THE FIRST GUNS

FIRING AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN.

NEW YORK, July 20.—The first decisive gun of the Democratic campaign of 1892 was touched off tonight in Madison Square Garden in the presence of a vast assemblage. The huge auditorium was packed from pit to dome, and as the place holds ten thousand persons comfortably, it is estimated that almost twice that number were present. The occasion that brought this vast throng together was the notification ceremonies of the two great leaders of the Democratic party—Grover Cleveland and Adlai E. Stevenson. As early as 6 o'clock the crowd began gathering about the doors and at 7:30 p. m., when they were opened, the streets about the garden were filled with a pushing, struggling mob which flowed into the auditorium with the roaring sound of a cataract. Never had the garden held such a crowd nor has more enthusiasm been displayed.

The space room was economized to the utmost degree, the enthusiastic democrats, standing, after the seats were filled, in lines so dense that breathing became difficult. The garden was profusely decorated with flags and bunting, the colors of which were brought into strong relief by the brilliant light from 3000 electric lamps. This with the sea of bobbing heads and upturned chairs presented a memorable scene and one never to be forgotten. Previous to the exercises Cappa's band dispensed strains of sweet music to which the huge, perspiring crowd listened in a philosophic manner, at the same time endeavoring to keep cool by swinging fans and handkerchiefs. The platform was placed at the fourth avenue end of the building. Over it was an immense sounding board. In the centre of this were two national flags, placed transverse, and over these, written in incandescent lamps, were the words "Cleveland and Stevenson." The platform had a seating capacity of 650 persons, but it had a thousand on it before the central figures in one of the most brilliant tableaux New York has seen for many months, appeared. The crowd was a patient one, despite the heat, relieving its feelings every few minutes by rounds of applause as some familiar figure appeared on the platform. At first glance, during these periods of enthusiasm, one would imagine the whole audience was composed of men, but after the troubled sea had somewhat settled the fair sex seemed to emerge from it in bewildering summer costumes, smiles and the inevitable fan.

The concert pitch of enthusiasm was struck at 8:15 o'clock. At this time the chief figure in this memorable meeting came upon the scene. Surrounded by a group of notable men the leader of the democracy and of tariff reform made his way to the front of the platform. Col. Wm. I. Wilson, of West Virginia, approached the rostrum and Grover Cleveland rose to listen to the speech of notification.

In notifying Mr. Cleveland of his nomination, Mr. Wilson said: "We bring you to-night a message from the Democratic party. We come as a committee from its national convention, representing every democratic constituency in the country, to give you an official notification that you have been chosen as its candidate for the office of President of the United States. We are also charged with the duty of presenting you the platform of principles adopted by that convention. This platform contains a full and explicit declaration of the position of the national Democratic party on the greatest political issues of the day; but in all its utterances it is merely a development of one great principle, that whatever governments and laws can do for a people must be done for all the people, without precedence of section or grades of citizenship." Mr. Wilson then spoke at length on the duty of the Democratic party and the issues of the campaign. In conclusion he said: "And now, sir, we put into your hands the commission of which we are bearers. It is the highest honor your party can bestow. It is the gravest call to duty your fellow Democrats can make. But we believe we can assure you that there are no 'weak, weary or despondent Democrats' in the ranks of our party to-day, and that with the people's cause as our cause we doubt not you will lead us to a victory in which the principles of party shall gloriously triumph, and the welfare of our country shall be mightily promoted."

Hon. Nicholas M. Bell, of Missouri, then read the letter of notification from the notification meeting. The crowd, when the Democratic standard-bearer stepped forward to make response, again lost control of their enthusiasm.

Mr. Cleveland's Reply.

Mr. Cleveland responded as follows:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen:

The message you delivered from the national Democracy arouses within me emotions which would be well-nigh overwhelming, if I did not recognize here assembled the representatives of a great party who must share with me the responsibility of our mission.

I find much relief in the reflection that I have been selected merely to stand for the principles and purposes to which my party is pledged, and for the enforcement and supremacy of which, all who have any right to claim Democratic fellowship, must constantly and persistently toil. Our party responsibility is indeed great. We assume a momentous obligation to our country when, in return for their trust and confidence, we promise them a rectification of their wrongs and a better realization of the advantages which are due to them under our free and beneficent institutions. But if our responsibility is great, our party is strong. It is strong in its sympathy with the needs of the people, in its insistence upon the exercise of governmental powers strictly within the constitutional permission the people have granted, and its willingness to risk its life and hope upon the people's intelligence and patriotism. Never has a great party, intent upon the promotion of right and justice, had better incentive for effort than is now presented to us. Turning our eyes to the plain people of the land, we see them burdened as consumers with a tariff system that unjustly and relentlessly draws from them in their purchase of the necessities of life an amount scarcely met by the wages of hard and steady toil, while the exactions thus wrung from them, build up and increase the fortunes of those for whose benefit this injustice is perpetrated. We see the farmer listen to a delusive story that fills his mind with visions of advance, while his pocket is robbed by the stealthy hand of high protection. Our workmen are still told the tale, oft repeated, in spite of this demonstrated falsity, that the existing protective tariff is a boon to them and that under its beneficent operations their wages must increase—while, as they listen, scenes are enacted in the very abiding place of high protection, that mock the hopes of toil and attest the tender mercy the workingman receives from those made selfish and sordid by unjust governmental favoritism. We oppose earnestly and stubbornly the theory upon which our opponents seek to justify and uphold existing tariff laws. We need not base our attack upon questions of constitutional permission or legislative power. We denounce this theory upon the highest possible grounds when we contend that, in present conditions, its operation is unjust and that laws enacted in accordance with it are inequitable and unfair. Ours is not a destructive party. We are not at enmity with the rights of any of our citizens. All are our countrymen. We are not recklessly heedless of any American interests, nor will we abandon our regard for them; but invoking the love of fairness and justice which belongs to true Americanism, and upon which our constitution rests, we insist that no plan of tariff legislation shall be tolerated which has for its object and purpose a forced contribution from the earnings and income of the mass of our citizens, to swell directly the accumulations of a favored few; nor will we permit a pretended solicitude for American labor, or any other pretext of benevolent care for others, to blind the eyes of the people to the selfish laws, to gain unearned and unreasonable advantages at the expense of their fellows. We have also assumed in our covenant with those whose support we invite, the duty of opposing to the death another avowed scheme of our adversaries, which, under the guise of protecting the suffrage, covers but does not conceal a design thereby to perpetuate the power of a party afraid to trust its continuance to the untrammelled and intelligent votes of the American people. We are pledged to resist this scheme, because we have not forgotten the saturnalia of theft and brutal control which followed another regulation of State suffrage; because we know that the managers of a party which did not scruple to rob the people of a President, would not hesitate to use the machinery created by such legislation to revive corrupt instrumentalities for partisan purposes; because an attempt to force such legislation would rekindle animosities where peace and hopefulness now prevail, because such an attempt would replace prosperous activity with discouragement and dread throughout a large section of our country, and would menace, everywhere in the land, the rights reserved to the States and to the people, which underlie the safeguards of American liberty. I shall not attempt to specify at this time other objects and aims of democratic endeavor which add inspiration to our mission. True to its history and its creed, our party will respond to the wants of the people within safe lines and guided by enlightened statesmanship. To the troubled and impatient within our membership we commend continued, unswerving allegiance to the party whose principles, in all times past, have been found sufficient for them, and whose aggregate wisdom and patriotism, their experience teaches, can always be trusted. In a tone of partisanship which befits the occasion, let me say to you as equal partners in the campaign upon which we to-day enter, that the personal features of those to whom you have entrusted your banners are only important as they are related to the late of the principles they represent and to the party which they lead. I cannot, therefore, forbear reminding you and all those attached to the Democratic party or supporting the principles which we profess, that defeat in the pending campaign, followed by the consummation of the legislative schemes our opponents contemplate and accompanied by such other incidents of their success as might more firmly fix their power, would present a most discouraging outlook for future democratic supremacy and for the accomplishment of the objects we have at heart. Moreover, every sincere democrat must believe that the interests of his country are deeply involved in the victory of our party in the struggle that awaits us. Thus patriotic solicitude exalts the hope of the partisanship and should intensify our determination to win success. This success can only be achieved by systematic and intelligent effort on the part of all enlisted in our cause. Let us tell the people plainly and honestly what we believe and how we propose to serve the interests of the entire country, and then let us, after the manner of true democracy, rely upon the thoughtfulness and patriotism of our fellow countrymen.

It only remains for me to say to you, in advance of a more formal response to your message, that I obey the command of my party and confidently anticipate that an intelligent and earnest presentation of our case will insure a popular endorsement of the action of the body you represent."

There was one more burst of thunderous applause as Grover Cleveland took his seat and then came the speech of notification, made by Stephen M. White, of California, to Adlai E. Stevenson. The voice of the California orator was powerful and every syllable was distinctively heard throughout the vast hall.

Adlai E. Stevenson listened closely to the speech of Mr. White and to the official notification read him by Mr. Bell. He then stepped forward to the extreme edge of the platform, and bowing to the thunderous applause which again belched forth, he said, in a clear, ringing voice:

Mr. Chairman and Gentlemen of the Committee: I cannot too earnestly express my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me by the great delegated assembly which you officially represent. To have been selected by the National Democratic convention as its candidate for high office is a distinction of which any citizen might well be proud. I would do violence to my own feelings, sir, should I fail to express my gratitude for the courteous terms in which you have advised me of the results of the celebrations of the convention. Mistrusting my capacity fully to meet the expectations of those who have honored me by their confidence I accept the nomination so generously tendered. Should the action of the Chicago convention receive the approval of the people I shall, to the best of my humble ability, discharge with fidelity the duties of the important trust confided to me. Reference has been made in terms of commendation to the late democratic administration. Identified in some measure in an important branch of the public service with that administration, I am gratified to know that it has in so marked a degree received the endorsement of the democratic party in its national convention. I am persuaded that intelligent discussion of the issues involved in the pending contest for political supremacy, will result in victory to the party which stands for honest methods in government, economy in public expenditures and relief to the people. In the contest which we enter we make no appeal to the passions but the sober judgment of the people. We believe that the welfare of the toiling millions of our countrymen is bound up in the success of the democratic party. Recent occurrences in a neighboring State have sadly emphasized the fact that a high protective tariff affords no protection; and tends in no way to better the condition of those who earn their bread by daily toil. Believing in the right of every voter to cast his ballot unawed by power, the democratic party will steadily oppose all legislation which threatens to imperil that right by the interposition of federal bayonets at the polls. In a more formal manner, hereafter, Mr. Chairman, I will indicate by letter, my acceptance of the nomination tendered me by the National Democratic Convention and will give expression to my views touching the important questions enunciated in its platform.

At the conclusion of Mr. Stevenson's speech, chairman Wilson declared the meeting adjourned.

While the crowd was dispersing, Mrs. Cleveland came in for some more honors, which showed her great popularity. Several persons gathered and found where she was seated and cheered her repeatedly. She looked marvelously becoming in a costume of gray, her face wreathed in smiles for the honors paid her distinguished husband and herself.
