Washington, D. C. July 1, 1895 The democratic party looks more like a winner to-day than it has at any time since the disastrous Congressional election, last November. The country is daily becoming more prosperous, and, just as the floating voters held the democratic party responsible for the "hard times", which were a natural consequence of the thirty years of republican legislation, the same class of voters will next year give the democratic party credit for their increased prosperity, and in that they will be right. The Treasury too, is beginning to feel the increase in the country's prosperity. The revenues for the month of June were $2,000,000 in excess of the expenditures, something that has not occurred for quite a while before.

But the principal reason why the democratic party is again looking like a winner is that its memors are all directions announcing their intention to get together. The split which many foresaw and others feared as a result of the silver fight within the party lines will not materialize, unless some of the shrewdest men in the party are mistaken in their calculations. The fight isn't over by any means, but it is asserted by prominent silver and anti-silver democrats that it will be over when the National Convention shall have acted upon it, and that the platform adopted by that convention and the national ticket nominated will be loyally supported by both silver and anti-silver democrats. In other words, both sides will fight to caary the convention, and will accept the decision of the conven-eratic party looks like a winner may be found in existing republican dissensions. The republican party in the great states of Pennsylvania, Ohio and New York is divided into two bitterly hostile camps, warring, not for a principle, but for the supremacy of personal bosses. While democrats are hardly sanguine enough to expect the fight between the Quay and anti-Quay factions in Pennsylvania to result in the electoral vote of that state being cast for the democratic candidate, they certainly have good reason to hope that the wrangling between the fol-Sherman and McKinley, in Ohio, and of the Platt and anti-Platt republicans in New York will result in both of those states in the democratic column next year. Secretary Smith, Morton and

With the fiscal year, beginning to-day, many changes provided for by Congress went into effect in the departments. In addition to the material reduction of force in the Pension Office, seventy-six clerks in that office had their salaries reduced in order to bring the salary total inside of the appropriation.

My! what a splutter those lame ducks are making in the pond of the Coast of Geodetic Survey, although General Duffield's gun was not very heavily charged. Every one who is at all familiar with the different phases of official life in Washington has noted the air of proprietorship which is assumed by many of the men who are employed in the alleged scientific branches of the government. These men draw salaries running from $2,000 to $6,000 a year, have been in office from ten to forty years and are mostly well-to-do and some of them actually rich. The majority of them come and go fairly well in the past in muzzling be worth something to you criticism by calling the critics ignorant and accusing them of being unable to appreciate or understand the importance of the work done by the scientific employees of the government, but that cry is beginning to fail and criticisms are becoming more frequent. But to return to those lame ducks and their spluttering. In accordance with authority conferred by the last Congress, General Duffield, Superintendant of the Ooast and Geodetic Survey, has reorganized that bureau, He dropped six employees, two of whom had been in office forty years, and they and all their numerous social connections have begun to yell as though somebody had pulled the plug out of the bottom of the world and that the whole business would be settled on the muddy bottom of oblivion in a few hours. The scientific branches of the government are thoroughly alarmed to discover that their employees do not own the whole outfit. But the government still lives, and General Duffield has no idea of apologizing to or of reinstating anybody. He believes the charges made were for the good of the service, and he ught to know.

His Wife's Presentiment.

Norrolk, Va., June 16:-A Sunday frolic cost two citizens of Norfolk their lives this morning. Shortly before daybreak Dennis O'Brien, Henry Smith, James Dunlary, John Messina, and Harry Story started down the river in a small sail boat on a fishing trip. While passing through the draw of the Atlantic City bridge their boat was capsized and the men thrown into the water. O'Brien lowers of Foraker and those of and Story were caught beneath the boat and growned. The others saved themselves by swimming ashore.

> O'Brien's wife begged him not to go on the trip, saying she had a presentiment last Friday night that he would meet his death by drowning. Her pleadings were in vain, however, as he laughed at her fears and ridiculed her for believing in dreams. Besides a wife O'Brien leaves five small children. Story was a young man and un-
