CUT THROUGH STEEL BARS TAKE NEGRO FROM COUNTY JAIL

Columbia, Mo., mob lynch who was identified as one who committed assault

MOB COMPOSED OF "ROUGHNECKS"

(By Associated Press) Columbus, Missouri, April, 30.—The leaders of the mob which stormed the county jail here yesterday morning, cut through the steel doors with acetylene torches and hanged from a bridge; James Scott, the negro charged with attacking the 14 year old daughter of Dr. H. F. Amsted, head of the German department of the University of Missouri, are known according to prosecuting attorney Huen, who promises an immediate grand jury investigation. The mob is said to have been made up of the rougher element of the city.

Scott who was identified last Friday by the girl as the negro who on April 20 lured her to a lonely spot along the railroad tracks and attempted to assault her vigorously asserted his innocence and prayed for mercy. Raucous shouts of derision were the answer of the mob, as a boy member adjusted the noose. Prosecuting Attorney Huen and other officials including Sheriff Brown pleaded with the mob to spare the negro's life and let the law take its course but in vain. A large man threw the victim over the bridge railing with the rope around his neck.

Georgia Heiress Weds Blind Piano Tuner

"Love in a cottage is better than all the riches in the world," says Mrs. Susie Grace Cofer, sixteen-year-old bride of L. J. Cofer, an Atlanta (Ga.) piano tuner, poor, and blind since youth. Mrs. Cofer is the daughter of wealthy south Georgia parents, who have started annulment proceedings to force their daughter to return. Mrs. Cofer says that all the law in the land won't cause her to stop loving her husband, and she has no idea of going back home.

Following the ceremony, her father, G. F. Ferguson of Sparta, Ga., came to Atlanta and took the girl home. Cofer followed and filed habeas corpus proceedings to obtain his bride. He won his suit. Scarcely had the couple returned to Atlanta than annulment proceedings were started by the young bride's parents.

War on London's Fog Stirs Old-Timer's Ire

London.—Horrors! They're going to abolish the London fog. Old citizens are up in arms. "If the fog's been good enough for me, I don't see why the rising generation can't stand it," they moan. But despite this defense of one of London's oldest institutions parliament is "going into it thoroughly." Someone has suggested that Londoners have been "going into it" thoroughly for generations, and coming out of it and going into it again, but nothing ever is done about it.

There finally seems to be a serious attempt to end "the London particular" and a committee of technical experts of all British industry are to deal with the problem on national lines.

Many persons who are not experts say there will always be fog in London until the obvious thing is done, prohibit the burning of soft coal.

PRIZE WINNER

In a Pullman smoking compartment we heard a very rich man boasting that he had won a season baseball pass in a "guessing contest" conducted by a newspaper.

"I worked nights for a week," he chuckled, "and darned if I didn't hit it just right!"

In a rough way we know the amount of this man's wealth by reputation, and we figure that it cost him at least $500 worth of time to win the prize that he could have bought for less than $100. Of course, he worked it out in spare time but spare time is valuable to him because it is needed for relaxation from brain work. Then, too, obsessed with winning the prize, he probably had it on his mind detracting his attention from his occupation during general working hours of the day.

Eliminate the cash end, it doesn't matter much. For he'd have been just as elated if he had won a prize of $1.

How do you explain this rich man's jubilation over a victory that wasn't worth the price it cost—to him?

Your first explanation probably is, "He got something for nothing."

There is no thrill like finding money—getting it without effort. Probably this is a reaction from the enslaving system that keeps our noses to the grindstone. The average millionaire gets a bigger thrill from finding a $5 goldpiece than from cleaning up $1000 in a business deal. And, no matter how valuable his time, he'll delay whatever he was intent on, and search the premises to see if more $5 goldpieces are nearby.

You know how this weakness persists in our subconscious minds and rises to the conscious surface during dreams in which we find coin after coin until our pockets are filled.

A greater motive than "something for nothing" however, animated the rich man in the baseball guessing contest. His thrill, as victor, came mostly from the realization that in winning he demonstrated cleverness superior to that of the other contestants.

In a battle of wits, he won.

That is the motive of your "business genius," as much as and often more than the actual accumulation of profits.

Vanity—pride—is our motive in the things we do, a lot oftener and to greater extent than any of us realize.

PREDICTS WORLD'S GREATEST OIL FIELD IN SOUTHERN ALBERTA

That Southern Alberta, directly across the boundary line from Montana, where new oil wells are being brought in practically daily, is destined to be the world's greatest oil field is the prediction of P. Chester Thompson, well-known geologist for many years associated with Standard Oil activities in Europe and South America.

Mr. Thompson is credited with the discovery of the oil fields in Venezuela, in Columbia, South America, in Madagascar, and has investigated practically every prospect ive oil field in all parts of the world.

"Geologists have long known," declares Mr. Thompson, "that oil seeps through porous rock structure in a direction opposite to the rotation of the earth. Practically all the great oil fields of the world will be found extending in direction along lines parallel with the earth's movement. Where the porous rock structure folds and is at the same time near the surface, drilling for oil becomes a commercial possibility.

"The numerous gas wells in Alberta west and south of Calgary have long evidenced the fact that oil in large quantities was somewhere beneath the surface. The large glacial drift, however, spread over the Alberta plains, rendered the working out of the geology difficult. Gradually, however, drillers have worked northward from Wyoming through Montana, establishing definitely the structures which underlie this vast territory.

"All the evidence from the wells being brought in in Montana and at present drilling in Southern Alberta lead geologists who have examined the field to the conclusion that this territory will provide one of the largest if not the largest, oil field ever discovered."

To provide for the oil already being produced, and in anticipation of this development, the Imperial Oil Company of Canada is already spending millions of dollars in the construction of large storage tanks and refineries at Calgary.

Accident prevention is the aim of the patrol. The youthful officers try to keep the little ones from stealing rides on automobiles and other vehicles, warn them against running into the street without looking both ways, cut short too strenuous fist fights and guard the youngsters at railroad grade crossings.

CALGARY STUDIES MEANS TO PROVIDE FOR STORK

(By Associated Press) Calgary, Alta., April, 30.—The health committee of the local Council of Women have asked Mayor Wedster to have the city open a "stork account."

The plan is to have expectant mothers deposit a small sum each week with the city treasurer, to relieve her of anxiety when the stork arrives, and assure her of adequate medical care.

The trouble with the usual installment plan, the women found, was that it became effective after the child had been born, and proved hard to meet with additional expenses.

"It was a close shave," remarked the policeman as he left the barber chair.

SEVEN LIVES LOST WHEN STEAMER GO TO BOTTOM

Opening of her seams given as the cause of the accident

STEAMER LADEN WITH NORFOLK COAL

(By Associated Press)

New Bedford, Mass., April 30.—Sinking of the steamer Seaconnet at the western entrance to Vineyard Sound yesterday with a loss of 7 lives was caused by opening of her seams in the opinion of Captain Daniel Miller who with 22 other survivors landed here. His statement disposed of the suggestion in some quarters that rum pirates might have been concerned.

The Seaconnet sank actually one mile south of the Vineyard sound lightship although her first calls for help gave her position as farther south. The wind and currents however, were sufficient it is believed to have carried her that distance toward the lightship before she sank.

The steamer Seaconnet, Captain Daniel Miller, Jr., master left Norfolk Friday night with a cargo of approximately 5,000 tons of coal for Boston. She was owned by C. H. Sprague and sons who purchased her from the shipping board about 18 months ago since which time she has been engaged in coastwise coal trade.

HE ADMITS DEATH OF SISTERS 16 YEAR OLD SCHOOL CHUM

Joseph Enoch admits he waited for girl and attacked her

WARRANT CHARGES HIM WITH CRIME

(By Associated Press)

Richmond, April, 30.—Joseph Enoch will be arraigned in police court May 4th on a charge of attacking and murdering Celia Schevick 16 year old chum of his sister who was found with her skull crushed Friday, a few blocks from her home. A warrant formally charging Enoch with the crime was sworn out after he is alleged to have signed a confession.

Enoch is reported to have said that he waited under the viaduct for several minutes and then saw Miss Schevick coming down the hill. She was alone he said. As she approached him Enoch is quoted in the alleged confession he "smiled at her and she smiled at me." He said according to the statement made public by Captain Wright that he struck her on the head with something he held in his hand.

The youth denied according to the officers knowledge of what transpired after he struck the girl.

FAITHFUL FOUR GUARD FLAG AT TIP OF WORLD

(By Associated Press)

Ottawa, Ont., April, 30.—Four lonely Canadians, marooned on Wrangel Island at the top of the map, have been waiting since 1921 to have that bleak Arctic region proclaimed Canadian soil. The four are members of a landing party left by Vilhjalmer Stefansson, the explorer, on his visit to the island several years ago. While the former members of his expedition possess their souls in patience and hunt muskox and seal for a living, Stefansson is negotiating with the Canadian government to reimburse him for the expense of his polar voyage and accept sovereignty over Wrangel Island in payment.

When members of the Stefansson party raised the Canadian flag on Wrangel Island in 1921, there was some discussion as to the propriety of the action. The flag has remained with three men and a boy to guard it, but no step has been taken here to assert formal sovereignty over the northern area. Stefansson, who fitted out his own expedition at a cost of $25,000, when he failed to interest the Canadian government in his plans, now argues that his addition to the Canadian domain should be worth at least that much money.

The main value of the island at present according to Stefansson is strategic. He says that it is directly in the path of an ideal trans-polar air route across the world.
