growth in wealth, in population, in extension of boundaries. Already three millions of people have grown to fifty million; already a fortune of one million, then colossal, singular, has become small in the midst of those of one hundred million; already thirteen States have grown to thirty-eight; already the Farmer republic, with few purposes, with small powers only the representative among nations, has grown to be the Imperial republic, supervising immense interests, exercising enormous powers, levying more taxes, expending more revenues than any government on the earth.

The greater trial is before you. The danger comes from corruption, from luxury, wasteful ways, from that greed of gain which wasteful ways make inevitable.

I do not doubt your virtue will be equal to this trial also; but it must be by living in the historic light of your great ancestors, by remembering that man, living men, high souled men, honest, upright, virtuous, liberty loving men, are the only solid foundations of free states—that the first duty of every thoughtful man is, not to carve out institutions of government, but to lead his fellow citizens, by the supreme cultivation of civic virtues, to be worthy of the best institutions.

—In referring to the Hendersonville elopement of a married Drummer with Miss Annie Tate, last week we added the remark that "presumably the lady was deceived." This phrase of mild doubt was based upon the philosophy that when young ladies pick up easy acquaintance with unknown drummers they are apt to risk the chances of unpleasant after-claps. It now appears that this was a case of—"Scare me again!" Statesville Landmark remarks, with a tear: "It is a very sad story and we regret that we cannot find room for the whole of it. What makes it so much more sad is the fact that this is the second or third time that Miss Annie has been deceived and run away with. She ought to be very careful or it will develop into a habit with her."

The above paragraph was taken from the Farmer & Mechanic. Since it was put in type, we notice that the mother of "Miss Annie" threatens to prosecute the publisher of the Landmark for the sad reflections he added to the story.

A son of Dr. Roby, editor of the Methodist Advance, was drowned in Neuse river near Goldsboro yesterday a week ago. He was attending a Sunday School picnic. He could not swim, and while bathing with a number of boys got into deep water. We deeply sympathize with Dr. Roby in his sad bereavement.

BOGAN CASH KILLED.

A special to the Charleston News and Courier, dated May 14th, says:—"Last night about one o'clock, Deputy Sheriff E. T. King left Cheraw for the purpose of arresting W. B. Cash. They at once proceeded to his own place, a few miles from his father's, where it was supposed he was hiding. They arrived at this point about four o'clock and surrounded the house and barn, at the same time cutting off all communication and means of escape.

About half-past four a voice was heard in the barn, which was recognized by one of the posse to be that of Boggan. The Deputy Sheriff then surrounded the barn and instructed the posse to take him alive, and not to fire unless it was an absolute necessity. While the posse was surrounding the barn Boggan stepped out of the door and closed it behind him. He was armed with a double-barrel shot-gun a Winchester rifle and numerous pistols, which were hanging about his person. As he moved toward where two of the posse were stationed, one of them, W. H. Hilton, ordered him to halt. He immediately raised his gun and fired at Hilton. The fire was returned. Boggan then fell on his knees and fired four times at Hilton, but the posse firing on him, he fell dead, riddled with bullets.

Sam Lee, Boggan's pal, was in the house, and when Boggan first fired Sam jumped out of the house with a Winchester rifle and leveled it on M. L. Rhodes, Rhodes ordered him to drop his gun. He refused, whereupon he was fired upon by one of the posse, the ball taking effect in his leg just below the knee. He then dropped his gun, threw up his hands, and surrendered.

CIRCUMSTANCES OF THE CRIME.

On February 16th, W. Bogan Cash went into Cheraw, got drunk, and raised a disturbance in the streets. Town Marshal Richards remonstrated with him, and an altercation ensued. A collision took place and Cash was beaten severely. The following Saturday, Feb. 23d, Cash again went to Cheraw. It is stated that Cash promised the Intendant of the town that he would not molest Richards. Cash passed him twice, and upon passing him the third time he accosted him, hand in pocket. "Hello! Richards," said he, "are you watching me?" To this Richards replied that he was only on duty. Cash thereupon started to walk off and Richards, in his ante-mortem statement, said he thought he was going away. Not so. Quickly pulling out a self-cocking Smith & Wesson pistol Cash fired, the ball hitting Richards in the arm and wounding mortally Mr. Coward, who was standing by. A second shot gave Richards his death wound. A third shot missed. Cash mounted a horse rode off and escaped. Richards died on February 29. Mr. Coward, who was shot by Cash when Richards was killed, was paralyzed by the wound and can not possibly recover.

It occasions some surprise that Cash should not have surrendered when called upon to do so, because it has been the opinion here that his family influence would have sufficed to secure his acquittal in Chesterfield county. The most plausible explanation of his action is that he underrated the nerve of the posse and determined to maintain to the last his reputation for recklessness, hoping thereby to escape "with flying colors," as his father expressed it on March 9.

At the annual banquet of the Iroquois Club in Chicago on April 15; a letter was read from Mr. Tilden, in which he wrote:

"The Democratic party originated in the resistance by the more advanced patriots of the Revolution to efforts which were made change the character of our Government by a false construction of the Constitution and impressing on the new system a monarchial bias. Mr. Jefferson's election in 1800 rescued our free institutions from the perils which surrounded them, and secured sixty years of administration mainly in harmony with their designs and true character. When an attempt was made to break up the Union and to dismember the territorial integrity of the country, people were compelled to make a manly choice between these calamities and the dangerous influences of a civil war upon the character of the Government. They patriotically and wisely resolved to save the Union first and to repair the damage which our political system might sustain, when the more imminent dangers had been provided against. The first work was successfully accomplished; but twenty years have since elapsed, and the work of restoring the Government to its original character is not yet accomplished. * * * * * Though I cannot longer aspire to be one of the leaders in this great work, I bid those of you on whom this august mission may fall, God-speed. S. J. Tilden."
