

Women are the Natural Poultry Growers.

A good deal more interest than ever before now attaches to the poultry growing in this county. The better prices that have obtained for the past several years have had a very stimulating effect. And the people are becoming more and more interested in pure breeds, and this tendency will be much augmented by the poultry show that is to be held here this fall. Mr. T. L. Crowell, who has been advertising an exchange of one setting of pure bred eggs for two settings of common ones, is carrying on a rushing business in a small way, being unable to supply the demand for the best eggs. The following article on the superior adaptability of women for the business and the pleasure and profit to be derived therefrom, is from the Southern Poultry Courier:

The articles contributed to different poultry journals, as well as the gratifying reports of woman's achievements along poultry lines, must have convinced the most skeptical that women are pre-eminently fitted by nature and training for successful raising of poultry, whether commercial or fancy, and that the poultry industry is especially suited to a woman's tastes and talents. Woman, as the natural guardian of infancy and childhood, has inherited through generations an inborn tact which finds expression in the most careful and judicious way in which she attends to the wants of the small chick and the adult fowl. It is the small details that must not be neglected in caring for chicks, and it must be very small indeed if it escapes the eye of the poultry woman. Her natural love for cleanliness and her eye for the beautiful qualify her in a marked degree to take a prominent place in the ranks of poultry fanciers. Women should be regarded as the pioneer in the poultry business. For many years man in his supreme folly, looked down upon poultry raising as suited only to women, and of little practical value, only as it catered to his taste, supplied the family with the necessary eggs, or perchance gave the "Madame" a small amount of pin money, thus relieving his own purse. But woman, with her keener sight, saw in the industry more comfort for herself and home, and set herself with very little encouragement, to the task of securing financial profit from poultry reared and maintained under the most adverse conditions. Having succeeded when success meant the overcoming of difficulties now removed by modern methods and conveniences, surely their untiring and well directed efforts must, and should, make themselves felt in the poultry world. Doubtless our grandmothers would have tip-tilted their noses at the idea of a lady exhibiting poultry, but it is no un-

CONGRESSMAN FITZPATRICK Says Pe-ru-na is a Splendid Catarrhal Tonic.

Congressman T. Y. Fitzpatrick.

Hon. T. Y. Fitzpatrick, Congressman from Kentucky, writes from the National Hotel, Washington, D. C., as follows: "At the solicitation of a friend I used your Peruna and can cheerfully recommend your remedy to anyone suffering with catarrh or who needs a good tonic."—T. Y. FITZPATRICK.

A Good Tonic.

Peruna is a natural and efficient nerve tonic. It strengthens and restores the activity of every nerve in the body.

Through the use of Peruna the weakened or overworked nerves resume their natural strength and the blood vessels begin at once to regulate the flow of blood according to nature's laws. Congestions immediately disappear.

Catarrh Cured.

All phases of catarrh, acute or chronic, are promptly and permanently cured. It is through its operation upon the nervous system that Peruna has attained such a world-wide reputation as a sure and reliable remedy for all phases of catarrh wherever located.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice free.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

common sight in these days to see a lady training, preparing for exhibition, and exhibiting her own fowls; and when she succeeds in getting the blue ribbon attached to her pet, she feels amply repaid for all her trouble. And it is a generally conceded fact, that when a woman becomes interested in poultry she generally makes a success of the business. We believe there are very few men who can raise chickens as a woman can, whether it be the natural instinct born in them or whether it is the greater amount of patience and "stick-to-it-iveness" which they possess. The fact remains and it is certainly a very healthy business, as it takes one from the stuffy kitchen into the pure, health-giving air, and takes the mind from the monotonous routine of housework, to the beautiful works of nature, thereby deriving from the business, health, pleasure and profit.

Congressman and Three Others Shot in Prohibition Fight.

This little town, where was enacted last night a spectacular tragedy in which four men were killed and others were wounded, is practically under martial law tonight, with the Texas Rangers, commanded by Adjt. Gen. Hulen, in control. The fourth victim of the tragedy, J. E. Mills, died tonight. The others who met death are Congressman John M. Pinckney, Thomas Pinckney, the Congressman's brother, and Capt. H. M. Brown, Reilian Brown, son of Capt. Brown, and R. F. Tompkins, secretary to the congressman, were seriously wounded. Mills was not concerned in the fray, and was struck by a stray bullet.

The tragedy was the direct result of a prohibition movement in Waller county begun several years ago. The feeling aroused was intense. An election was held on April 20. The prohibitionists, with whom the Pinckneys were affiliated, were successful. The Prohibition League was called together last night to wind up its affairs and disband. A resolution requesting the Governor of Texas to send troops to Waller county for the purpose of enforcing the law against liquor sellers was excitedly debated.

The trouble began while R. F. Tompkins, Pinckney's secretary, was speaking. He was interrupted by Capt. Brown, an active anti-prohibitionist, who used vigorous language, said to have been especially objectionable because of the presence of women in the hall. Brown grasped the lapel of Tompkins' coat. At this instant Congressman Pinckney sprang forward, and as he did so the shooting commenced.

No one knows who fired the first shot. It is said that the Congressman was the first to fall. A number of men seemed to be engaged in the shooting, and altogether about one hundred shots were fired. The shooting could be heard in all parts of the town, and the streets were soon filled with frantic women whose husbands and brothers had gone to the meeting. The presence of the women undoubtedly prevented a continuation of the shooting.

Rollan Brown, although painfully hurt, was arrested today, charged with having fired the shots that killed Congressman Pinckney. He said that his father was under the influence of intoxicants when he went to the meeting, and that he (the son) tried to dissuade him from going. His father was firm in his intention to go, and he followed and took part in the shooting. Congressman Pinckney was shot four times and almost instantly killed. Thomas Pinckney, brother of the Congressman, was shot twice in the back and killed, and Capt. Brown received a bullet through the heart.

Congressman Pinckney had lived here all his life, and Capt. Brown had practiced law here for twenty years. Mills was a farmer, long prominent in the affairs of the county and a prohibitionist.

The death of the two Pinckneys makes the third of that family to be killed, because of the feeling over the prohibition movement. Tucker Pinckney, a brother of the victims of last night's affray, was recently shot dead by negroes who resented his interference with their habits.

Why the Months Have Changed.
Nashville Landmark.

Last week when the wind was blowing a March gale, Mr. W. G. Lewis vouchsafed the information that he had figured out why the seasons had apparently changed; that the discovery was important enough to make one famous, and he was willing to divide honors with the Landmark if it would print the discovery. This was agreed on and then Mr. Lewis proceeded to tell it.

It is well known that in dividing the year it was found that there was a surplus of six hours after apportioning 365 days, so it was decided to save this fourth of a day for four years and every four years give February an extra day. Well, says Mr. Lewis, this arrangement has gone on and that day has been added to February until the months are out of joint. The present month, called April, according to Mr. Lewis' theory, is really March and next month will be April. The windy weather in April makes the seasons seem wrong, but the seasons are all right. It's our count that's wrong and there will have to be a readjustment to get the thing in shape.

A Good Suggestion.
Mr. C. B. Wainwright of Lemon City, Fla., has written the manufacturers that much better results are obtained from the use of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy in cases of colic and cholera morbus by taking it in water as hot as can be drunk. That when taken in this way the effect is double in rapidity. "It seems to get at the right spot instantly," he says. For sale by C. N. Simpson, Jr., and S. J. Welsh.

My Maryland.

In his Southern story, "Bethany," Tom Watson says of the author of the famous Southern poem, My Maryland: "In those far-gone days there was a young school teacher in Louisiana who bore in his emotional nature every hope, fear, sympathy, yearning and aspiration of the Old South. Born and reared in Maryland, loving his native State with ardent loyalty, his eyes, during his temporary exile, were continually and anxiously turned homewards. His immediate environment was that of intense secessionism. 'Southern Rights' was everybody's watchword, and every throb of his heart echoed it. But he was a Marylander. Louisiana had seceded, what would Maryland do? Her sisters of the South were in deadly peril, her help was needed, what would she do?"

"By day and by night the black-eyed Creole-looking school teacher pondered, hoping, fearing, sick with suspense. Why did his home people hesitate? Would Maryland never act? Something in the newspapers caught his eye one day, some vague encouragement, and in a rush of profoundly earnest feeling, he James R. Randall, as true a poet as ever sang, dashed off the famous lines, 'My Maryland! My Maryland!'"

"They electrified the South then; they moved the soul with their burning passion to-day. If ever the soul of a man passed into poetry, it went into this. And if ever deep called unto deep, it was when the fervor of this poem made its appeal to the South."

"Alas! Maryland did not come. It was even then too late. The bayonet pinned her down. The overwhelming moral weight of the 'despot's heel' was already on her 'shore.' But the poem made a profound impression, not only in Maryland, but throughout the Southern States."

"In the whole range of literature, is there, in fact, a more soul-stirring war song? Is there a poem more perfectly lyric in spirit, conception and expression? It would puzzle you to name it."

"Go read the entire poem. Consider it in all the circumstances surrounding its birth. Consider the variety of the chords it touches, and the power with which they are struck. Realize the tempestuous torrent of feeling, gripped within the classic folds of the polished stanzas. It is the sacred fire imprisoned within a Grecian vase."

"He has lived neglected—as Edgar Poe was neglected. When he dies we will give him a monument—as we have done for Poe. And then his exquisite verses will be collected and we will weep regretful tears as we have done over Poe, when we realize what a radiant spirit had dwelt unknown in our midst. After which we will console our consciences by sending additional missionaries to amend the manners of the heathen."

MY MARYLAND.

The despot's heel is on thy shore,
Maryland!
My torch is at thy temple door,
Maryland!
Avenge the patriotic gore
That drenched the streets of Baltimore,
And be the battle-queen of yore,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Hark to an exiled son's appeal,
Maryland!
My Mother State, to thee I kneel,
Maryland!
For life and death, for weal and woe,
Thy perils oh! thy revelation,
And gird thy beautiful limbs with steel,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Thou wilt not cover in the dust,
Maryland!
Thy beseeching sword shall never rust,
Maryland!
Remember Carroll's sacred trust,
Remember Howard's war-like thrust,
And all thy stumblers with the just,
Maryland, my Maryland!

Come! 'tis the red dawn of the day,
Maryland!
Come with thy pennant array,
Maryland!
With Ringgold's spirit for the fray,
With Watson's blood at Monterey,
With fearless Lee and Ashling May,
Maryland, my Maryland!

I hear the distant thunder rum,
Maryland!
The Old Line's bugle, fife, and drum,
Maryland!
She is not dead, nor dead, nor dumb;
Huzza! she spins the Northern snare!
She trembles! She burns! She'll come! She'll come!
Maryland, my Maryland!

—James Ryder Randall.

Mr. Price on His Ear Because the Farmers are Organizing.
Thos. H. Price, the big New York cotton bear, is huffy because the farmers of the South are organizing to control the price of cotton.

Mr. Price in discussing the "relationship between the planter and the manufacturer; its unnecessary antagonisms," in a meeting in Boston last week, expressed the opinion that a large proportion of the agricultural population of Arkansas in agreeing not to sell cotton below a specified price or in limiting production was under the anti-trust laws of the State "guilty of a conspiracy to defraud."

"I call attention to the law," said Mr. Price, "as it emphasizes the inconsistency of Southern protest against trust exactions while the South is today largely engaged in a futile endeavor to create one of the most oppressive trusts with which the world's progress was ever threatened. That this attempt will fail is a foregone conclusion. That the widely advertised agreement to 'hold cotton for ten cents' has already come to naught as evidenced by the quantity of cotton being shipped daily at seven a half cents."

Mr. Price thought it possible that the South which now possessed a practical monopoly of the civilized world's cotton production, might have to meet African competition before many years. "Monopolies, it is well to bear in mind," continued the speaker, "have only been successful and permanent when controlled by a policy the object of which has been to expand consumption through a reduction in the cost of production. The South, in the fancied security of its monopoly of cotton production has been endeavoring to increase its profits by advancing the price of its product."

"As a man of Southern parentage and a close student of economic progression, I have been greatly at a loss to understand the persistence of the South in the advocacy of this economical suicide. I can only conclude that it is in a great measure a survival of the same spirit that led to a war for the maintenance of slavery. It required a war that cost more than the entire value of the slaves in dispute to dissipate the former fallacy; and from the intensity of feeling which has been aroused throughout the South because of a decline in cotton to 7 cents a pound, an economic struggle, which has cost the South dearly this year and promises to cost it still more dearly next year, has been precipitated. It is well to remind our Southern friends that combination in behalf of exorbitant profits has always provoked county combination on the part of those whom it was sought to mulct."

Why Suffer from Rheumatism?
Why suffer from rheumatism when an application of Chamberlain's Pain Balm will relieve the pain? The quick relief which this liniment affords makes rest and sleep possible, and that alone is worth many times its cost. Many who have used it hoping only for a short relief from suffering have been happily surprised to find that after awhile the relief became permanent. Mrs. V. H. Leggett of Yum Yum, Tenn., writes: "I am a great sufferer from rheumatism, all over from head to foot, and Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that will relieve the pain." For sale by C. N. Simpson, Jr., and S. J. Welsh.

You Can if You Will.

In a sketch of the life of Hon. Harvie Jordan the Progressive Farmer says: "He left school at twelve years of age and never attended school over three months any year." And yet this man has been promoted to positions of honor over all the college graduates. This is another practical example of what a man can do if he will. When the present cashier of the Bank of Marshville was assistant teacher at Wingate, The Monroe Journal printed a sketch of him and quoted him as having frequently said to his classes: "You can if you will." Unless a man is made of the proper kind of stuff there are not enough universities and colleges in the United States to make anything out of him. The college that a man attends cuts no figure now. The man must prove what there is in him by his work.

[This is unquestionably true. It is said that a former president of the University of North Carolina used to tell the young men who were thinking of going to other schools, that if they wanted to do anything in law or politics in North Carolina they must have the prestige that came from having attended the University. The college that a man attended truly cuts no figure now, provided that he got the training that comes from systematic study and mental discipline, the consequent ability to use to the very best advantage all the ability that nature gave him, and to see things in their relations to other facts and things, to have a larger horizon, broader sympathies than he would have possibly had had he not gone to college. Such a man may be outstripped in the battle of life by some man of greater natural ability who did not go to college, but he has made the most of his own powers, which is more important to him.—never overlook this fact—the man who did not go to college may have done better, and certainly would have done it easier and with more satisfaction to himself had he had the opportunity of going.—The Journal.]

Gambling Bank Presidents.
New York World.

Not since the fall of E. R. Harper and the Fidelity Bank of Cincinnati as one result of the disastrous wheat corner of 1887 has a sadder story of "high finance" been told than the defalcation of Frank G. Bigelow.

Mr. Bigelow is not an obscure country banker, like poor old Beckwith of Oberlin, who died of the grief and shame his own greed brought him in the Cassie Chadwick case. He was the head of the great First National Bank of Milwaukee. His name was honored in all the Middle West for probity as well as ability. As a former president of the American Bankers' Association he had been the conspicuous representative before the world of his honorable profession.

Yet this trusted financier, upon whose fidelity his trust depended the safety of $15,000,000 of deposits, suffered himself to be drawn into that heartless, reckless gambling in a people's food, a wheat corner, and to fling the money of the people after his own into the pit. That no poor man, apparently, will lose by his mad act, as so many did through Harper's fall, is no excuse.

"High finance" has much to answer for, and the list is growing fast. The exploitation of insurance funds for Morgan's Marine Trust, the very grave scandal of the Shipyards Trust frauds, the activity of New Jersey in issuing letters of marque to financial pirates who rob in other States, the corruption daily unveiled in the Equitable's affairs—these did not need the added spectacle of a great bank president caught wildly gaming with trust funds in "wheat" to enforce the public need, in places of high financial trust, of saner thought, of nobler ideals, of better built character.

A Prescribing Doctor Banished from Charlotte.

The case against Dr. H. Keller, the writer of whiskey prescriptions, which has been before the public for the past two weeks, was called in the Superior Court this morning. When confronted by Solicitor Clarkson with the charges as set forth in the bill of indictment, Dr. Keller arose and addressed the court in his own behalf. He denied that his intentions were to violate the law and had been aware of the meaning of the prohibition laws of Charlotte is now under, he would not under any circumstances have violated them. He reminded the court that he was a stranger in a strange land, unaccustomed to the laws and in no wise able to cope with the able solicitor of the State; that in view of these facts he would thank any lawyer at the bar to help him out.

Hardly had Dr. Keller finished his talk when Mr. H. N. Pharr and Mr. T. L. Kirkpatrick volunteered to defend him.

The case was then proceeded with. A plea of submission was entered and Judge Justice sentenced him to six months in the county jail, provided he was in the confines of Charlotte Saturday.

In other words the sentence of Judge Justice means literally that Dr. Keller will be banished from Charlotte after Saturday.

At first Judge Justice thought one day would be sufficient time allowance, but as the man pleaded for a little extra time to get his goods and chattels together, he was allowed another day.

So wonderful was their effect that in three days I felt like a new man, and today am cured of all my troubles." Guaranteed at English Drug Co.'s; price 50c.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy the very best. "I have been using Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and I want to say it is the best cough medicine I have ever taken," says Geo. L. It should always be kept in the house ready for instant use, for a cold can be cured in much less time when promptly treated. For sale by C. N. Simpson, Jr., and S. J. Welsh.

Black-Draught Stock & Poultry Medicine

This great stock medicine is a money saver for stock raisers. It is a medicine, not a cheap food or condition powder. Though put up in a coarse form than Theodore's Black-Draught, renowned for the cure of the digestion troubles of persons, it has the same qualities of invigorating digestion, stirring up the torpid liver and loosening the constipated bowels for all stock and poultry. It is carefully prepared and its action is so beautiful that stock grow and thrive with an occasional dose in their food. It cures hog cholera and makes hogs grow fat. It cures chicken cholera and roup and makes hens lay. It cures constipation, distemper and colds in horses, murrain in cattle, and makes a draught animal do more work for the food consumed. It gives animals and fowls of all kinds new life. Every farmer and raiser should certainly give it a trial.

It costs 25c a can and saves ten times its price in profit.

Preserved, Kas., March 28, 1904.

I have been using your Black-Draught Stock and Poultry Medicine on my stock for some time. I have used all kinds of stock food but I have found that yours is the best for my purpose.
