Canada's official picture maker is Lieutenant Ivor Castle, it has just been publicly announced. Armed with a black box and a photographic lens he has been under fire hundreds of times. Pictures which have thrilled Canadian and American movie audiences and filled the Anglo-Canadian newspapers have in most cases been made with-death lurking near.

Back in Fleet street where Castle was a press photographer before the war, he is hailed by his fellow journalists as a hero. Like veteran war correspondents, Castle practiced for the job of filming Canada on the Somme by photographic work during the little skirmishes before the great world war. He faced fire with his lens in the Chinese revolution, the Balkan-Turkish war, the South African war and the Turce-Italian trouble. When the King and Queen arrived for the Indian Durbar, Castle was there to film the ceremonies. But these were mere trifles, compared with the Canadians on the Somme Castle has told his Fleet street colleagues.
