The South has taken little interest in the reports of the dinner of the Cosmopolitan Society of Greater New York last Monday night, at which white men and black women and white women and black men, young as well as old, intermingled and talked and laughed on a basis of perfect equality and at speeches which not only squinted at intermarriage but in which it was directly suggested as a solution of the race question were roundly applauded. The South's view of the matter is that if the white participants in those festivities, many of them "leading" people, too, like that sort of association and favor race amalgamation, so much the worse for them but that it is none of the South's affair so long as the proposition is not forced on it. Hence there has been no excitement, no splitting of the air, about it down here.—Charlotte Observer.
