

Mrs. A. J. Green is in Charlotte visiting Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Hart. Mr. Herbert James of Hamlet visited relatives at Unionville last week.

Mr. Davis Armfield is in the West buying stock for Armfield & Sons.

The cases of diphtheria in Monroe have all recovered or are beyond danger, and there are no new cases.

Judge W. H. Neal, who is holding court in Charlotte, came down Saturday night to spend Sunday with Mr. E. A. Morrow.

Mr. Warren C. Stack has been appointed Monroe correspondent for the Charlotte Observer and The Chronicle.

Mrs. Lillie Haines of Springfield, Mo., came in Friday night to spend the winter with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Love of Unionville.

Mayor R. V. Houston and Messrs. W. S. Blakeney and Warren Stack have been appointed marshals for the Mecklenburg fair, which opens on Monday week.

Mr. H. Wilson Hagler of Goose Creek township and Miss Emma Jane Eason, daughter of Mr. T. L. Eason of Marshville township, were married in Monroe last Thursday by Esq. C. N. Simpson.

Dr. Watt Ashcraft has been elected second vice president of the Washington Veterinary Medical Association. This is considered quite an honor, especially since he was elected by almost an unanimous vote.

Mr. Chas. A. Turner was married last Saturday at two o'clock, in the parlor of the Commercial Hotel, to Miss Bessie Spake of Charleston, S. C., Rev. Geo. H. Atkinson officiating. They are boarding at the Commercial.

"The Light Bearers" of the Methodist church gave an enjoyable entertainment at the church Sunday night, under the direction of Mrs. J. J. Crow, who had trained the children beautifully. Mrs. H. R. Laney also did valuable service at the organ.

Mr. Durwood McLarty, who has been in Indian Territory for a long time, has come home to recuperate his health, and is at the home of his father, Mr. Geo. C. McLarty. He is quite thin and full of malaria, and says he will stay here long enough to let it evaporate.

Messrs. R. B. Redwine, A. M. Stack and T. J. Jerome went to Charleston, S. C., last week and argued the "Bailey case" before Judge Simonton on the question of whether or not the temporary injunction against the payment of the judgment be made permanent. The judge has not yet announced his decision.

Mr. Peter Arant of Chesterfield, while hauling cotton to Mr. Moses Walters' gin in Buford township, one day last week, lost control of his mules, and they ran away and threw him out and dragged him some distance. Dr. Nance was sent for to attend him and found that three ribs and his arm had been broken, and he had also sustained internal injuries.

The Board of Education met in called meeting yesterday to consider the question of consolidation of the Walker and the Locke school districts in Jackson township. The two districts were united and the County Superintendent, with a committee from each of the old districts, directed to locate and secure a site. All the members of the board were present and other business of a routine nature was transacted.

The English Drug Company is preparing to move down to the old Lee & Lee building in order that their storeroom may be worked over. When this is done it will be perhaps the prettiest place in town. A plate glass front will be put in and the door will be in the corner and open to both streets. Important changes will also be made in the interior, including a metal ceiling. The work is expected to be completed by Christmas. The building belongs to Mr. Fred Helms.

Little Ruth Seales, five years old, daughter of Mr. J. L. Seales, was badly burned last Wednesday. She was in the yard playing with a match and a piece of paper, and caught her clothing. She ran partly around the house in her fright, then to the front porch, where her mother caught her and wrapped her in a piece of cloth and put out the flames. The little girl was severely burned on the side and on the face and had a very narrow escape from a most horrible death.

The county commissioners have sold the bonds which were offered sometime ago and bid off by a New York firm that refused to take them. The sale was made Thursday, according to previous advertisement, and the bonds awarded to The Bank of Union, it being the highest bidder. There were $7,500 worth of bonds sold, the price paid was $7,510, with interest from July 1st, 1903.

Mr. J. S. Leonard of Statesville, who came to Monroe to teach vocal music, received a notice yesterday saying he had been elected by the county board of education of New Hanover county to teach vocal music in the public schools. He will not, therefore, teach here, but will go at once to New Hanover. The plan is for him to make the rounds of the county schools, teaching a week in each school. As there are but a very few public schools in New Hanover, and as the term is seven months, he will make several visits to each school. This is quite a novel idea.

Death of Mrs. John C. Williams.
Mrs. Miriam Williams, widow of John C. Williams who died two years ago, died at the home of her son, Mr. Luther Williams, on east Windsor street, on last Thursday morning at four o'clock, after a long illness. The remains were buried Thursday afternoon at Mr. W. E. Williams', five miles east of town.

Mrs. Williams was born in this county on April 22nd, 1828, and was married to the late John C. Williams on August 10th, 1848. She is survived by three sons and three daughters. The sons are Messrs. E. H., T. J. and Luther Williams. The daughters are Mrs. Ellen Lockhart of Montgomery county, Mrs. D. M. Summerlin of east Monroe township and Miss Annie Williams of Monroe. Messrs. E. A. Jerome of Wingate, J. A. Jerome of Unionville and Robert Jerome of Florida are brothers of the deceased. One sister, Mrs. Eliza Price of Unionville, survives.

Mrs. Williams spent nearly all of her long life near Rock Hill, moving to Monroe only a short while ago to make her home with her son. She was a member of Meadow Branch church for more than half a century. Her neighbors knew her as a most lovable character, always anxious to do something to help those about her. Her monument is in the sons and daughters she reared and in the hearts and loving memories of those with whom she came in contact.

Baptist Church Will be Improved.
At a congregational meeting of the Monroe Baptist church on Sunday last, it was decided to enlarge the church building by the addition of Sunday school rooms and other improvements. The south wall of the building will be taken out and the auditorium extended in that direction, making a large Sunday school room and two or three smaller ones. A new baptistry will be put in and also a choir loft. On the north side a pastor's study will be added. The improvements are expected to cost $6,500 and will be completed next summer. Subscriptions on the amount will be opened next Sunday. When this work is completed Monroe will have another very beautiful modern church house.

Death of Mrs. W. J. King.
Mrs. Daisy King, wife of Mr. W. J. King of Waxhaw, died last Wednesday, after an illness of sixty-three days of typhoid fever. The death of this young wife and mother is particularly sad. She was less than 24 years old, having been born January 29, 1880. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Austin. She was married December 24, 1895. Three children survive their young mother. One is a little girl seven years old, the others boys, five and three. The body was buried at Waxhaw Baptist church cemetery and the funeral was conducted by Rev. J. L. Bennett and Rev. W. F. Watson. Mrs. King was a most earnest, active and useful member of the little Baptist church at Waxhaw. She was of generous impulses and fine character, and a devout christian. She occupied a high place in the esteem and affections of the people of Waxhaw and all who knew her, and her loss, while irreparable to the little children, her husband and relatives, is also great to her community.

Weir-Yarborough.
A few miles from Waxhaw last Wednesday evening, Oct. 14th, in the handsomely decorated parlor of Mr. E. Y. Yarborough's home, Miss Minnie Yarborough and Mr. W. A. Weir of Waxhaw were united in the sacred bonds of holy matrimony. Miss Hassie Smith of Charlotte, a cousin of the bride, was maid of honor; Mr. John T. Weir of King's Mountain, a brother of the groom, was best man; Miss Annie Oates of Rock Hill, S. C., was bridesmaid, and Mr. W. S. Walkup of Waxhaw was groomsmen. The ceremony, an impressive one, was performed by Rev. J. L. Bennett of Marshville, assisted by Rev. W. F. Watson of Monroe. The grand wedding march was played by Miss Cora Yarborough, sister of the bride. Misses Fannie McIlwain, Elma Austin, Lulla Billue and Sadie Locke, and Messrs. John Byrum, Lee Helms, Lee Weir, Edd Austin, Van Weir, all of the neighborhood, and Mr. John Parks of Waxhaw, and a few other friends and relatives witnessed the uniting of this bright and happy couple.

Immediately after the marriage an elegant supper was served. The following day the bridal party and a number of relatives and friends were served an elegant dinner at the home of the groom.

The many handsome and useful presents Mr. and Mrs. Weir received attest the good wishes of many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Weir expect to begin housekeeping real soon in Waxhaw, where Mr. Weir is in business.

Pastors' Meeting.
All the pastors of the Union Baptist Association are requested to meet at Meadow Branch tomorrow, Oct. 21, at ten o'clock.
W. F. WATSON.

Mr. H. M. Furr, secretary of the Belmont school district in Goose Creek—the old Simpson beat, to which "Squire C. N. Simpson" donated $10 on a public library—came in this morning to say that the committee wanted The Journal to say that the people of the district very much appreciated "Squire Simpson's" thoughtfulness and generosity, and they were exceedingly glad to get the library. He says the school uses water out of the same old spring that was used half a century ago, and that the present school house is on nearly the same site.

TALKING WITH THE PEOPLE.

'Squire' McWhorter is Reminded of Old "Crowd"—The joys of the Merry-Go-Round—The House of Crow Has a Coat of Arms—Is the Indifference of Parents the Weakest Point in the Public Schools of the County?
The editor of the Lumberton Argus is a gentleman and a scholar, and also a philanthropist. Hear what he says:
"The merry-go-round is here and the children, big and little, are having jolly times. There is many a nickel spent for rides, but, for our part, we do not think it wasted, as happy memories are being stored against the evil day. A child's ride on one of these dashing chariots or careering horses affords more genuine pleasure than a man's thousand mile railroad trip. The yearnings of a childhood which sought satisfaction from a prancing horse haulie have not been forgotten, and, if we were able, every child within twenty miles should ride, not to satiety, but enough to give each the thrill and leave his fancy brimming full."
This is referred to Mr. G. S. Lee, who with the writer one day last week saw the most novel of all "flying jennies." Some little darlings had secured an old wagon wheel, put it on a stump and were flying around in it in great shape.

The usefulness of the telephone is demonstrated every day in a hundred little ways. Let one who is used to plenty of them go into a country where there are none and he misses them more than anything else. Here is one of the hundreds of ways in which they are useful outside of town. The other night Mr. Tom Ford of this township went up in New Salem and spent the night. Next morning his mule was gone, without having left a trace behind. He 'phoned all about and gave a description of the mule. He could hear nothing whatever of it and began to think it had been stolen. Pretty soon a man who had taken it up rode the mule to Wingate and there was promptly told whose it was and where the owner could be found.

"What do you consider the weakest point in the public schools of Union county?" was one of the questions asked the public school teachers at the examination week before last. What do you suppose was the answer? Almost in every case it was this: "Indifference of the parents." This would make it appear that there is yet need of educational campaigning. The teachers answered correctly. It isn't poor school houses, nor poor teachers, nor poor salaries, nor short terms—it's the indifference of the parents. If the parents were thoroughly aroused the other difficulties would vanish.

Messrs. Crow Bros. are now buying the ingredients and mixing their own fertilizers. Thus they will sell Crow brands. And they are erow brands, too. On every sack is the picture of a pair of coal black crows, billing and cooing with each other. One of the crows is very fat, that's John; the other isn't quite so fat, that's Bob.

The fearful story in this paper of the murder of his three little innocents by a father made crazy by liquor is too terrible for human tongue to tell. Yet the folks who are very much opposed to the liquor traffic which makes possible such crimes are called "cranks."

Science lays her hand upon many of the virulent diseases that have for centuries been considered incurable and they vanish. We have no doubt that she will sooner or later find the weapons whereby to successfully do battle with all of them. Twenty years ago medical lecturers told their students that when their patients contracted diphtheria, they might as well notify the undertaker at once. And now the disease is handled with comparative safety and certainty.

"Now," said "Squire Henry McWhorter of Jackson," "when you go to get anything done in a neighborhood in which all are to take hold and help, like building a church or a school house, some fellows remind me of my old dog 'Crowd.' Crowd was a mighty monthy dog but he wouldn't fight. Sale and True were the fighting dogs. Whenever Crowd saw a strange dog he'd fly out after him like he was going to eat him up. But just before getting to him, he'd look back every time to see if Sale and True were coming on close enough to do the fighting. If they weren't, he'd stop. But if they were on hand, he'd fly in like anything, and then slip out and let them do the fighting. Oh, you want to watch the monthy fellows when the fight gets up."

Death of Mr. Spofford Moore.
Telegrams today announced the death of Mr. J. Spofford Moore, of St. Louis, Mo., yesterday, of pneumonia. Mr. Moore is a son of Mr. D. F. Moore of Chesterfield. He had just gone to St. Louis, where his brother is in the stock business, having been for some time at his father's on account of bad health. The deceased was about 26 years old. Young Mr. E. A. Moore, who is a student at Greenville, came up this morning in response to a telegram from St. Louis saying that the body would be here tomorrow morning.

A PRACTICAL SUGGESTION.

President Blakeney Thinks Monroe is Compelled to Become Self-Sustaining, and as the First Step We Must Have a Commercial Club.
The writer of this article does not expect to impart any new information. He is not setting up to be a mentor for the city of Monroe or anybody. The object is merely to impress a few facts that are patent to the most unobservant. Good results are oftentimes secured by persistent agitation for improvement and no progress can be the result of neglected opportunities. This is especially true, under modern conditions, in the matter of building a city of much stability and in preparing its people to meet the vicissitudes of the future. It is not the presentist, therefore, for any citizen having the good of his town at heart to call public attention to existing conditions with a view to their amelioration or betterment. With this end in view, let us make an inventory of what we have and what we specially need in order to keep abreast of the times.

The growth of Monroe has never been of the mushroom variety, and it is well that it has been so. There is nothing so pitiful in business life as hopes blasted and fortunes wrecked as a result of investments upon false pretenses or fictitious values. No, there has never been a time when a business here might not prove to some extent remunerative if judiciously managed, and there has never been a time when real estate values suddenly partook of the nature so common in mushroom towns. On the contrary, the tendency of the values of desirable real estate here has always been upward, and no one has ever found it moonshine only or a will-o'-the-wisp. True, progress has not been so remarkable as may be pointed out in other places, and there may be some woefully disappointed people here, but the hopes of the visionary are ever fleeting—while the fact remains that much has already been accomplished. How much? It is often said that the progress of a people should be judged by their public buildings. If that be a safe criterion, Monroe can defy comparison with other places of similar environment. Look at her imposing court house and safely constructed jail; examine her power house; visit her splendid graded schools; see how she cares for her helpless people at the county home, and note well what has been done in the matter of churches. And after you are satisfied that the needs of the future, as well as the present, have been kept in view in the construction of public buildings, then you may follow the thoughtfulness to see what a vast amount of work has been accomplished in the building of public roads. So also, the people for the most part have comfortable and airy, attractive homes. Indeed, and in short, when a citizen of this town travels abroad and carefully notes the conditions existing elsewhere, he comes back better satisfied with his abiding place than theretofore and congratulating himself upon the fact that his lines have fallen in such a pleasant little city. Notwithstanding, however, all that has been accomplished in the past and all we enjoy in the present, this article was inspired not from a sense of self-complacency and all-sufficiency, but to sound a note of warning to those who have invested their money here and expect to reap a reasonable degree of profit as a result of their confidence. In view of the fact that many small towns in the territory contiguous to Monroe have lately sprung up as marts of trade; and when we recognize the fact that another large slice of country across the border in South Carolina is soon to be taken away, in the matter of custom, by the advent of a railroad through that section, I say it can but be clear to the most unobservant that the time has come when efforts, and strenuous efforts, should be put forth to devise ways and means for making the city more self-sustaining. Unlike zealous Concord and Gastonia, we must remember, too, that we are restricted in our operations as a trading centre by the powerful influence of our neighbor, Charlotte; and for our own benefit we should adopt the policy that has been pursued in that city. Charlotte is not now much dependent on what is called the "wagon trade." Her daily receipts of cotton, for instance, from wagons are even less than ours, and yet that city goes forward in population and resources by leaps and bounds, while we go along as if by necessity and with a very measured tread. Now, the wonderful growth of Charlotte in the last decade, the fact that she is already referred to as the "Queen City of North Carolina" and the "Pearl of the Piedmont," may be traced to a realization by her people that the city should be self-sustaining. Having come to that conclusion, they put aside all petty jealousies and united, as wide-awake patriotic men should always do, not only in making their own money effective, but in inviting capital from abroad.

They have succeeded, and that is a lesson which we must learn if we would progress or even hold to that which we have.

Now, do you ask for a practical suggestion? Well, the city has been generous in spending money in some respects; it could do no better than, as many times privately suggested, to employ a first class business man to keep in touch with capitalists seeking investment. There will come, according to the usual course, a period of business stagnation, and it may come soon. Therefore, it behooves this city to invite investments and secure manufacturing enterprises here before that dreaded period sets in; otherwise our efforts might prove futile and the attendant expense an utter loss.

Again, there should, of course, be organized and well sustained a commercial club, with handsome quarters, where all possible investors and visiting guests may be properly entertained. And, in this connection, it might be well to say that here could be demonstrated the virtues of prohibition as never before; and the public could be wiser to know that Monroe arrievian water is a panacea for all ills without any of the concomitants usually incident to club rooms.

But whatever practical steps may be suggested or acted upon, no important results can ever be attained unless the people act in harmony with an eye and heart for the common good. If there be any here who are averse to any new enterprise because, forsooth, they do not father it or may not control it, they may be put down as utterly selfish and unworthy the respect due to a progressive citizen. If there be any here who are unwilling to allow a rival in business and are actuated in all their dealings by petty jealousies, then you may put them down as unable to rise to the true courtesies and amenities of business life.

If we be true friends to the common weal and desire to see the city prosper, let us stand together in unity and the future will be assured. Respectfully,
W. S. BLAKENEY.
