

IMPEACHMENT OF UNITED STATES OFFICIALS.

Judge Swayne of Florida, Now on Trial, the Eighth Man to be Tried by the Senate.

Judge Swayne of Florida, a district judge of the United States, is now on trial before the Senate of the United States on charges of misconduct in office, the charges being residence outside of the district, contrary to law, charging up to the government $10 per day as expenses when his expenses were not that, and other unbecoming things. The Senate sits as a court of justice, the indictment being brought by the House of Representatives. Certain hours each week are given to the hearing. Of similar trials the Atlanta Constitution says: "Since the organization of the United States of America the Senate has been called upon only eight times to sit as a court of justice for the trial of impeachment cases. The first case to be brought before it was that of William Blount, a senator from Tennessee. The eighth is that of Charles Swayne, judge of the United States district court for northern Florida. During the 116 years of legislative history of the nation, these eight are the only impeachment trials recorded in the books of the library of Congress.

"Senator Blount, who had been a member of the North Carolina legislature, of the continental congress, of the constitutional convention and, by appointment of Washington, 'governor of the United States south of the Ohio,' was elected to the Senate when Tennessee was admitted into the Union in 1796. In the following year he was detected in the effort to wrest the Florida and New Orleans from Spain on behalf of Great Britain. The Senate expelled him from membership summarily on the charge of 'high misdemeanor entirely inconsistent with his public trust and duty.' He was impeached, and the trial was postponed until 1798. After a long debate the Senate decided, in 1799, to dismiss the impeachment on the ground of no jurisdiction, Mr. Blount being then not an officer of the United States. Mr. Blount did not suffer in popularity or reputation in his home State because of the acts charged against him, and for several years after his expulsion from the federal Senate he was presiding officer of the Tennessee State Senate.

"Judge John Pickering of the United States district court of New Hampshire was impeached in 1803 for drunkenness, profanity, and other misconduct. He was convicted on March 12, 1803, and was removed from the bench. Judge Pickering had been a member of the New Hampshire constitutional convention and chief judge of the State supreme court. He was elected a delegate to the federal constitutional convention, but declined to serve. His misconduct in his later life was charged to falling mental powers.

"In 1801, the distinguished patriot and jurist, Samuel Chase of Maryland, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, a man who had served his State and country notably, was impeached for an offense five years old, while serving as an associate justice of the United States supreme court. The case against him was based upon his action in 1799 in the trials of Fries and Callender for sedition. John Randolph led in the attack upon Judge Chase. The case was entirely political, and the Senate acquitted the jurist on March 5, 1805. He sat in the supreme court thereafter until his death in 1811. By some it is held that the prosecution of Judge Chase had a good effect in 'checking the overbearing conduct' of the bench at that time, but the purity of his motives seems beyond question."

LIEUTENANT DABNEY,

Of Washington, Says: "Pe-ru-na is a Substantial Tonic."

Albert J. Dabney, Lieutenant U. S. V., writes from Washington, D. C., as follows: "After the use of two bottles of Peruna I am fully convinced that it is a good remedy and I can conscientiously recommend your medicine to anyone who is in need of a substantial tonic. It is also a very effective cure for catarrh."

It is rare indeed that two bottles of Peruna is not sufficient to convince anyone that Peruna is a good remedy. Once in the household Peruna generally stays. More than one-half our ills are due to catarrh. By catarrh is not meant simply catarrh of the nose or head, but catarrh of the lungs, stomach, in fact, every organ of the body.

Almost every disease begins at first with a catarrhal condition of some mucous membrane. A few doses of Peruna in the beginning is sure to prevent much sickness.

Peruna acts as a tonic because it produces healthy mucous membranes in the stomach and digestive organs. It immediately begins to brace a person up because it enables the digestive organs to do their duty properly.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

The United States district court of Missouri was impeached on December 13, 1830, for arbitrary conduct on the bench in his treatment of lawyers and litigants. The Senate acquitted him. Thirty-two years later, after the outbreak of the civil war, Judge West H. Humphreys of the district court of Tennessee was impeached on the charge of rebellion. He was convicted and removed from office.

"The next impeachment was the first and only one ever brought against a president of the United States. Andrew Johnson, accused of violating the tenure of office act, was arraigned before the Senate, and escaped conviction by only one vote.

"In 1876, William W. Belknap of Iowa, who since 1869 had been Grant's secretary of war, was impeached on the charge of corruption for receiving money from the Indian post traders. Belknap resigned from the cabinet, and was acquitted on the ground that after he quit office the Senate had no jurisdiction.

"In these seven instances only two of the defendants were convicted by the Senate. Three of the accused were acquitted on the merits of the case, and the other two were acquitted on the ground that they were not within the jurisdiction of the Senate sitting as a court."

"No conviction can be had in an impeachment case without the concurrence of two-thirds of the Senators present. Judgment in case of conviction cannot extend further than removal from office, and disqualification to 'hold and enjoy any office of honor, trust or profit under the United States,' but the offender is liable, notwithstanding his conviction in impeachment proceedings, to prosecution in the ordinary courts and punishment according to law."

The Editor.

Yellow Jacket.

A great many people, no doubt, have gotten the idea into their heads that an editor is usually a fellow who never did any real work, and doesn't know how to do anything unless it be to land some undeserving scamp to the skies, write an occasional dun, or pull the throttle lever of a G. Washington hand press. They don't seem to understand that an editor is just like any other man; that he chews long green, walks on the forked end, wears patched clothes, and has to hustle like blazes to make a living for his wife and babies. The Yellow Jacket man has, on several occasions, referred to how he has had to scratch for a living, and perhaps the story has become stale with many of its readers, but this morning we ran across a story of how a brother editor had been brought up which interested us so much that we append it to these remarks:

Some of our exchanges speak of this paper as a farmer's paper. Well, we must acknowledge we have a leaning towards the farmer—in fact the editor is a farmer. We have followed the plow and a pair of bridle mules to turn over many acres of black alluvial soil and bumble bees' nests.

We have chopped off and set up hundreds of shocks of corn when the frost was on the pumpkin. We have waited after the scythe and cradle to tie up acres and acres of golden grain in days gone by.

We have tunneled into the potato hill and brought out bushels and bushels of the rich luscious fruit, with the hoe and the plow handle.

We have turned the grindstone for hours and hours, in the bright summer's sun, until the world seemed all a hollow mockery.

We have chopped down the Jimson weed in all its glory, and saw it fall a withered mass of ruins to the earth.

We have cut stove wood with a dull axe in the bright July sun until we felt like running away from home and becoming a train robber.

We have hid and seek with the razor-back sow in the corn field for hours and hours, when the mud was on our breeches and the water in our socks. We have chased the cow with crumpled horn out of the wheat field, and watched the wobble-legged calf hang on to the teat like a politician to a fat office.

In fact we have done everything that is done on a farm, from engineering a hay rake to fighting over a line fence, and have raised everything that can be raised on a farm from an umbrella to a deed of trust, and why shouldn't we have a fellow feeling for the farmer?

Five More Things To Plan For.

C. W. Burkett to Progressive Farmer.

In last week's Progressive Farmer we considered five things that every farmer should plan for now. There are five more, as we said, which also demand attention. Let us see what these are:

1. Let us plan now to grow what we need to eat. I am confident that the reader will agree with me that the farmer is buying entirely too many things that he ought to raise at home. How is the farm orchard? Too many times neglected. On too many farms there are no farm orchards. Why not prepare for one now? There is scarcely a farmer but that can find a small area that will grow fruit of various kinds. Let us look to the future in this respect then. A few apple trees, a few peach trees, a few pear trees, a few plum trees; all of these as a rule flourish in the mountains, on the sand or the clay soil; you can find some varieties that will do. There is scarcely a neighborhood in the State but that has some varieties of one or more of these fruits that are doing well. Then ought we not to provide as well for the small fruits? There is the strawberry bed, the currants, the blackberries, the raspberries, etc. A few bushels of each of these in the garden will bring delight and nice fruit for every member of the family.

And then the garden: most of us have one, some of us do not. The well-regulated farm has a good garden. My idea is that the garden should be long and narrow, and everything planted in rows. When this is done the one horse plow can be used to take the place of the spade. The one-horse cultivator can do practically all of the cultivating, and thus do away with the hoe, and all of the stooping over and hand pulling of weeds. I think that with the orchards and the berries and these comforts the boys and girls will stay on the farm.

And then, too, we ought to raise all of our meats. No one will disagree with me, I am sure, in saying that all the pork needed on the farm can be readily grown there, and a sufficiency as well for shipment. We also ought to have a few sheep and have lamb and mutton once in a while. The wool will pay for the trouble and the cost. And then I think, too, our State needs more cattle; more cattle as a money industry; more cattle for the good of the farm and for the State. And we ought to have an occasional yearling to kill for the food it brings and for the change in meat it brings to the children and to the family.

2. To diversify our farming and have several sources for our money supply. If we grow simply cotton, or simply tobacco, or some other special crop, we are on dangerous ground all the time, but if we diversify our crops, and have several lines of work on the farm, then we need never fear stock speculators or the trusts or any other octopus. And besides this, we can so utilize our labor that we can keep them busy the year round, and thereby have a better class of laborers, and Grave Trouble Forseen. It needs but little foresight to tell that when your stomach and liver are badly affected grave trouble is ahead unless you take the proper medicine for your disease, as Mrs. John A. Young, of Clay, N. Y., did. She says: "I had neuralgia of the liver and stomach, my heart was weakened, and I could not eat. Fraud Exposed. A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. really a more economical expenditure.

3. Let us plan to farm more intensively. It is neither too late or too early to begin an intensive system of farming, whether we are farming in a small way or in an extensive way. Intensive farming means deep, thorough plowing, and it means utilizing the ground the whole year round. Intensive farming means that in those places where we can, cow peas will follow wheat. Crimson clover will follow corn and cotton; it means that there will be a crop growing both summer and winter; it means that our soils will not wash as they do now; they will not leach the plant food as they do where the soil is exposed such a long season during the year, especially during the winter months. Intensive farming means a new farm. It is good farming.

4. And let us prepare now for the children. Let us not forget that we were once young, and what is mental food to us is not mental food to them; that our pleasures are not their pleasures. While they are young they should be in school. Let us see then that they are in school, and studying those subjects that will be of use to them in after life. To this end I am anxious to see agriculture taught in all of the public schools of the State. It is now taught in a great many, but still some teachers are indifferent and do not give this subject the attention they should. But the State law requires it to be taught, and every reader of this ought to feel it his duty to see that it is taught in his school, and if it is not, insist that it shall be done.

And then, too, let us prepare to make the home attractive for the boys and girls. There is no place where games and sports can be more freely entered into than on the farm and in the country. Let us improve the walks around the home; keep the yard trim and in shape. In other words, let us make our farm homes as attractive as homes can be found anywhere. The boys and girls will stay with us, and will love the home, and will really be better off in the country than any place else they can go. Let us prepare for good times on the farm.

5. And finally, now is a good time for making use of everything that will improve the farmer and his wife. We must not neglect this phase of our occupation. How many a home there is in the city and country that has the parlor set aside for use occasionally! I do not believe in these stuffy parlors. I haven't any use for them. Don't you agree with me that it would be a good plan to convert that old parlor into a library and a reading room for the farmer and his family? A few books, magazines and papers will make it attractive, and the centre of the home-life. I believe in the farm library in every country home. There is the place for the good times; for mental improvement, for home culture, for farm culture.

These are just a few thoughts that come to me at this season of the year, and seem to be worthy of our consideration. If they are not practical, I would have the reader have nothing to do with them. But if they are practical, I feel that he cannot begin too soon to put them in operation.

Fraud Exposed. A few counterfeiters have lately been making and trying to sell imitations of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds, and other medicines, thereby defrauding the public. This is to warn you to beware of such people, who seek to profit through stealing the reputation of remedies which have been successfully curing disease for over 35 years. A sure protection, to you, is our name on the wrapper. Look for it, on all Dr. King's, or Bucklen's remedies, as all others are mere imitations. H. E. Bucklen & Co., Chicago, Ill., and Windsor, Canada.
