are seen by some people only away off in some other man's pasture, and never near home.

Look, fellow-man, for something good at home, and if you can find it, dig around the little vine and encourage it to grow—especially if it promises to yield any fruit.

Between the two extremes lies the cream. (Between the man who wouldn't buy gold dollars for 50 cents, because they were offered by a horny handed son of toil, and the fellow who wouldn't buy because he didn't have sense enough to know its good investment.)

Have lived on peas and corn bread to sell lower than others and the labor is sweet. And we expect to continue to underdel all. See me first, last and all the time.

PREACHER, DOCTOR, LAWYER.

The True Function of the Minister, the Physician and the Lawyer. How Each One Can be of Invaluable Service to Mankind.

There was once a minister of the Gospel who had had a great deal of experience and had outlived the times when his fervid evangelical zeal overbalanced his better judgment. He had reached the age of mental development in which good, sound, practical sense had taken the place of a morbid desire to save souls from a supposed impending doom.

One day a man came to him for advice. This man imagined that he was a great sinner and in danger of losing his soul. He went on to tell the minister a long story which revealed very clearly to the minister that the man's concern about the salvation of his soul was mostly, due to a depressed condition of his nervous system.

So the minister advised the man to go home and think no more about his son's salvation. To cease searching the Scriptures for the way of salvation, and to go calmly about the duties of life without any fear or misgiving about his eternal welfare. He advised him to see that he made everybody about him happy. To give his house a good cleaning every morning and a new, fresh bed to sleep on every night. To see that all creatures depending upon him or related to him were made comfortable and happy. Do for one month and return to me and I will advise you further.

This was the minister's advice. He was a good minister—a wise minister. It is a pity the world is not full of such divines.

There was once a lawyer. This lawyer had passed through this phase of life in which he gloried in litigation and found great relish in stirring up discord by encouraging petty quarrels among neighbors. He had seen this folly of legal procedure and noticed that nearly every one of his clients in the end found themselves worse off than at the beginning.

A man came one day to this lawyer to tell him about a grievance he had against his neighbor. He recited a long story of little differences and minute bickerings by which he had been annoyed, and he had now concluded to begin suit for damages.

The lawyer listened to the story and began to give his client some good advice. He showed him the folly of further estrangement. He pointed out the trivial character of complaints. He advised him to go home and lay aside all thoughts of his neighbor's depravity and never mention the matter again for a whole month. If you meet your neighbor, treat him as if you were friends. Don't allow yourself to say a word against him or to do anything unfriendly toward him. At the end of a month you find yourself of the same opinion you are now, may be I will begin your suit for you.

At the end of the month his client was thoroughly ashamed of himself and no suit was ever begun. The neighbors had become reconciled. This lawyer was a good man—a noble man. What a pity it is that there are no more of them in this world.

There was once a doctor who
