There is a Letter in the Post Office For You if You Have Not Bought Your Tuberculosis Christmas Seal.

Notice is received from the headquarters of the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association that 37,000 letters containing 199 Christmas Seals each will be mailed to as many homes in North Carolina today. Accompanying the Seals is a letter requesting the recipient to purchase the number of Seals sent at one cent each in order that the fight against tuberculosis may be waged again next year. These letters are sent only to town and communities in which the Association has no local chairman, and the receipts received from this source constitute the main support of the State Association, as in towns where a chairman has charge of the work 75 per cent of the receipts are retained in that community for local tuberculosis work. With the funds received from the mail sale letters the Association expects to enlarge the clinic work, which, in the opinion of the Board of Directors, is one of the most important phases of the tuberculosis campaign. This service means that the cases of tuberculosis will be found early, while they are in a curable stage, and will mean the saving of many lives and the prevention of addition sources of infection.

Anyone not receiving a supply of Seals through the regular channels and wishing to aid in the work may order Seals direct from the North Carolina Tuberculosis Association, Sanatorium, N. C.

KEEPING UP THE FIGHT

Senator Borah, one of the leaders of the Republican band of irreconcilables in the fight on the League of Nations, is keeping up the fight on "entangling alliances," says the Winston-Salem Journal. He has come out with a statement declaring that he would rather the United States would go into the Wilson League than join the proposed Harding Association. He expresses the conviction that "if the American people choose a league they will choose one which has its powers defined or, at least, an attempt to define them, rather than trust their destiny to the unbridled discretion of a few men." Senator Borah insists the Harding Association is nothing but "the old League of Nations with possibly some reservations." In this contention he may be right or wrong. But he is certainly right when he says:

"If we want to go into this kind of proposition, there is no reason why we should not experiment with one they have. It is claimed by the advocates of the League that the present League has been of service to Europe. If so, there is no reason for asking Europe to scrap the old League and try a new one. If we are going into Europe, we ought to go in. If we are not, we ought not to be handing her a new League every ninety days. She will likely conclude that after the next presidential election we would have another league."

The New York World thinks the Senator from Idaho has in the foregoing paragraph stated the case clearly and adequately. If the United States is to maintain a policy of isolation, there is no need of an Association of Nations. If the policy is isolation to be abandoned, the League of Nations is an established institution and we ought not to expect the rest of the world to leave its international relations at the mercy of every presidential election of the United States.

On the whole President Harding's proposal is meeting with the reception that he might have expected it to meet. As The Richmond Times-Dispatch points out, the irreconcilables are not to be caught napping. The Senate will not be fooled by specious reasoning by which the President would deprive it of its constitutional prerogatives, and what is more to the point, the European Powers are justified in viewing with suspicion any suggestions this Nation may advance along associational lines. They are wisely giving their allegiance to the going League of Nations and refusing to entertain plans for a rival league until the United States, which, through the Senate, once deceived and disappointed them, shall formally and irrevocably give its approval to this at present visionary scheme. Should Mr. Harding realize the futility of pressing his gentlemen's agreement as a substitute and submit his plan to the Senate for approval, he might receive the senatorial sanction in spite of the League haters, by aid of the votes of Democrats whose patriotism transcends politics. But even if the association plan eventually be accepted it will be with the thought that it is a counterfeited, though perhaps not without its good points, foisted upon the country in place of the solid substance which the Republican politicians continued to denigrate.

AUTOMOBILE THIEVES GIVEN A LIVELY CHASE IN LINCOLN

Friday night when Daniel Seagle, rural letter carrier, returned to his home on West Main street, he missed his Ford car from the garage located near his barn, at the rear of the home. He immediately notified Chief of Police Faries, who called Patrolman Howard Leonard, and the two, Mr. Seagle and others took their stand inside Mr. Seagle's barn to await the return of his car. From 11 till 4 o'clock Saturday morning they waited. At four the car came up and stopped on the side of the street opposite the barn. The officers made a dive for the car, and two men sprang from the machine and made a hasty get away. One of the men ran up Main street, the other ran down the hill across the street from the barn, and out through a briar patch, across the field, coming in contact with two barbed wire fences in his flight, and he made a complete get away. The officers had their flash lights on the man and saw that they appeared to be white men. Several shots were fired by the officers to frighten the men during the chase.

On the same night a truck and a car is reported to have been used in hauling away loot from the store of Alec Kiser's store, in the southern part of the county. The loss of goods by this store robbery is estimated at around $800, including shoes, men and women's clothing, groceries, etc. No arrests have as yet been made, and officers are working on the case.

There have been numerous automobile "batterings" recently in Lincoln. Cars have been taken from various parts in this city, used and returned during the night, and it is supposed that a gang of unscrupulous men are in the city, carrying away...

to keep close watch on their car, by either keeping them locked up or staying by them most of the night with gun in hand. Among those who have missed their cars during the night and found them in place next morning are Messrs. Hunter Munney and Fred Ramstaur, and some months ago the car of Mr. M. A. Putnam was borrowed and used in hauling midnight contraband freight.
