

The Death of Mrs. Leland Stanford.

The death of Mrs. Leland Stanford, at Honolulu last Wednesday, is one of the most remarkable that has occurred in a long time. The Charlotte Observer says of it:

"There is a mystery about the poisoning of Mrs. Leland Stanford that adds to the horror of the crime, as bad as is the killing of a defenceless woman. It was reported about two weeks ago that an attempt had been made to poison the widow of the late Senator, and following the publication of the story an authorized denial, in such explicit terms as to really excite suspicion as to its truthfulness, was sent out. Then Mrs. Stanford set sail for Honolulu, where her death occurred Tuesday night. It appears that Mrs. Stanford had taken with her from San Francisco a bottle of bi-carbonate of soda, and on taking a dose she was made violently ill and died before anything could be done for her. The soda, which had apparently never been opened, contained a large amount of strychnine, which, it seems, must have been placed in the bottle before Mrs. Stanford left home. There is no statement as to the object in poisoning Mrs. Stanford. Since the death of her husband, Leland Stanford, she has had entire control of the Leland Stanford, Jr., University, which was endowed for nearly twenty millions of dollars in memory of her husband. The University was under the control of trustees named by Mrs. Stanford and she had charge of the finances of the institution, and since her death nearly the whole of the remainder of the Stanford fortune will go to the institution. It is hard, indeed, to imagine that any one interested in or connected with the University would resort to such a crime, and there is no apparent reason why it should be desirable to take the woman's life. Mrs. Stanford was doubtless cognizant of a good deal more than has been made public. She fled from San Francisco in order to escape her enemies, after an unsuccessful attempt to kill her by strychnine placed in mineral water, but her fate was not averted, for she carried along with her the deadly agency of the murderer, and it was not slow in getting in its work. It is an interesting case, and the solution will be watched by the country at large."

A San Francisco dispatch to the New York World says:

"Friends of Mrs. Stanford say that for months she had been a victim of hallucinations and a prey to mental worries, mostly groundless. It has been known for some time by intimate friends that these hallucinations took the form of fears that her life was in danger from supposed enemies. At one time in rugged health she had frequent spells of illness which in recent weeks she invariably attributed to poison."

"The private detectives employed by Mrs. Stanford's attorneys, since her recent alleged poisoning, have maintained silence regarding the nature of their discoveries, but in guarded statements made by relatives the impression was conveyed that nothing had been found to indicate an attempt to poison her."

"After the investigation by the city detectives had failed to implicate any one even remotely, the theory was evolved that Mrs. Stanford, finding herself unable to convince those about her that her fears of poisoning were well founded, had herself placed strychnine

THE WHOLE SYSTEM

May Become Invaded by Catarrh—Manager Plan's Case.

J. Louis Plan, Jr., Chicago, Ill.

"Last June I had a severe attack of nasal catarrh which was very annoying and debilitated my system. Seeing your advertisements I wrote you for advice. I used Peruna constantly until last November, when the symptoms disappeared entirely."

J. Louis Plan, Jr.

Hon. James Lewis, Surveyor General of Louisiana, says:

"I have used Peruna for a short time and can cheerfully recommend it as being all you represent and wish every man who is suffering with catarrh could know of its great value."

James Lewis.

Wherever the catarrh is, there is sure to be a waste of mucus. The mucus is as precious as blood. It is blood, in fact. It is blood plasma—blood with the corpuscles removed. To stop this waste, you must stop this catarrh. A course of treatment with Peruna never fails to do this."

Hon. W. E. Schneider, proprietor of the Baltic Hotel, of Washington, D. C., speaks of Peruna as follows: "I desire to say that I have found Peruna a most wonderful remedy. I have only used one bottle and am thoroughly satisfied as to its merits. I cannot do words to express my gratification for the results obtained."

Send for free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio.

in the water after she had partaken of part of it."

"Mrs. Stanford's last report to the trustees of Leland Stanford University was suppressed, although previous reports had been given publicly. It is said that the report was so worded as to leave no doubt of Mrs. Stanford's mental state. It was intimated that publicity of the report would be injurious to the university."

"Since the first of the year Mrs. Stanford had been kept in semi-seclusion. She had arranged for several receptions, to take place in her San Francisco mansion, but these were vetoed by her physician."

"It is known that when Mrs. Stanford sailed from San Francisco on the steamship she was very ill, mentally and physically. Up to the time of her departure Mrs. Stanford was haunted by the fear that her life was threatened. The general opinion here is that this state of constant mental unrest, coupled with her weakened condition, led to a sudden collapse."

"The university was closed to-day, and is not expected to reopen until after Mrs. Stanford's body has been placed beside that of her husband and son in their mausoleum on the university campus."

Champion Liniment for Rheumatism Chas. Drake, a mail carrier in Chapinville, Conn., says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the champion of all liniments. The past year I was troubled a great deal with rheumatism in my shoulder. After trying several cures the storekeeper here recommended this remedy and it completely cured me." There is no one of anyone suffering from that painful ailment when this liniment can be obtained for a small sum. One application gives prompt relief and its continued use for a short time will produce a permanent cure. For sale by C. N. Simpson, Jr., and S. J. Welsh.

When is Success a Failure?

When you have lost on your way up to your fortune your self-respect, your courage, your self-control, or any other quality of manhood.

When it has made conscience an accuser, and shut the sunlight out of your life.

When the attainments of your ambition have blighted the aspirations and crushed the hopes of others.

When your highest brain cells have been crowded out of business by greed.

When all sympathy has been crushed out of your nature by your selfish devotion to your vocation.

When you plead that you never had time to cultivate your friendships, politeness, or good manners.

When you have lived a double life and practiced double dealing.

When it brings you no message of culture, education, travel or of opportunities to help others.

When it dwarfs, cramps or interferes with another's rights; when it blinds you to the interests of the man at the other end of the bargain.

When there is a dishonest or a deceitful dollar in your possession; when your fortune spells the ruin of widows and orphans, or the crushing of the opportunities of others.

When the hunger for more money, more land, more houses and bonds has grown to be your dominant passion.

When it has dwarfed you mentally and morally, and robbed you of the spontaneity and enthusiasm of youth.

When it has made you a physical wreck—a victim of "nerves" and moods.

When it has lowered your standards and made you a traitor to all your highest and noblest impulses.

When it has hardened you to the needs and sufferings of others, and made you a scorner of the poor and unfortunate.

When you rob those who work for you of what is justly their due, and then pose as a philanthropist by contributing a small fraction of your unjust gains to some charity or to the endowment of some public institution.

When the world is not the better and the richer for your life, when you have hoarded every dollar you have made, and have refused to help your less fortunate fellowmen.

When you have used others as stepping-stones to fortune, and ignored their existence when your selfish ends were attained.

When in your climb to power you have trampled on duty, friendship, love, honor, patriotism, and all the most sacred feelings of humanity.

When your example has dragged others down; when your injustice and tyranny have driven men and women to desperation, and destroyed their faith in God and man.

When your absorption in your work has made you practically a stranger to your family.

When your children do not look upon you as their best friend next to their mother.

When the nervous irritability engendered by constant work, without any relaxation, has made you a brute in your home and a nuisance to those who work for you.

When your greed for money has darkened and cramped your wife's life, and deprived her of needed rest and recreation, or amusement of any kind.

When your narrow spirit makes you cry out, "What was good enough for me is good enough for my children," and you refuse to give them the education that they crave, and which you can amply afford.

When you have met your children's caresses with repulses, and have denied them the help of your companionship and loving encouragement and guidance during their formative years.

When the dissolute lives of your sons cry out against you as the one who, either by direct example or by complete neglect of them, has pointed their downward path.

Startling Mortality. Statistics show startling mortality from appendicitis and peritonitis. To prevent and cure these awful diseases there is just one reliable remedy. Dr. King's New Life Pills. M. Flannery of 14 Custom House Pl. Chicago says: "They have no equal for constipation and biliousness." 25c at English Drug Co.'s.

Harold, aged five, had met with an accident.

"I'm afraid," said the doctor, "that a permanent scar will remain on your chin."

"Oh, my whiskers will soon cover it up," answered the small optimist.—Chicago News.

A Chicago Alderman Owe his election to Chamberlain's Cough Remedy: "I can heartily and conscientiously recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for affections of the throat and lungs," says Hon. John Shenick, 220 So. Peoria st., Chicago.

"Two years ago during a political campaign, I caught cold after being overworked, which irritated my throat and I was finally compelled to stop, as I could not speak aloud. In my extremity a friend advised me to use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I took two doses that afternoon and could not believe my senses when I found the next morning the inflammation had largely subsided. I took several doses that day, kept right on talking through the campaign, and I thank this medicine that I won my seat in the council." This remedy is for sale by C. N. Simpson, Jr., and S. J. Welsh.

How To Manage Sitting Hens And Young Biddies.

"Circle 26" in Progressive Farmer.

I had a little speckled hen. She was my household pet. I called her England's favorite sure. Her son would never set. But when a dog walked her son, And took him by surprise, I raised her from a friend. Her son would never rise.

As the hatching season is now about on for those who use hens for incubation, a few suggestions will not be out of place. During cold weather gather all eggs as soon as possible after they are laid, keep them in a room where the temperature never gets below 50 degrees.

If convenient stand all eggs to be used for hatching, on the small end or point. This prevents the weight of the egg from breaking through the thin film or skin, which encloses the egg, and filling the air cell which would be fatal to the hatching of that egg.

A cheap contrivance for this purpose can be made of cardboard on some principle as fillers are made for the ordinary egg crates holding thirty dozen. Place one of these partitions in the bottom of a split basket, box or anything convenient, put an egg in each compartment large end up. When section is filled lay old newspapers or cardboard on top, if you have hen feet enough. Eggs packed in this way will keep longer than in any other way, and at the same time will insure a greater number of fertile eggs.

When your hen becomes broody, don't be in too great a hurry to set her, as at this season hens, "the pesky things," are very apt to leave the nest after staying on just long enough to spoil the egg.

After she has been on the nest for at least two nights would be time to set her.

Fill the nest with about three inches of dry dirt, or road dust is better, slightly scooping it out in the center; on top of this some litter from the barn floor or cutting room can be placed (never use cotton seed hulls as they contain grease and close the pores of the eggs through which the chick breathes). In summer time a handful of dry onion hulls added to nesting material is a great thing, as their odor is sure death to lice and mites, the poultryman's worst enemy.

In selecting your eggs to put under hen, discard all small or extra large ones, and all those that are rough and uneven, using those of medium size, smooth and clean.

Never set a soiled egg, for nine times out of ten it will not hatch. During February and March thirteen eggs is enough to put under even the largest hen, as she can more readily cover them, and those on the outer edge will not become chilled. To obtain the best results eggs should be kept at 103 degrees for twenty-one days. Those getting chilled may hatch out chicks, but are weak and puny things that mope around for a few days and then die, and exclaim:

"Since I am no soon done for, I wonder what I was begun for."

During the time the hen is on the nest feed her every other day on corn, oats and wheat.

The Feed her liberally, as "a Young sitting hen never gets Biddies fat." When all fertile eggs are hatched, about the twenty-second day remove hen to good warm roomy coop with board floor, take the little chicks one by one, and grease the tops of their heads with carbolated vaseline (i.e., vaseline with a few drops of carbolic acid added). This kills the large head louse which is generally found on young chicks twelve hours after hatching, and has killed

New York World.

In a stable of the American Horse Exchange five horses, alleged to be high-bred Arabian stallions, are having the time of their lives and, incidentally, in horse parlance, "eating their heads off." They arrived here some weeks ago from Morocco, and at least several of them were supposed to be intended as a gift from the Sultan to President Roosevelt.

Heralded with a blare of publicity the stallions were brought over by James W. S. Langerman, former vice consul to Morocco, as it is understood, at the suggestion of Homer Davenport, the cartoonist. They are now like an elephant on Mr. Davenport's hands, although he is still doubtful if an attachment he has levied on them will hold good.

They owe a board bill of $150 to the stable keeper and the president has declined to accept them as a gift. Nobody wants them, and horse experts have estimated their value, if put up at public auction, at not more than fifty or sixty dollars each.

"It's all to the good for the horses," said Mr. Davenport yesterday; "they are having a good, idle time and they have got us all guessing as to who has the right to put the skates where they belong, with a bullet."

"I asked Mr. Langerman," said Mr. Davenport yesterday, "to import one genuine Arabian stallion for me, and two for President Roosevelt. Instead of that he brought these five old crocks. They are no more Arabians than I am. They are just ordinary 'Barbs' from Barbary; mongrels from the coast of Tangier. The poorest sort of horse-flesh I ever saw."

"Well, when Langerman brought me a check for $200 on the banking house of Brown Bros, before I had looked the animals over, I cashed it for him. It was N. G.—like the horses."

"The President was going to accept the Sultan's gift, but after I had looked the gift horses in the mouth, and elsewhere, I wrote him at once that it was an insult to offer them."

Incredible Brutality. It would have been incredible brutality if Chas. F. Lemberger of Syracuse, N. Y., had not done the best he could for his suffering son. "My boy," he says, "cut a fearful gash over his eye, so I applied Bucklen's Arnica Salve, which quickly healed it and saved his eye." Good for burns and ulcers too. Only 25c at English Drug Co.'s.

Strikes Hidden Rocks. When your ship of health strikes the hidden rocks of consumption, pneumonia, etc., you are lost, if you don't get help from Dr. King's New Discovery for consumption. J. W. Sold by English Drug Co. and S. J. Welsh.

More little chicks than all diseases combined.

Place little chicks with hen in coop, and now listen:

Do not feed them anything for at least thirty-six hours after hatching.

The great mortality amongst little chicks is caused by too early feeding. Nature has provided the yolk of the egg (which they absorb through the vent just before hatching) with enough nutriment to sustain life for at least sixty hours, and if you feed them before most of this yolk has been taken up in the system, you give them indigestion; bowel troubles follow, and your flock diminishes. What the little chicks do need at once is clean fresh water given them in a shallow pan with a board or rock over the pan to prevent them wetting their feet. And they also need a few teeth, to help digest whatever is fed them later; this is supplied by scattering pure sand on the coop floor, and you will be surprised to see how they will devour it.

At the expiration of the thirty-six hours the first few feeds should be hard boiled eggs chopped fine, or lightbread soaked in sweet milk, squeezing out all surplus milk before feeding. Never feed a sloppy mess to chicks, and never feed the chicks on the coop floor; have a little feeding board and on this put all feed. Feed five times a day at the first week; after that, four times.

When chicks are a week old feed cracked wheat or screenings, rolled oats and cracked corn mixed. Continue this feeding until chicks are large enough to take care of themselves. And you will raise 90 per cent. of all chicks hatched if you will follow this method.

But never during any stage of its growth, feed it a wet sullen mess of corn dough.

The Journal has received the following letter:

Gentlemen: Marked copy of the Journal of Feb. 28 just received. Thanks for kindness. Have no kick about your using our thunder; in fact, would be glad to have you use it as often as you please, but when you do would like copy of that issue. The article in this week's Progressive Farmer is much better than the previous one. Hope the newly formed Poultry Association at Monroe will prove successful. Several of the charter members are personally known to me, but why leave out 'Squire Flow' He used to be a hen crank from far back.

Respectfully, "USCLE JO."
