CLEVELAND RISES THE BOOK.

Cleveland is President, a Democratic Senate Has Been Sworn In, and the County is Ours Once More.

From the Charlotte News. WASHINGTON, D. C., March 4.—A big snow storm is prevailing here today, but that did not prevent the inauguration of Grover Cleveland as President.

The city is fairly packed, and the wind and snow makes it exceedingly uncomfortable for the visitors. The display of military is the greatest ever known here.

Although the snow ceased at 1 o'clock, the weather continues rough this afternoon, and nearly all the Charlotte visitors will return home tonight.

The merely official part of the inauguration of the new government did not take very long, nor was the ceremony very impressive.

A hundred thousand people surrounded the building without, but within the purpose was to avoid all crowding and to leave a clear way from the Senate chamber to the stand at the east front of the Capitol.

The Fifty-second Congress was in existence and in session until 12 o'clock to-day. The Congress lived until 12 o'clock by the Senate timepiece.

The outgoing and the incoming Presidents and the cabinet occupied the President's room, and Mr. Morton and Mr. Stevenson occupied the Vice President's room. Shortly before noon they assembled in the Senate chamber, members of the House and Senate and Supreme Court being present.

This having been done, the new Senate took a recess, and the procession moved from the Senate chamber to the east front of the Capitol.

The oath of office was administered to the President-elect by the Chief Justice, and the new President delivered his inaugural address.

This over, Mr. Cleveland was ready to go back to the President's room, and from there to be escorted to the White House.

INAUGURAL ADDRESS.

FELLOW-CITIZENS: In obedience to the mandate of my countrymen, I am about to dedicate myself to their service under the sanction of a solemn oath.

I deem it fitting on this occasion while indicating the opinions I hold concerning public questions of present importance, to also briefly refer to the existence of coming conditions.

It cannot be doubted that our stupendous achievements as a people and our country's robust strength has given rise to heedlessness of the laws governing our national health.

The existence of immense aggregations of kindred enterprise and combinations of business interests, formed for the purpose of limiting the laws of finance and trade. At the same time, in our efforts to adjust differences of opinion, we should be free from intolerance or passion.

I am confident that such an approach to the subject will result in prudent and effective remedial legislation. In the meantime, so far as the executive branch of the government can intervene, none of the powers with which it is invested will be withheld.

PATERNALISM.

Closely related to the exaggerated confidence in our country's greatness which tends to a disregard of the rules of national safety, another danger confronts us not less serious.

Our relations with the Indians located within our borders impose upon us responsibilities we cannot escape. Humanity and consistency require us to treat them with forbearance.

TARIFF REFORM.

The people of the United States have decided that on this day the control of their government in its legislative and executive branches shall be given to a political party, pledged in the most positive terms, to the accomplishment of tariff reform.

FRUGALITY.

Every thoughtful American must realize the importance of checking at its beginning any tendency, in public or private station, to regard frugality and economy as virtues which we may safely overlook.

Under our scheme of government the waste of public money is a crime against the citizens, and the constant of our people for economy and frugality in their personal affairs deplorably saps the strength and soundness of our national character.

CIVIL SERVICE.

One mode of the misappropriation of public funds is avoided when appointments to office, instead of being rewards of partisan activity, are awarded to those whose efficiency promises a fair return of work for the compensation paid to them.

TRUST.

The existence of immense aggregations of kindred enterprise and combinations of business interests, formed for the purpose of limiting production and fixing prices, is inconsistent with a fair field which ought to be open to every independent activity. Legitimate strife in business should not be superseded by enforced concession to the demands of combinations that have power to destroy.

Loyalty to the principles upon which our government rests positively demands that the equality before law which it guarantees to every citizen should be justly and in good faith conceded in all parts of the land.

Our relations with the Indians located within our borders impose upon us responsibilities we cannot escape. Humanity and consistency require us to treat them with forbearance.

United States, not only impressively defines the great responsibility I assume, but suggests obedience to constitutional commands as the rule by which my official conduct must be guided.

The editors of the Concord Times, Charlotte News, Lincoln Courier and Shelby Review are applicants for position under Cleveland's administration. They are trying to get some of the fat places under the new regime and think the Democracy cost some shakels and many rural subscribers.

The editors usually help others to get offices, yet seldom share in the feast and often "get left." Will this be that way? They hope not. The Aurora is a candidate for the post-office and the editor of the Review is seeking a different office.
