To the man of affairs, the merchant, broker, lawyer, farmer and to the housekceper the daily newspaper has come to be invaluable, although not all of them realize as much. The merchant and broker it keeps informed as to prices, supplies and demands, conditions, new markets, etc., giving him information daily without which he would very soon be outdistanced and put out of business by his more up-to-date competitor.

The lawyer it keeps up to the minute on new laws, court decisions, etc.

tion enables him to market his products to better advantage, keep in formed as to markets, crops, and conditions all over the country and often teaches him many important methods and economies.
