Indigestion Causes Catarrh of the Stomach. For many years it has been supposed that Catarrh of the Stornach caused indigeation and dyspepsia, but the truth is exactly the opposite. Indigestion causes catarrh. Repeated attacks of indigestion inflames the muceus membranes lining the stornach and exposes the nerves of the stornach, thus causing the glands to secrete mucein instead of the juices of natural digestion. This is called Catarrh of the Stornach.

bushels, the yield from the sur-rounding land. In this crib was the product of 640 acres of land which was farmed by three lads, the sons of C. A. Christian, aged respectively 9, 16 and 18 years. These three boys tended 540 acres of corn, forty acres of oats and twenty acres of pasture last season, and when they had harvested the corn it was found that they had raised an average of eighty bushels an acre. They used two two-row listers, three two-row sled machines and three two-row cultivators, with fourteen horses. This Mr. Rankin claims as the world's record for three boys. This is not Mr. Rankin's best average, however, as he has frequently averaged eighty bushels an acre the farm over. On one patch of fifty acres the average yield was 118 busnels and by measurement and weight three acres last season produced an average of 140 bushels

He attempted to remove the bagging from the wheels with his left hand when, in some way, the wheels also caught the hand, grinding almost the entire member to pulp. Fortu-nately the belt on the band wheel, which operated the cog wheels, slipped at this time or he doubtless would have been killed. Before Mr. Little's hand could be removed from between the cog wheels it was neces sary to take the press to pieces, an operation that required some thirty
