

Convention Notes.

So the Third party will not try to oppose the Democrats in the State election, but will have a ticket in the field—perhaps Leonidas Polk at the head—to try to draw off enough votes from Cleveland to elect Harrison, supporting these old opponents again at the head of the ticket.

Mr. H. A. Gudgeon, of Asheville, an excellent man and Christian worker, made a fine run for Lieutenant Governor. He may yet see his day for either that place or the one above it.

We suppose the most surprised man who went to the State Convention was Elias Carr, the most worthy nominee for Governor. He had in a brief card stated he was no candidate after his own county, Edgecombe, had nominated him.

The unanimous nomination of Captain Octavius Coke for Secretary of State must have been particularly gratifying to that gentleman, and was no doubt worthily bestowed.

There was peculiar appropriateness in selecting Hon. Thomas J. Jarvis for President of this large and imposing body of North Carolinians. He has had a very extensive experience in public life, and is a politician of judgment and shrewdness, and is especially cool and self-contained. It was a wise selection.

We do not believe the Convention displayed any more judgment, next to the very wise and fortunate nomination of Mr. Carr, than in electing our young and able friend, Mr. C. B. Aycock, of Goldsboro, as one of the Presidential Electors at large, and that too on the first ballot, which showed the high appreciation and sound judgment of the convention. Mr. Aycock is one of the best men of his age in the State, in all respects—natural intellect, cultivation, legal ability, aptitude for politics and the hustings, sound judgment, common sense, and, which is very important, moral qualities.

The preference of the four delegates elected to the Chicago Convention for President is not known to us, but we suspect that two, perhaps three of them, are for Hill. The intelligence of the four is above question. Probably the four alternate names are less favorable to Hill. We congratulate our townsmen, Mr. J. D. Bellamy, Jr., and Col. T. W. Strange, in being one of the four, the former a delegate, the latter an alternate.

We hope that the entire North Carolina delegation will be governed much more by a desire to maintain Democratic principles, fulfill the pledges of the party as to reform and a refection of the villainous robber tariff, than they will be to push any favorite for the first place from any other consideration. Do not help to handicap the party at large with a candidate of very vulnerable record that will put the party on the defensive from the start; or with a candidate who cannot get the full strength of the party and also the large Independent vote in a dozen Northern States.

Put in a man of excellent record every way, with fine abilities, and who will be acceptable to the East and the West and the South. A man of pronounced free silver views will be defeated as sure as the sun shines. He will not be able to carry a New England State, or New York, New Jersey, Maryland or West Virginia. At any rate, such is the opinion of the Messenger, and it has a full right to express its convictions, and with the utmost loyalty to the grand old party of the people, and with an eye single to its triumph in November. This is no time for silence or putting wool in the mouth or in the ears or shutting the eyes.

Mr. Carr, we may add, was graduated at the University of North Carolina. We do not know his age, but guess he is about 58. His nomination is received with great satisfaction.

We take leave to say that neither

Gov. Holt nor his friends have cause to be mortified. They urged him with uncommon vigor and skill for the place. He received a very flattering vote indeed. He was not defeated because he is not an excellent man, an admirable citizen, a true North Carolinian, a sound Democrat, a faithful and wise Chief Executive. He is all of these. His defeat is purely an outgrowth of the very peculiar condition of the public mind—a time of unrest, of unwisdom, of fanaticism, of demagoguery, of crude thinking, of unfaithfulness to bed-rock principles, of intolerance, of ignorance as to political matters. Our esteemed brother in journalism, Mr. Jernigan, of the Raleigh Chronicle, truly says, we think, in his excellent Democratic paper, that "at any other period in the political history of the State, Gov. Holt would have been the unanimous choice of the Convention." He will retire with the assurance of the respect and confidence of the true men of all North Carolina. Of him it will be said—

"He bore without reproach The grand old name of gentleman." —Wilmington Messenger.

NOW TRY THIS. It will cost you nothing and will surely do you good, if you have a cough, cold, or any trouble with throat, chest or lungs. Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption, coughs and colds is guaranteed to give relief, or money will be paid back. Sufferers from La Grippe found it just what they needed and under its use had a perfect recovery. Try a couple bottles on your expense and learn for yourself how good a thing it is. Trial bottles free. J. M. Lawing's drug store. Large size at 50c and $1.00.

Loyalty, Harmony, Victory.

Whoever looked in upon the democratic convention, or participated in its deliberations, must have been impressed with the stern, unwavering loyalty to the principles and purposes of the party in council assembled. He would have seen the influence of that loyalty in the harmony that prevailed; for though there were interests that seemed to antagonize each other, and though, in the advocacy of opposing views and clashing interests there was the ardor of an enthusiastic temper; there was no bitterness no evil feeling, no violent contention. All passion was composed in the presence of the great issues presented to the party and to the people. And as the result of such forbearance and its induced harmony, the convention has closed its work, and that work has secured victory. The people throughout the State will feel that the wise work of the convention has assured victory. Never has a stronger body of men come together to deliberate and devise; never were the real people so genuinely and ably presented. The professional politician no longer stood forth as the embodiment of party principle, or as the sole essentials to success. Impressed with the gravity of the position, with the danger that menaced, not alone party supremacy, but the general welfare, the people themselves, as aforetime in the presence of great public danger, took the helm of the ship of State, not disdaining the aid of the able and experienced politician, but resolved not to be weak, plant tools in the hands of aspiring leadership. Such a body of men has done what only men can do in extreme emergencies. They have determined what had to be done; they have demanded, and they also have conciliated. The clouds have been dispersed, the skies are again clear; and the democratic party once again at full banner within itself, goes forth to win under the prestige not only of its sound principles but of concerted action under the banner of the good men they have chosen for their leaders.

We place at the head of our column this morning the names of the nominees of the Democratic State convention. They are worthy representatives of the soundness of North Carolina democracy, and will not be endorsed at the next election for their personal worth, but also for the great principles of free government they represent.

The shafts of de'fection that may be hurled at them by the enemies of these principles will fall harmless upon the spotless armor of their character, as the principles themselves have ever guided by their unassailed lustre in the darkest hour of defeat.

Now that the convention has spoken let there be no wavering along the line. Its voice is the voice of the true Anglo-Saxon manhood of North Carolina, calling upon that manhood to put on its best armor in defence of the best interest of the grand old Commonwealth we love so well.—State Chronicle.

Training the Girls.

Staying at home as usual, and at work, while the girls are off on excursions, and picnics, and boat-rides, and botanizing expeditions, and showing at garden parties, and festivities of all sorts!

What folly, not only for you, but for them! But they must have some recreation? Certainly, and so must you. Now you just stop and consider that it is not a kindness to bring them up in this way. Life is a very earnest and practical affair, and trying to make it up of picnics and festivals and jollities would be very much like trying to make a meal out of whipped cream. It would be neither sensible nor healthful. No girl should go out more than twice during a week, and not then if she by so doing neglects the most important branches of her education, a knowledge of household affairs, and how to do in the most practical and easy way the duties that she must naturally expect will fall to her lot.

It is almost a crime for you to allow your girls to waste their hours in such a fashion. Perhaps they are having a good time, but some day they may say to themselves: "Oh, dear, how I wish mother had taught me something useful and sensible." And then the botany and the music, the dresses, and the feasts and festivals will be remembered with regret, perhaps vexation and fault-finding.

Did you ever know a woman to regret that she knew how to do exquisitely fine needlework or plain sewing, to bake light, wholesome bread or make delicious pies and cakes? Did you ever know one who was ashamed of her skill in pickling and preserving, or who was unwilling to admit that she could arrange a table, order a course dinner, and if need be, do the carving herself? No, indeed, but many a woman has spent years in trying to acquire the knowledge of household affairs of which she should have been mistress before she was fairly in long dresses.

The mother who fails to instruct her daughter in such branches defrauds her of a woman's best right, the right to a knowledge of how to make a home. Perhaps only a home for herself, but, oh, how pretty and pleasant it can be if the tact, the skill, the grace of the trained hand and eye and taste are there to bring it into perfect symmetry!

In this day and age, woman must learn more than household service, but that she should be taught as she learns her alphabet. She is never too young to learn, but really, as far as practical purposes are concerned, she is sometimes too old to learn. Habits of neatness, thrift, order and economy should be among the first lessons of life. Girls should never know that there is such a thing as habitual disorder. Comfortable system and well-considered prudence are among the gifts and graces that go to make up the useful and beautiful woman. A careless woman can never be wholly attractive. The eye rests at once upon some evidence of untidiness, and the charm is destroyed. Girls, and boys, too, for that matter, should have the importance of personal tidiness and neatness early impressed upon them.

And not only is this imperative, but order and system in business affairs is of the utmost importance. How long would a merchant do business, think you, if he put his accounts down on some loose scrap of paper or on the wall, or undertook to carry them in his head? The idea seems preposterous, but is no more so than many of the prevailing notions on the subject of house-keeping.

There is really no royal road either to domestic or business success. Only hard work and steady plodding industry can make a perfect housekeeper or a capable business man. And household affairs do not take so long to learn, after all, if one only begins early and grows into it naturally. Such lessons should be learned by all girls, whether rich or poor, and, with them, every practical lesson and accomplishment that time, strength and circumstances will permit.—N. Y. Ledger.

Blood Balm Company: My L. Ar. Sis—I take great pleasure in acknowledging the great benefit my wife has derived from your great and wonderful medicine, B. B. B. For two years she was a great sufferer from scrofula, or some blood disease which had lain dormant all her life; we had attention from some of the most skillful physicians in the country, but all to no effect, until we had all despaired of her recovering. Her mouth was a solid ulcer and for two months or more her body was broken out with sores until she lost a beautiful head of hair also her eye-lashes and eyebrows. In fact she seemed to be a complete wreck. Now comes the great secret which I want all the world to know, and that is that three bottles of Blood Balm medicine has done the work which would sound incredible to anyone who did not know it to be so. Today my wife is perfectly healthy and clear from any scrofulous taint, and she now has a three months old babe also perfectly healthy. Very respectfully,

H. L. CASSIDY. For Sale by W. L. Cruse & Co. If the reader will send to the Blood Balm Co., Atlanta, Ga., for their illustrated "Book of Wonders," it will prove of further interest.

He Was Pleased to Have Met Him.

One of our most exclusive citizens fell out of his third-story window the other day, but broke his fall by lighting on the head of a man who was putting in coal.

"I am not usually desirous of cultivating the acquaintance of the lower class," he said as he got up; "but I am pleased to have met you." —Texas Shipings.

If you feel weak and all worn out take BROWN'S IRON BITTERS.

ONE WORD.

I come to you with a small affair that you may need. In England, the continent, and many foreign countries, myself and wares are well known. Many American families on their return from abroad bring my articles with them, for they know them pretty well, but you may not be one of these.

Confidence between man and man is slow of growth, and when found, its rarity makes it valuable. I ask your confidence and make a reference to this journal to indorse that confidence. I do not think it will be misplaced.

I make the best form of a cure—an absolute one—for biliousness and headache that can be found in this year. The cure is so small in itself, and yet its comfort to you is so great—20 minutes being its limit when relief comes—that it has become the marvel of its time. One and a half grains of medicine, coated with sugar, is my remedy, in the shape of one small pill, known to commerce as DR. HAYDOCK'S NEW LIVER PILL. It is old in the markets of Europe, but is new to North America. The price is as low as an honest medicine can be sold at, 25 cents. Send a postal card for a sample vial, to try them before you purchase.

DR. HAYDOCK, 63 Fulton St., N. Y. March 18 1892.
