SERVANTS

Let every man mind his own business.—Servants.

THERE is a certain type of person who thinks, always, that brusqueness, even rudeness, to the servants of his friends shows familiarity with the ways of the world. Let us hope that these persons are those who have had little chance to get about, little chance to mingle with those who know how things should be done—that they are those who have never had servants of their own, and have had few friends who numbered servants among their possessions. Sometimes, unfortunately, we meet women who have always been used to servants who yet have an overbearing attitude toward the servants of their friends. We always suspect that they gossip with their own servants.

Now, in the big cities, at least, servants resent an appearance of friendliness of a too informal sort on their employers' parts. In their relation as servant, especially where they have specialized, they wish to assume a deferential manner, just as they wish to have their employers assume a directing manner. That is part of the game. They expect the same treatment from their employers' friends.

But there is a manner, between one of overbearing haughtiness and one of ostentatious friendliness, that the well-bred man or woman assumes to his friends' servants. And it is really only the outward manifestation of a kindly consideration to others, whatever their rank or walk in life.

To begin with, always greet your friends' servants, if you have visited the house often enough to know them. A simple word of greeting is sufficient. That is, if you are a week-end guest in a house, and the maid brings a letter to your door before breakfast, say "Good morning, Jane." And always thank them, simply, for services rendered. If you call frequently at a house, and the same servant always answers the door, remember a simple word of greeting then.

Never ask favors of your friends' servants, either when you are visiting in their homes or when you might be able to make a convenience of them at some other time.

FELT TIRED, SO TIRED

Indiana Lady Says She Was Run Down, Suffered With Her Back, Took Cardui, and Got Well.

Richmond, Ind.—"I thought I would write a line or so, to say that I owe my good health and strength to Cardui," says a letter from Mrs. Cora Courtney, 31 Railroad Street, this city.

"I was all run-down until my family thought they would lose me," writes Mrs. Courtney. "My husband coaxed me to take Cardui, so, to please him, I did, and will say I do not regret it, for I am able to do all my work and do my shopping."

"I have five children, four in school, my husband and a boarder to do for, and I do all my own work for all of us, and find time to play. We all praise Cardui. Every sick and run-down woman should take this wonderful medicine."

"I suffered with my back; a very weak feeling in my limbs."

"I felt hardly able to drag; just tired—so tired all the time."

"It was an effort for me to do anything, but Cardui helped me so I felt like a different woman."

If you are in a run-down physical condition, suffering as this Indiana lady says she did, give Cardui a fair trial. It should help you. Take Cardui. NC-147
