Republicans Dare Not Let Treaty Go There Again, Declares Underwood — Assert They'll Not Take Responsibility Killing It

(By the United Press)
Washington, Nov. 17.—Senator Hitchcock went to the White House this morning to confer with Mr. Wilson over what shall be the action of the treaty supporters toward the resolution of ratification now being drafted.

Before Hitchcock entered the room where he was to confer with Mr. Wilson it was generally believed the President would recommend that the ratification resolution containing the Lodge reservation on Article 10 should be defeated.

Senator Underwood also called at the White House and conferred with Secretary Tumulty. Underwood declared the Republicans would not dare to send the peace treaty back to the Foreign Relations Committee. This was in answer to a suggestion made by the administration that a new resolution of ratification from being introduced after the first one was defeated, thus sending the treaty back to the Foreign Relations Committee where it would die.

The Republicans are understood to have asserted they "will not take the responsibility for killing the treaty."

President Wilson has not taken up the problem of appointing a successor to Glass. It is believed the portfolio will be offered first to Bernard M. Baruch, whose objection to accepting a cabinet post may be overcome.

SPEAKS ON "SOUL OF THE NATION" BAPTIST CHURCH.

Mr. Edward Tomlinson, a lyceum lecturer, spoke to a large congregation at the First Baptist Church Sunday night on "The Soul of the Nation." His discourse was of the most optimistic tenor. He spoke of the labor, political and educational topics of the day. His address was analytical and meaty with thought. Overseas after the signing of the armistice young Mr. Tomlinson—he achieved international fame before reaching his 31st birthday—addressed thousands of soldiers of all the English-speaking nations. He had served during the hostilities as a member of the 82nd Division. He created a sensation in England, and was recognized by literary personages throughout Britain.

Ward Tells How He Plans Give Small a Real Fight for Once

Increased interest here in the First District's semi-aquatic congressional campaign was aroused by the weekend visit of "Hot Stuff" (Hallett S.) Ward, Washington, N. C., attorney, who is after the seat in the House held for half a lifetime by John H. Small, member of the same bar association and resident of the same town as Ward. Mr. Ward declared he was making no idle boasts. However, he said, "Small is a general who has won his every campaign without a battle. He is going to have a battle this time." Ward is going to "cross the sounds" determined to give the champion of waterways everything that a candidate should give his opponent. Small's friends say he is strongest in Beaufort—"our own county"—and Pitt, Ward remarked, adding that he had been making "some friends on his own account in Pitt and Beaufort. In the counties beyond the sounds and divided by them Ward expects to clean up.

HOW TO BEAT THE BOLL WEEVIL IN EAST CAROLINA.

West Raleigh, Nov. 17.—The hog will follow the boll weevil in its advance across Eastern North Carolina, says W. W. Shay, swine extension specialist of the Agricultural Extension Service. Those men in each neighborhood who are the first to adapt themselves to new conditions and take up livestock farming will escape the great hardships that will be forced on the people of this section through the failure of their main crop dependence, cotton, because of the inroads of this destructive insect. In fact, says Mr. Shay, the time now spent in studying the proper care and the profitable growing of hogs will be the difference between success and failure on many North Carolina farms during the next few years.

Mystery Surrounds Escape of Wife Slayer—Believed He Will Try to Get Out of Country—Under Long Sentence

The Free Press Monday afternoon was informed from Greenville that William Kettles has not been recaptured. No clue has been had. This information said Kettles is thought to have escaped shortly after midnight Saturday night. His bed was made up and a chair was lying in it when the janitor discovered his absence early Sunday. The chair gave the appearance of a man lying in the bed with his knees propped up. A reward has been offered by the local authorities. The Governor is expected to issue another reward.

There are no holes in the walls of the cell from which Kettles escaped. The bars are intact and have not been cut in the least. All doors through which Kettles had to pass were securely locked.

The following description is given of Kettles: Six feet one inch tall, 34 years of age; weight about 150; knife wound scars under left ear and on chin, bullet wound scars five inches below left nipple, going through, and on another part of breast, and another knife wound on back where bullet was extracted.

William B. Kettles, sentenced to 30 years in State's prison for the murder last August of his wife, Mrs. Agnes Leggett Kettles, formerly of Kinston, escaped from Pitt County jail at Greenville early Sunday, according to reports to the police here. No clue as to how he managed to get away has been found, it is understood.

When the jailer went to Kettles' cell Sunday morning he found the door locked but Kettles gone. The supposition arose that someone with a skeleton key aided the prisoner to escape. Bloodhounds were summoned, it is said.

Kettles shot and killed his wife at Farmville. The man was employed with a paving concern. He was in similar work here several years ago when he met and married Mrs. Leggett. He made two attempts to suicide following the crime.

In Superior Court at Greenville last week Kettles entered a plea of guilty in the second degree. This was accepted and he was sentenced to 30 years.

An official theory is understood to be that a car was waiting for Kettles and that he will endeavor to get out of the United States.

Kettles has well-to-do relations in the South, it is understood.

Judge Sets Aside Verdict for City in McDaniel Case

The verdict for the defendant in Frank McDaniel vs. City of Kinston, involving alleged damage to farm land by the overflowing of "the Adkin," a creek at the eastern edge of the city, has been set aside by Judge Frank Daniels. The verdict was returned late in last week. Judge Daniels' grounds have not been announced. McDaniel claimed that the flow of water in the creek was increased and accelerated by municipal improvements at a point above his farm. The jury found against him. Other landowners watched the trial with interest, it is said.

BISHOP ADDRESSES EPISCOPALIANS HERE.

Governor Bickett will have a full day mapped out for him when he comes to Kinston November 25, primarily to address a gathering of colored churchmen from throughout North Carolina. He will make two and possibly three speeches. It was announced Monday that the executive will deliver an address to white Episcopals at St. Mary's church late in the afternoon. His subject will be the nationwide campaign of the church. Bishop Thomas C. Darst, of Wilmington, discussed that subject in an able sermon at St. Mary's Sunday night. "A congregation that filled the edifice heard the bishop. Many of his hearers considered his discourse the best he has ever delivered here.

BOLSHEVISTS HATE WEST FACES SEVERE CHURCH AS WELL AS COAL CRISIS; MANY GOVERNMENT, SAYS APPEALS FOR AID

Hallett Ward Tells Local Episcopalians Radicals Know They Must Destroy Altars of America to Wreck Political Structure

Bolshevism in the United States strikes at the church as well as the Nation's political institutions, declared Hallett S. Ward, Washington, N. C., lawyer, in an address at St. Mary's Episcopal Church here Sunday. "The forces of evil are organized. Their propaganda is being disseminated by a powerful secret mobilization. But the forces of righteousness are mobilizing to forestall them. This is no pessimistic address; I am supremely confident that Christianity and patriotism will prevail."

Many of his hearers characterized Mr. Ward's speech one of the finest ever delivered in Kinston. He is known throughout the tidewater section and elsewhere as a profound thinker and an orator. An anarchist is a God-hater, he said. "They," referring to the radical elements at work in America, "cannot raise that courthouse yonder except they destroy this altar," he declared, asserting that American government is based upon Christianity and its precepts. He told how he had received an Upton Sinclair book and started to read it, to learn that it would lead him to forsake his church and its teachings. He had thought of the "generosity" of the person who sent him the book, from a distance of several thousand miles and at considerable expense. "It was the red propaganda at work," he said. "Sinclair, I imagine, was not able to write and publish this book in large numbers and broadcast it at his own expense."

He remarked upon the methods of the anarchists who are directing their red-handed efforts toward the destruction of the Government, and referred to the Armistice Day murder of ex-servicemen in Washington State.

"There is something doing in the church," asserted the layman, who is a member of St. Peter's, Washington. "It is mobilizing for a great fight. Not only this church, but others. The church calls upon every member to do his fullest duty. There is a great power behind the church," he said, a power which impelled him, though he brusquely admitted he had preferred to remain at home for the Sunday, to travel to Kinston to deliver his address. He told of the shortcomings of the church, of the Episcopal Church in particular. Struggling clergymen trying to bring the world to salvation are getting a poor deal, he said. He declared the happiness and prosperity in this section are blinding the people to the danger that besets the Nation. "The church," he said, "has reached out to 'grab' the world and save it," and local Episcopalians and other churchpeople must do their bit. "There is no such thing as standing still in God's universe." Either we go forward or we retrogress, he asserted.

While here Mr. Ward was the guest of State Senator and Mrs. George V. Cowper.

Administration at Chicago Considers Suspension of Factories

TRAINS ARE CANCELLED

Northwest, in Midst Its Winter, Suffers—Strike Enters Third Week and Finds Portions Country in Bad Way

(By the United Press)
Chicago, Nov. 17.—A fuel famine faced the Middle West today. With the strike of the coal miners entering its third week the reserve supply of coal is growing small. The pinch is being felt in many cities. Appeals for coal from Dakota, Montana and the Northwest generally flooded the offices of the regional fuel administration today.

Suspension in general of minor industries is expected today at a meeting of the fuel committee with representative manufacturers. One railroad announced cancellation of four trains leaving Chicago. Several other trains, leaving Milwaukee and other points along the route were also cancelled.

PARROTT'S FATHER GETS LETTER FROM MARSHALL

Vice-President Says It's Not Possible in Words to Express Appreciation of Great Sacrifice Made by Young Naval Officer.

Miss Julia Bizzell Parrott, the sponsor, Monday afternoon announced that the U. S. S. Parrott will be launched at Cramps, Philadelphia, November 25 at 3:30 p. m. All persons here who expect to be present are asked by Miss Parrott to telephone her immediately, in order that she may notify the yard what preparations to make for her party.

When Vice-President Marshall met ex-State Senator George Parrott at the fair here a few weeks ago he "did not express his real appreciation of the sacrifice" of the latter's son, Lieut.-Com. Fountain Parrott, who lost his life in the collision between the U. S. destroyer Shaw, of which he would have assumed command in a few hours, and the British merchantman Aquitania, the Vice-President now fears. The destroyer Parrott, to be launched at Philadelphia in a few days, will bear the name of the young officer.

Mr. Parrott is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Marshall in which he states:

"Indeed, it is not possible to do so in language. The loftiest sentiments of the human soul are those which find their outlet in a quickened heart, a glistening eye and a tender handshake.

"What I do want you to know is that there are many of us who do not think that the glory of America rests upon its material possessions but that, as the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church, so the sacrificial patriotism of your son will render holy the altars of American liberty and will keep undimmed and unsullied our flag.

"It is a great thing to be a good American but it is greater to have been either the father or the mother of a son who had the sacrificial spirit of George Fountain Parrott."
