We have heard one of our business men say, and we think it a very good idea, indeed, that it would be a wise thing for our citizens to buy a force pump, and place it in the well at the Central Hotel. With about 300 feet of hose, this would be a very great protection against fire. This would not only be a means of safety in case of fire, but as a strict business proposition, it would pay in that it would reduce insurance rates on the buildings which the hose would act upon it, and this is a big item on that street. Let the business men think of it.

Sent to Jail.

On last Thursday night a young man named Bud Tollock, of Reidsville, was arrested here on the charge of attempting to break in to a store. The evidence was sufficient to warrant Mayor Pratt in sending him to jail in default of a bond of $50.

Send us one dollar for the Echo.

LEAKSVILLE'S BUSINESS HOUSES.

JAS. C. HARRIS.

This gentleman is one of the pioneers of the livery business in Leaksville, and fully understands the needs of the traveling public. At his well-equipped establishment may be found an ample line of vehicles and good horses. His accommodations for drummers is unequalled, and his turnouts are the finest in the ring. Mr. Harris is a gentleman of quiet demeanor, faithful in the performance of duty, and knowing his business well.

Dr. J. M. PRICE.

is now a practicing physician here, and is already by his skill and ability, getting a good practice. Dr. Price is a gentleman of solid attainments, and fine practical sense, and being devoted to his noble calling is bound to win more and more upon the public regard.

J. B. KING

Characteristic of his family, Mr. J. B. King, is quiet and unassuming, intense, yet taciturn he pursues the even tenor of his good way. Alive to the best interests of Leaksville, he is ever ready to welcome the stranger who comes hither and make him feel at home. As proprietor of Kings Hotel and tobacco manufacturer, he is kept busy from early in the morn until dewy eve, and were we to miss his familiar face from our midst we should feel that Leaksville had suffered a serious loss. He is, we believe, a native of Henry, and has scores of acquaintances and friends in that county, who will patronize him the ensuing year, as one of the proprietors of the Dan Valley Warehouse, having formed a business connection therewith, with Mr. David Moore.

THE DAN VALLEY WAREHOUSE. MESSRS. MOORE AND KING, PROPRIETORS.

This is another enterprise of which Leaksville can afford to be proud. Ample room, splendid lights, and a run of custom embracing all the adjacent counties of Virginia and North Carolina. Of the proprietors we need only speak a few words, touching Mr. David Moore as we have already, of Mr. Joseph King, Mr. Moore is one of the "old guards" in business circles, knowing no such word as fail. Messrs. Moore and King have employed for the ensuing year, one of the very best auctioneers, Mr. Thos. D. Meadows, late of Farmers warehouse, Danville, Va., and they are in consequence prepared to anticipate all the farmer's wants, as to attention, comfort and prices.

PHOTOGRAPHER.

"Catching the shadow ere the substance fades," and holding the mirror up to nature, is the occupation of our young townsman, Mr. W. H. Sledge. This young artist is winning golden opinions from all sorts of people for his truthful delineations of nature in his work. He possesses the highest, best traits of an artist, perception and proportion, and he is doing a good business.

J. H. HAMPTON.

If there be any truth in the theory that a man is the architect of his own fortune, it is exemplified in the career of the gentleman whose name is at the head of this article. Possessing but limited advantages in the way of capital, etc., in his early life, he has by indomitable energy, clear perception and practical business sense, built up a business second to none in this section of North Carolina, and "Hampton's buggies, omnibuses, carriages and wagons, have won a justly merited fame, for their strength finish and easy running qualities. Employing none but competent workmen, Mr. Hampton never turns out a sorry job. At his shops, he has on hand constantly a fine assortment of all the vehicles usually employed in this part of the country. In addition to this, his repairing department is always ready for business, with a complete assortment of all the parts of broken or damaged vehicles, thus anticipating any want. Mr. Hampton, is recognized everywhere, at home as well as abroad, as a live, public spirited citizen.

A. L. YOUNTS

Determined not to be outdone, Mr. Younts, has just added to his well assorted stock of furniture, many new articles and his ware-rooms opposite the postoffice, can now boast of as good an assortment of furniture, as can be found this side of Danville. Mr. Younts is also a manufacturer of doors, sashes, and blinds, and keeps on hand a full assortment of coffins and elegant burial cases.

THE NEW WAREHOUSE—T. R. PRATT & CO.

The erection of a third warehouse with a storage capacity of 6,000 square feet, is a living visible proof that the future of Leaksville is to be established on a foundation more durable than a newspaper boom or the prognostics of a real estate agent. This work is now on the road to completion, and when finished will be found to be one of the best equipped ware-houses in the State. It is being built on a site which includes that of the old bank building. It is right in the heart of the town, will be ample in proportion, built of brick, splendidly lighted, and backed by ample capital. The proprietors, Messrs. T. R. Pratt & Co., are among the most solid of our business men, and farmers can bring their tobacco here, and realize that they will get as much or more for it than they could in Danville or elsewhere.

SMOKING TOBACCO—DYER BROS.

In order to keep pace with her other industries, Messrs. B. H. & G. D. Dyer, have organized and put in operation a smoking tobacco department to their factory, and will supply the lovers of the weed with as fine a quality of smoking tobacco as can be found elsewhere, and will duplicate any of the larger establishments for which the Old North State is famous, both as to price and quality.

THE LEAKSVILLE PRACTICAL HIGH SCHOOL.

As a matter of course, so progressive a people as those of Leaksville could never rest satisfied with mere material advancement, and so with an unanimity almost without a parallel, they determined to create and sustain a school, not only for the education of their own sons and daughters, but which by its merits would compel patronage from abroad. The result justifies their most sanguine expectations, for although the school has only been organized about two years, it has already attracted patronage from abroad, and bids fair to become one of the most potential educational factors in this section of the country. It is ably officered, with Prof. B. W. Ray as principal, assisted by the following competent instructors: Mrs. B. W. Ray, primary department; Miss Mollie Lucas, advanced classes; Miss Maggie Livingstone, music department. A personal inspection by the editor of this paper as to the plan of instruction, methods of discipline, and courses of study pursued, satisfies us that under Prof. Ray all that is best will be insisted upon, what is ornamental will be well-taught and what is worthless rejected. No method of instruction is used because it may be old, but because it is good. The discipline comes as near perfection as is possible, and a high moral tone is prevalent in the school. In addition to all other advantages is that of location. Leaksville is a "dry" town, and scenes that would militate against the success of any school where liquor is sold, are not familiar here.

J. TURNER MOREHEAD & CO.

At the distance of a mile, but in close communication with Leaksville every way is that picturesque settlement now known as Morehead, so-called in honor of him, who was its founder. Of Major Morehead, little may be said, his name is a household word in North Carolina, and many parts of Virginia, and is a synonym for all that is upright, honorable and stable. Improving upon the plant of his father, Gov. Morehead, he has built up a business in cotton fabrics that extends from New York to New Orleans, and his goods have won their way to public favor by their merit alone. In addition to the Cotton factory are also the Leaksville Woolen Mills, with H. Foard, Esq. is Secretary. Mr. Foard has recently improved his plant by the addition of much new and improved machinery and his facilities for manufacturing blankets, flannels, so enhanced, that delays can only be the result of accidents. In addition to their wholesale department, they have also a Customers Department, in which farmers, who send their wool can have it made into cloth fabrics entirely free from shoddy intermixture of anything spurious. While a strict business man, Mr. Foard, is a pleasant gentleman, to deal with, as all who have had business relations with him can certify.

THE FACTORY STORE.—R. P. RAY, MANAGER.

This store of which the above named gentleman, is manager, is one of the largest and most commodious in North Carolina. It is two stories high, and has a storage capacity of nearly 3000 square feet. In addition it has a separate and distinct grocery department. This store is the only one in Rockingham, where anything one calls for can be found. This being the case it is needless to specify the name and quantity, but simply the price and quality of the goods, which are cheaper and equal in quality to any other that can be named. Mr. Ray the manager of this mammoth establishment, has been in the business for ten years, and is a born merchant, having all those requisits of one—popular, without involving any sacrifice of even a sense of business integrity. He is assisted by Messrs. Lassiter and Patterson both of whom have had much business experience, Mr. Lassiter having at one time been a salesman with H. Petty and Co., Raleigh, N. C.

CONCLUSION.

Having thus given, as far as our space will permit, an epitome of the business of Leaksville, we will add that in religious privileges she is not a whit behind any town in the State. The Baptist church would be an ornament to any city, and our Methodist, Episcopal and Presbyterian churches are all elegant buildings, and full congregations attend the services. There are several moral and religious societies, a Good Templars lodge, a branch of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and various other christian organizations. We have also a well-arranged and commodious Town Hall, and a large, elegant depot of the D. M. & S. W. R. R. Taking all our advantages into consideration, Leaksville has a right to invite the outsiders to settle within her borders.

Open the Streets, and Give the Town a Chance to Boom.

Mr. EDITOR:—Col. Gallaway has opened a street through his land in the western part of town. The lots are being rapidly sold, and a large part of the taxes of the town will soon be collected from improvements to be put upon these lands. Is it not fair that the Commissioners of the town should now condemn a small strip of land to enable parties in that part of town to have easy access to the postoffice and the business portion of town? To say that Col. Gallaway will be benefited by this is foolishness, as he will pay heavy taxes and has been doing so all the time. In justice to our people in that part of town the small strip of land that intervenes should be "condemned." The citizens in that part of town are ready to help pay all expenses. Mr. Editor, can't you stir them up to action.

[If the Commissioners are alive to the interests of the town they will take some action on the matter immediately. Open up the necessary streets, and let the onward tide of prosperity not be hindered. Several lots already occupied there, and many more would be if they had an avenue to the business part of the town. Of course it will be done sooner or later, then why not do it now and thus place the town a step farther in the onward march.—ECHO.]
