COTTON REPORT BY CENSUS BUREAU

(By Associated Press)
Washington, November 2.—A decrease of 767,000 bales in the prospective cotton crop as compared with a month ago is shown in a department of agriculture forecast of 10,248,000 bales used on conditions prevailing on October 25. The condition of the crop and forecast of production for Virginia is 88 per cent and 53,000 bales; and North Carolina 70 per cent and 1,010,000 bales. This report was the first of its kind ever issued in November and has been awaited with interest by the cotton world in view of the scarcity of cotton and diversity of opinion as to the exact size of this year's crop.

New York, November 2.—Cotton jumped over 100 points in the local market on publication of the agricultural department's forecast.

MEXICO TO REBUILD NAVY BY POPULAR SUBSCRIPTION

(By Associated Press)
Mexico City, November 3.—The Mexican navy which has declined virtually to the status of the Swiss is to be rebuilt by public subscription. The Pro-Navy Committee has launched a campaign to raise a fund of 38,704,000 pesos with which it hopes to buy four transports, 15 coast guard cutters, 12 river gunboats, 2 tankers and one school ship for officers and a few destroyers and submarines is contemplated.

The committee says its program is admirably adapted to the republic's modest naval necessities and that destroyers and submarines should form the backbone of Mexico's defense against an invasion from the sea.

THE KINDNESS OF "MARSHY"

(By Wickes Wamboldt)

She was the kindest person I ever knew. And one of the most unique personalities. She was a widow. Her husband had left her a dairy and a truck farm which she ran in an apparently haphazard fashion and yet with success.

And she was a charming woman—a sparkling conversationalist. She could have shown in any society. Yet, one day when her men were chasing a huge pig, I saw her grab it by a hind leg as it dashed by and hang on pluckily while the animal dragged her a couple of yards thru mud and water.

She always had a bunch of human derelicts around her who thru their disabilities could not get jobs elsewhere. They loved her devotedly and without exception called her "Marshy."

Dogs and cats flooded the place because she never would have one killed or disposed of. One intelligent looking canine hobbled around on 3 feet. One fore-leg which had been chewed by an alligator dangled helplessly and twisted. The neighbors urged "Marshy" to have the dog shot, but no indeed. She nursed it back to health and thought more of this crippled creature than any animal on the place.

In her great barnyard was an open shed. A big white mule hung there in a canvas sling that was fastened to the rafters above. The animal's legs were paralyzed. There he hung helpless but happy, feeding on the fat of the land, until he died of old age. Kill that mule? No, indeed. He had broken down in her service and she would take care of him.

"Marshy" was every ill once, but not too ill to remember that a was due to come off the nest with a flock of chickens. She inquired about the case from those nursing her. They informed her that the faithless mother had deserted the nest just as the little chicks were about to hatch. Immediately she ordered that the eggs be brought to her. She took them into bed, kept them warm against her own body and hatched out every blessed chick!

Her business success was a constant misery to the wise ones. She conducted her affairs in a remarkably slipshod way, in direct opposition to all the laws of business success and efficiency. She trusted her human derelicts with all she had and they robbed her systematically. Any yet she prospered.

The only solution is that her greatness of soul, her fineness of character drew to her the good things of life faster than she could lose them or they could be taken from her.

GREAT GROWING INDUSTRY

Next to the development of electricity, production of fuel and illuminating gas is becoming a great national industry.

Consuming crude oil and coal in large quantities as raw material, it produces many valuable by-products. There are coke, briquettes, coal tar and scores of chemical materials and commodities.

And what do you think of burning gas to make ice without a motor? The great increase in gas consumption does not include natural gas, carbide or gasoline, but just manufactured gas.

EDITORIAL

WASHINGTON COMMENT

An insignificant news item which attracted no attention, tells the tale of schools in a country in a Northern State, closed because of the need of child labor in the potato fields.

Another equally insignificant news item tells of a county which rejected a plan for a bond issue, the proceeds of which were to improve county roads.

Taken together the two items are far from insignificant. Of our nearly three million miles of roads, barely ten per cent are improved. The other ninety per cent are bad at the best and impossible in the winter. Hauling over them is precarious, expensive, a slow process. Crops must be marketed; to sell crops they must be moved; the more expensive the moving the less the profit; the less the profit, the more money for public improvement, the less for hire of farm labor, the more the necessity to use that labor which is not hired, the children.

There is a very intimate connection between good roads everywhere and education. Indeed there is hardly a subject, an industry, a plan, an activity into which roads do not enter somewhere. But rural education is bound up in good roads, where roads are good, children can get to school. Where roads are good, farmers are prosperous and children have time to go to school, and the schools to which they go are good schools. If literacy is found where roads are poor. Not all poor roads run thru illiterate sections, of course but all illiterate sections of the Nation are supplied only with poor roads! Where the roads are good, the schools good, the farmers prosperous, schools do not close to harvest a potato crop, or any other crop!

When you vote on good roads question, remember the children!

THE FARMER TAKES

A SECOND LOOK

Slowly but surely the American farmer is turning away from the idea that his economic emancipation lies in legislation. He has taken a second look and somewhat more considerate view of the situation, with the result that he is beginning to doubt that any law fixing an upset price for a bushel of wheat or a pound of butter might possibly result in even greater disaster so long as the route from producer to customer is controlled or monopolized. While the agricultural industry may be the biggest business of the nation, it is nevertheless a fact that the so-called "big business" has solved the problem and set an example in modern management that practically controls the biggest business because it controls the distribution. I may also be said in this connection that trades unions have adopted the same methods.

Just as there have been allowed to grow up and flourish those monopolies which have usurped, at least in some degree, the political power which has more than theoretically been reserved to the people of the United States so there have been sedulously fostered and nurtured those industrial monopolies, large and small, which have stifled and made impracticable that competitive industrial co-operation which is an American birthright.

But it is not vain to seek to reclaim that which has been carelessly lost. It is reasonable to believe, if it is the desire of the farmers, for instance, to establish a direct route from their granaries and dairies to the households of the consumers, that they can do this, and that the result will be more beneficial to all concerned than the enactment of any law. That may be easily circumvented or rendered burdensome. The law of supply and demand has come to largely depend on co-operative control, one way or another and the farmer must play the game or continue to lose out.

The Charcoal club of Baltimore has been examining hundreds of girls for models for the opening of the men's evening class next month. They find 99 out of every 100 girls with red hair are bowlegged, and 9 of every hundred brunettes are knock-kneed. The most symmetrical legs are possessed by blonds, yet out of the great number inspected only one met the requirements exacted by the committee.

FINDS FIGHTING LEPEHS

NEEDS BETTER FOOD

(By Associated Press)
Manila, November 3.—A better organized kitchen service with an executive familiar with the science of dietetics at its head, is considered urgent in connection with the work being carried on in the Cullion Colony for the relief of the 5,000 lepers there.

At present the kitchen service is deficient, according to an investigator, and food being unbalanced and inadequately prepared and served with hardly no increase in the expenses of the food supply of the colony, the kitchen service could be improved if a capable dietician were placed at its head it is said. The investigator found that there is need of thoroughly cooked food for the lepers, served about five or six times a day in small quantities.

LARGE NUMBER TAUGHT

IN MISSIONARY SCHOOLS

(By Associated Press)
Chicago, November 3.—Christian education is being given 151,370 native pupils in 3,790 schools in foreign lands, under the direction of the board of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, according to a report made public here today. A survey just completed by the M. North, education secretary of the denomination. Professors and members in the schools number 6,458 the report said.

The schools vary in type, according to the need of the locality. A large proportion are elementary schools, next in number are secondary and other high schools, colleges, industrial and vocational institutes, medical schools and seminaries.

"In many mission fields, as in Africa," the report says, "the standard of living is so low that vocational education is necessary to provide means of earning a living for the converts so they can lead Christian lives independent of the southern superstitions about them. This involves the task of building the foundations for an entire civilization and because of the excellent results obtained, has made American mission stations desirable to colonial governments, and are rated high in educational status by the ministers of education.

Barring an unlucky combination of rainy weather and topping roads the serious threat to Central highway travel between Thomasville and Mebane is a thing of the past. That was the red mud of a portion of Gibsonville streets that afforded the only way around the underpass except a long detour over soil roads. Approaches to Haw River bridge are unfinished but offer no particular difficulty in any sort of weather.

BAVARIAN GOVERNMENT

MAKE STRONG DEMANDS

(By Associated Press)
Berlin, November 3.—The Bavarian government it is learned authoritatively has sent a letter to Chancellor Stresemann demanding the creation of a dictatorship for the Reich based on the Bavarian model. The letter adds that unless such dictatorship is established in Berlin forthwith the Bavarian government intends to send troops now concentrated on the Bavarian frontier against the capital.

YOUTH TO WRITE

ITS OWN CREED

(By Associated Press)
Boston, November 3.—Seven thousand young people, members of 200 junior religious societies of Unitarian churches throughout the country are asked to write, in an announcement of plans for this year's campaign by and with young people, made at national campaign headquarters.

These "statements of faith" will be written at the end of three months' study of Unitarian principles, to be carried on by the local young peoples' religious societies. An outline statement of Unitarian belief and a selected list of books for reading have been mailed to the presidents of the 200 local societies.
